DURGIN'S
BEEF, IRON AND WINE.
— IS MADE OF —
Extract of Beef,
Citrate of Iron and
the Best Sherry Wine.

In this preparation are combined the stimulant properties of Wine, and the nutriment of Beef, with the tonic powers of Iron; the effect of which on the blood is so justly valued. The peculiar feature of this combination is that it

Combines Nutriment with Stimulus.

In a majority of cases, along with failure of strength, and indeed as one cause of that failure, there is an inability to digest nourishing food. Hence it is very desirable to furnish nourishment in a form acceptable to the stomach, and, at the same time, to excite this organ to do its duty. On the other hand, wine stimulus, although needed, is ill borne if given by itself, producing headache, excitement and other symptoms, which may be avoided by the addition of a nutritious substance, such as Extract of Beef.

Iron also can be taken in this way by the most delicate or sensitive woman or child, to whom it may be inadmissable as usually given. Prompt results will follow its use in cases of sudden exhaustion, arising either from acute or chronic diseases, and it will prove a Valuable Restorative for all convalescents.

As a nutrative tonic it would be indicated in impaired nutrition, impoverishment of the blood, and in all the forms of General Debility. Each tablespoonful contains one ounce of the Extract of Beef, with two grains of Citrate of Iron dissolved in Sherry Wine.

Poetry.

For the Patriot.

Wayward Feet.

Out of the home that dreary night,
Into the storm of rain and sleet,
Into the darkness, out of light,
Onward they go those wayward feet.

Out of the home that should be dear,
Regarding not the blessings there,
Counsel nor friends no more revere,
Ignoring every anxious care.

Dazed with glitter of seeming gold,
Free from restraint that sought to save,
Nearing the brink of woes untold,
Nearing a deep and treacherous wave.

Gliding among those mazes now,
Amid the whirl of souless things,
But restlessness soon wreaths the brow,
While to the conscience comes a sting.

Now the struggle of head and heart,
Of home and friends that plead in vain,
What language does the sting impart,
That pierces the soul diffusing pain.

Repentance comes ere 'tis too late,
Tested the coin that falsely shone,
Forgiveness here might reinstate,
The wayward one has wiser grown.

The mind becomes calm and serene,
Temptations, they have lost their power,
Experiences like teachers seem,
They discipline the heart and hour.

Admitted be, once wayward feet,
That hither hath for pardon come,
Forgiveness is it full, complete,
For the repentant one at home.

Forgive! thus saith the sacred word,
Forgiveness saves from keen despair;
Repentence hath pure waters stirred,
Forgiveness was the Saviour's prayer.

Deep in each soul rich gems may glow,
Both worth and beauty may conceal,
'Neath dross and rubbish, and 'neath woe,
Refining fires those gems reveal.

Miscellany.

One Old Maid's Romance.

"I used to think they were all sour and hateful," said pretty Lucy Gray to her friend, Clara Dalton, as they sat one summer afternoon on the river bank, their fans and their tongues equally in motion.

She referred to the old maids, of course; that much-abused class of individuals having become at last the subject of their conversation.

"But since I saw your Aunt Margaret," continued the vivacious little maiden, "I have changed my notion. Your aunt has a queen's name, Clara, and she is queenly herself. She is so stately and sweet, so good and gracious, that since I have seen her, I have been puzzled myself to distraction to account for her never marrying. The conclusion I have come to is, that she could never find anybody good enough for her, but then she is so affectionate and charitable and sensible, that I am not sure that was the real reason, after all. I know she thinks a good husband is a desirable possession, and would be shrewd enough to choose the right man if he offered. And she had offers, no doubt. It's a mystery to me. I would like to ask her all about it, only I am afraid to," concluded Lucy Gray.

Clara listened with patience to this medley of question, logic, and reflection, and when the speaker ended, folded her fan, and putting it against her pearly teeth, bent her head over it in a thoughtful way, making a very pretty picture of maiden meditation.

"What are you thinking about?" asked Lucy. "I was not soliliquizing, and I rather expected my inquiries would receive your attention, Clara. I don't suppose you can satisfy me, though, or you would have done so before, as you have often heard me mystify myself about your aunt, the nicest old maid that ever bore the title."

"Lucy," replied the elder girl, at last, "I am as much interested in the matter of aunt Margaret's single life as you are. Even now, for though I have never heard the particulars (I am not fit to be trusted, you know,) I am sure there is a romance connected with her youth, when she was hardly more beautiful, though differently beautiful, than she is now. There is a mystery about her. I have questioned mamma on the subject, but she always seems disinclined to tell me anything, and looks so strangely that I feel rebuked. Perhaps I oughtn't to know, and I am content to remain in ignorance if I thought it would cause my dear aunt the slightest pain to feel that I had been informed. Sometimes, Lucy, I am almost glad that aunt is "an old maid," because she redeems the class. Not that I am going to admit that they are more disagreeable than others, for I expect to belong to the sisterhood myself some day," said Clara, which was only another way of saying that she didn't expect to.

After more talk on the same subject, the end quite as unsatisfactory as the beginning, the young ladies resumed their books, and read till the pages grew dim before their sight, and the drowsy sounds of the summer afternoon lulled them softly to sleep. Beautiful they looked, reclining on the rustic seat, a book fallen from the hand of each—a picture for any artist. Nor was it without a beholder. Seated a short distance above them, in the green shadows of a large maple, was Aunt Margaret, viewing them with an expression of fondness on her face, tempered by a soft, and I had almost said a smiling melancholy. She had approached, unobserved by the chatting girls, just at the moment they had abandoned their talk for their books, and caught the concluding words of the elder—her beloved and beautiful niece. The words evidently called up sad, and, it might be, tender recollections. Whatever the character of Aunt Margaret's heart-experiences had been, it was plain that they were not wholly unhappy. There was something in her air that expressed both hope and resignation, it was hard to say which was most suggested. She approached the sleeping couple. They began to stir a little uneasily; perhaps it was their dreams, but as they were no doubt of a very pleasant kind, we must conclude it was the flies that troubled them.

"Girls!" What a sweet, strong voice so richly womanly! "Girls!" repeated Aunt Margaret.

They awoke in pretty confusion.

"Oh! aunty, is it you?" they exclaimed together when they saw who the intruder was. "How you startled us!"

"Never mind, my dear; you startled me just before you went to sleep.

Double confusion now seized them; but observing that Aunt Margaret (as they both called her) was smiling very pleasantly, though a little sadly, their fear of her being offended at their conversation vanished, and seeing their opportunity, a simultaneous, "Do tell us your life-story, aunty," came pleading from the lips of the anxious and admiring girls.

Aunt Margaret looked more beautiful than ever just then; a sunbeam struck through a rift in the leaves, and lighted up her face like a saint's; it was not too late yet for her to win some loving heart.

"I will tell you the story of my life—my heart-story if you please—all but the ending; that is to come."

The young ladies looked surprised and more interested than ever.

"Eighteen years ago," began Aunt Margaret, "before either of you had entered this many-colored life, I was living in Manchester with my sister—your mother, Clara; and being then in the hey-day of my youth, and having every opportunity of acquainting myself with the best society of the place, was of course enjoying myself exceedingly. I was called beautiful by some ——"

"By all, aunty," interrupted the listeners.

Aunt Margaret's smile was hardly a disclaimer, and she continued her story.

"I had what are called admirers, whose attentions were so constant that they were at times a little burdensome—even a vain and flattered girl of eighteen likes her freedom, you know, girls—but I do not think I had a real lover until I met a young lawyer—Arthur Graham; and—and before we had seen each other many times, there was a very pleasant understanding between us. It was the old story up to the time our engagement was announced, and preparations were being made for the wedding. Arthur Graham was a noble-hearted man—my family were all pleased with him; his standing in social and professional circles was the best, and a happy future seemed opening before me. But it is not worth while to look with certainty for happiness in this world, my dear girls."

Aunt Margaret paused, and a look of pain came over her features. Lucy and Clara were silent.

"The very morning of the day we were to be married," she resumed, "a terrible event occurred, preventing the expected grand wedding to which our friends had been invited, many of whom came only to be shocked at the news which awaited them or met them, for it flew fast, and profoundly agitated every circle in which we had moved. Arthur Graham, on the day of his expected wedding, was arrested for a crime I will not pain myself and you to name. He was innocent, yet he could not be proved so to the world. The circumstances were so strange and trying, that I fear if I were to narrate them, which would be both unnecessary and painful, you would think it only a hard-wrought fiction, instead of a sorrowful reality. Arthur was a very superior young man, and standing so well in the community, was of course envied and disliked by many, who with greater opportunities had made less of them. With that malignant delight, subdued, to be sure, but just as real, which is a disgrace to our nature, the enemies of Arthur Graham—enemies for no reason of his—saw their chance to revenge themselves on him for his superiority. They pronounced him guilty, and were glad to do it; the whole affair was shocking, of course, but it showed what men of fair pretensions could bring themselves to do, etc., etc. Such expressions, and hints, and inuendoes had their desired effect in increasing the feeling against the accused. Arthur, though innocent, became at last resigned to his fate; to the few who clung to him through all he was deeply grateful, but towards the many who were less charitable he grew at last indifferent — it was despair. Circumstances were against him, and the verdict of the court that tried him was "Guilty." He was sentenced to an imprisonment of twenty years. That was eighteen years ago. This is a terrible story, my dear girls, and I almost wonder that I can bring myself to repeat it. You may in turn wonder how I endured my sorrows; but friends were kind, Arthur was innocent, God is just, and patience has its reward at last. Let me drop the veil over the sad and lonely years that followed. I did not after the first year resign myself to hopeless grief, but found work to do amongst the poor and needy, and thank heaven for it, for it has saved me. Of late, have I not seemed happier to you than when you first knew me?"

"You always seemed happy to me, aunt," answered sympathetic Clara; "that is—how can I express it?—softly happy."

Aunt Margaret smiled and paused.

"Oh, aunt, go on, go on!" cried Lucy, who had caught from the words of the stately woman a suggestion of something glad to follow. "The story is not ended yet there is something more!"

"Yes," was the reply, given in a tone so deeply calm and hopeful, that the girls pressed closer to the speaker. "You think I am patient," she continued, "but in my heart there is a feeling so restless, so eager, that I sometimes think I am a hypocrite to be so quiet apparently, when I am so impatient in reality. In a short time I expect to be informed that Arthur is to be discharged from imprisonment, two years in advance of the expiration of his term, since his conduct has been so unimpeachable during his confinement, that although he is still believed guilty by the majority, we are sure that Government can be induced to pardon him. Pardon him!" she repeated bitterly; "he was never guilty. He has promised, when released, to make me his wife. Unknown to you, unknown to nearly every one, I have seen him frequently during his imprisonment, and we are the same to each other as we were before that dreadful event clouded what should have been to us years of happiness and freedom. I have little more to say just now, my dears, but I pray God that your young hearts may never suffer as mine has; but if any grief so great should fall upon you, ask for the sustaining patience which heaven has, in kindness, given me."

Deeply affected, just as the evening coolness of the day began to be felt, the three left the riverside for the house.

* * * * * *

It was October—the month that is to the declining what June is to the opening year. Clara Dalton and Lucy Gray were again on the river-bank; Aunt Margaret was with them—and Arthur Graham was with her—her husband. He had not been "pardoned" by the Government; but his immediate discharge had been ordered in just six weeks after the summer day Margaret Hartley had told her sad life-story to her young friends, in consequence of revelations made by the parties really guilty of the crime—forgery—for which Arthur Graham had been tried and convicted. The mighty wrong that had been done him both by the law and the world could never be repaired. A great gap had been made in his life by those eighteen years of ignominious confinement. But his heart had been kept alive and sweet by the faithful love of Margaret. It was indeed a beautiful and unusual proof of woman's constancy. My readers will think that I have been telling them an invented tale, and indeed it reads very much like it, but it is truth, and not fiction.

The world lost a "nice old maid" when Margaret Hartley became Mrs. Arthur Graham; but if this story has a minor moral, it is to show that there are, among those whom the thoughtless call "old maids" as if the title were a reproach, some of the best, the gentlest and the most loving of the sex.

SCANDALS. PETIT LARCENY BY ARMY OFFICERS. CAROUSING AT A FUNERAL. THE END OF OFFICIAL MOURNING. CABINET CHANGES.

WASHINGTON, March 21, 1882.

A most disgraceful scandal has been brought to light by General Sturges, Commandant of the Soldiers' Home, near this city. The Home consists of a number of buildings, in a beautiful park, and it is designed for disabled and superannuated soldiers of the regular army. It is paid for and maintained from a fund which has been deducted from the small pay of the soldiers. The scandal consists in the fact that some high army officers have been supplying their tables from the garden and dairy of the Soldiers' Home,—a theft as culpable as if they had taken from the premises of a citizen farmer.

The publication of the so called "cocktail scandal," growing out of the unseemly revelry of the congressional committee that accompanied the remains of Garfield to Cleveland, making it more a picnic excursion than a funeral, has brought the matter before the committee who have been auditing the bills of the Garfield obsequies. As usual the committee will present two reports. The majority report will recommend the payment of the entire amount, cock-tails, wine, and all other refreshments. The minority report, which will be signed by Blackburn, Sunset Cox and others, will contain such criticisms of this bill of expense as cannot fail to elicit exciting and angry debate. The senate committee that accompanied the funeral train are only too happy to think that they are out of the scandal. Mr. Bright, their sergeant-at-arms, refused to yield to numerous importunities to load the cars with wines, brandies and cigars, and gave his charges the barest necessities in the way of refreshments. The arrangement did not suit some of the Senators at the time, but they are exceedingly thankful of late, that, in their case, conventional decorum was religiously observed. It is well understood that Mr. Thompson, who superintended the arrangements for the entertainment of the Representatives, acted upon explicit instructions from influential quarters. But Mr. Thompson himself is not distinguished for asceticism, and it was no difficult task to induce him to supply the luxuries that now reel in the bills.

To-day the six months of official mourning for the late president expires, and certain formal observances that have been kept in army, navy and official circles, will be dispensed with. The President will no longer use mourning paper, and it is expected that with the conclusion of Lent there will be a short but brilliant season of gayety before Congress adjourns.

There are rumors of Cabinet changes, and an apparently well founded report that the name of William E. Chandler will be sent in this week as a successor of Secretary Hunt, to the Naval portfolio. Mr. Hunt has been quite ill for several days, and it is said that Chandler's name is only withheld on account of his illness. It is very doubtful if Mr. Chandler's nomination will be confirmed by the Senate. The Democrats will vote against him en masse, and probably a number of the Republicans will vote with them.

Druggists Licenses.

The following letter written by Mr. H. H. Faxon to Mr. E. Marshall explains itself:

QUINCY, March 13, 1882.

E. M. MARSHALL, Esq., Natick.

DEAR SIR:—Yours of the 9th inst. came to hand in due time. In answer to your inquiry about granting licenses to Druggists, I would say that it depends very much upon the circumstances which surround them. Judging from what I hear of Natick, I should think it advisable to grant sixth-class licenses. If the Selectmen mean to do their duty by looking after the pill dispensers, they can keep the holders of such licenses within the traces of the law; while on the other hand, if no licenses are granted, many good men will sympathize with them and cry injustice whenever they are prosecuted. If the venders of drugs hold licenses and do not conform to their provisions, they disarm themselves, and public opinion is against them. Root out the undisguised grog shop first, and then if the Druggists do not toe the mark, concentrate on them with vigor.

There are some men who are so radical that they entirely lose sight of policy, but I consider it essential in the warfare against rum. When men say that they "would rather die than take liquor as a medicine," it may be safely inferred that they do not believe in future punishment. The great trouble with hundreds of temperance men who clamor for more radical laws is that they seem to think that such laws will enforce themselves. The Druggist problem could easily be solved, were it not that many unscrupulous men open grog shops under the sign of mortar and pestle. They are the ones who talk loudest about "sumptuary laws," but they will sell rum to customers whether drunk or sober. The honest druggist who complies with the terms of the law is not the man who complains. In turning the thumb-screw of public sentiment, great care should be exercised in applying the power. If the pressure is too great the screw will stop, and the head twist off, and thus the opportunity will be lost to do what was intended. The end desired is the removal of this curse; and that law is most truly effective and radical which brings us most nearly to that result.

As regards your inquiries about Quincy, I will say that I think my many friends would advise the Selectmen to license those druggists who, they have good reason to believe, will honestly sell within the requirements of the law, under a sixth class-license, and refuse those who have in the past sold rum by the glass and called it soda. I think this brief letter voices the sentiment of most of the true temperance men in the Commonwealth. The moment I can see my way clear to advance, I shall do so. A good general always tries to hold on to the advantages gained by a victory and further presses the enemy whenever he discovers a weak place in the latter's ranks.

Yours truly,
HENRY H. FAXON.

ATLANTIC, March 22, 1882.

Mr. Editor:—

In your issue of Sept. 3, 1881, there appeared an article under the head of Atlantic, which was signed by a young Divine, and referred to certain acts of the Selectmen regarding appointments as being conducted on the Star Route principal. The writer, after taking to task the town fathers for not doing official business as he would have them do it, and for appointing and deposing officers as from his unbiased(?) standpoint would seem most feasible, proceeds to point out to them their duty and to show them that a man could be found who was upright and unsophisticated, which he does in a most voluble panegyric, on the manly qualities of the party referred to.

Now, Mr. Editor, I would like to inquire of this "upright" individual or his enthusiastic champion, how it is that he has not yet paid for some of the labor of removing snow, which was done on Squantum road Feb. 9, of the present year? Order No. 3 on the town records in the Selectmen's room, shows that the money was paid over to him Feb. 11, and up to this time some of the men who worked under him have not been paid. It is alleged that it has been demanded by the parties who did the work. Why is not the money paid over to those entitled to it? Would a Star Route appellation be appropriate in this case, or does it savor more of a case known as Credit Mobilier?

Neponset Bridge.

We have great respect for this old bridge notwithstanding it took two cents from our scanty purse when we went over to Gov. Curtis' mansion house in Roxbury, in 1824, to see Gen. Lafayette, and also on the fourth of July and "lection days," except as was sometimes the case, we got a ride over one way through the kindness of Quincy butchers, now called market men.

The writer of this for more than a quarter of a century had charge of the repairs on this bridge, first under the care of Mr. George W. Beals, afterwards the late Josiah Quincy, treasurers of Neponset Bridge Corporation, and again under charge of the Commissioners of Norfolk County, and subsequently the towns of Quincy and Dorchester, until the deplorable event of the annexation of the latter town to Boston. We remember the great inconvenience and loss of business to the residents of Atlantic and Neponset, particularly the latter place, when the Boston part of the bridge was rebuilt, and do not wish to see them put to the same inconvenience again very soon, therefore we would recommend the Road Commissioners of Quincy to have the old weather beaten sign, placed upon the bridge by the County Commissioners near twenty years ago, repainted, which read as follows:—

NEPONSET BRIDGE.

"The weight of the carriage and the load thereon, upon this bridge must not exceed six tons.

☞ The statute must be strictly complied with."

SATURDAY, APRIL 1, 1882.

G. A. R. Sociable.

On Thursday evening, the Grand Army with lady friends and invited guests held a sociable at their hall. An entertainment was furnished, previous to which the ladies presented the Post with two elegant guidons, of purple silk, edged with gilt fringe and upon its surface in gilt letters "Post 88, G. A. R.," these are used to direct in marching. Mrs. Elwood Litchfield made the presentation speech which is as follows:—

Mr. Holt, Commander of Post 88,—The lady friends of the Grand Army wishing to show their esteem, this night present you and comrades of Post 88, these flags, and as you use them may you not think of the hardships endured for this beloved land but of the glorious victory won through your efforts, which gave to us free and undivided States.

Commander Holt then responded in a brief and appropriate speech.

Lady friends of the Grand Army,—In behalf of the comrades of Paul Revere Post 88, for these beautiful presents, I most cordially extend to you our sincere thanks. These guidons have long been needed in this organization and now coming through the friendship and generosity of our lady friends, will be appreciated and kept more sacred by the comrades of this Post than if purchased by us. Again I thank you and may the pleasant friendship ever remain, which now exists between the ladies of Quincy and the comrades of Post 88.

Immediately after the presentation the following programme was given:—Instrumental music by Mr. C. T. Reed; Readings, "The Blue Coat of the Soldier," and "Widow Bedott's Poetry," by Miss Elsie Russell.

The company was then taken in charge by the supper committee, who we must say did not neglect to furnish enough edibles of the first quality, for a whole regiment. Supper completed the Commander called on Comrades Monk, Mellen and Holbrook, of Post 87 of Braintree, who made short speeches. The remainder of the evening was spent in singing and social converse.

It is Reported

That Quincy is waking up.

That Monday was generally observed as a holiday in Quincy.

That the business at the adjourned town meeting was done in a quick business-like manner.

That Henry H. Faxon spoke forty-two times.

That the taxes will be higher this year.

That Hon. John Quincy Adams makes an excellent Moderator.

That nearly all the recommendations of the Committee on Warrant were adopted.

That there is an alarming increase of children in the Willard school district.

That West Quincy voted solid against the Park act.

That the friends of the Park Act had grave doubts whether they would carry the day, until the result was declared.

That now a public park in Quincy is a thing of the near future.

That it is the intention of the town to give the prohibitory law a fair trial.

That the Town Hall was much too small to accommodate the voters.

That the present school system will be continued.

That the ex-W. M. French Hose Co. wish to be the company connected with the new steamer.

That it should have been voted to extend the pipes connected with the steam pump, as per article.

That the town seal is very appropriate.

That Quincy's boundary, as regards Milton, should be straightened.

That each man should shovel the snow from the sidewalk in front of his house and

That the town should not shovel any snow from sidewalks except in front of town buildings and lands.

ATTEMPTED ROBBERY. An attempt was made between the hours of twelve and one Tuesday night to enter the clothing store of Mr. George Saville, by breaking one of the large panes of glass in a front window. The rascally act was discovered by Mr. H. O. T. Wilkins while passing the store, who saw a hat lying on the sidewalk and noticed that the window was also broken. He was accompanying his wife's sister to her home and on his return from her residence proceeded immediately to Mr. Charles N. Ditson's house and the two gentlemen went to Mr. Frank A. Spear's store and awakened him and the three proceeded to investigate. They entered the store but found no one. They immediately notified Mr. Saville, who accompanied them to the store and things were made secure. The appearance of things in the window indicates that an attempt was made to rob the store, and it might possibly have been that an accomplice saw Mr. Wilkins approaching and gave the alarm and the rascals made their escape.

MISSIONARY MEETING. The annual meeting of the Norfolk and Pilgrim Branch of the Woman's Board of Missions, will be held in the Chapel of the Congregational Church, (Rev. Mr. Norton's), Tuesday, April 4th, at 10 o'clock, A. M. and 1.30 P. M. The meeting is expected to be one of very great interest, and all are cordially invited. Reports will be read from auxiliaries and circles. Also papers relating to the work and missionary letters. Addresses will be given by Miss Morris from South Africa; Miss Child of Boston; and Miss Shepard from the Dakota Home, who will be accompanied by a pupil, a little Indian girl, who will take part in the exercises. Mrs. F. P. Chapin, president of the Branch, will preside.

SURPRISE PARTY. On Wednesday evening about fifty friends from West Quincy and Quincy, gave Mrs. E. E. Hall a surprise party at her residence on Washington street. During the evening Mrs. H. was presented with an elegant case of wax flowers, beautifully mounted on velvet. The evening passed very pleasantly with music, games, etc., after which a bountiful repast was served. The party dispersed at a late hour, after bidding the surprised good night, and with wishes for many pleasant returns of the occasion.

STATION AGENTS. Mr. Joseph R. Hathaway, the station agent at the Quincy station, has been removed to South Braintree; and Mr. Albert G. Coffin of Wollaston has been appointed to fill the vacancy as day agent, and Mr. N. B. Furnald as night agent.

Brief Locals.

☞ Palm Sunday to-morrow. Next Sunday is Easter.

☞ Rossini's "Stabat Mater" will be sung at St. John's Church to-morrow evening.

☞ Some of the finest and most artistic monumental work done in this country can be seen at McGrath Bros's. All work entrusted to them is done in the most complete and satisfactory manner.

☞ At the last meeting of the F. F. F's, on the 17th ult., it was voted to have the usual summer excursion, and a committee was appointed. A trip is proposed on the water, similar to the enjoyable one last year.

☞ Mr. Peter McConarty had his hand badly injured last Saturday by a large splinter from a broken shaft, occasioned by a sudden start of his horse. We are pleased to say that under skilful treatment the wound is healing.

☞ A. H. Gilson, D. D. S., of this town, a recent graduate of the Dental College, would be pleased to have his friends give him a call at his office 150 Tremont st., Boston, where he is prepared to do some very excellent work. Read his card.

☞ Mr. Henry H. Faxon, so says the Boston Journal, is reported to have indulged in some very powerful language when he found that Speaker Noyes of the House, did not vote on the Prohibitory bill, and therefore let it be defeated by a tie vote.

☞ Rev. E. A. Perry, pastor of the Universalist Church, in Quincy, preached his farewell discourse on Sunday last to a large audience. Paul Revere Post, of which the pastor was a member, was present. Mr. Perry and family leave to-day for their new homes at Palmer, Mass., much to the regret of many warm friends, they have won in this place.

☞ Miss Nellie R. Washburn gave a farewell party to her many friends on Tuesday evening, preparatory to her removal to Chicago. Dancing and games furnished sport for the evening, and were interspersed with music. A bountiful supper was served at ten o'clock, and Miss Nellie was presented with an elegant pearl ring. The party broke up about twelve o'clock, and all left for home in good spirits, wishing Nellie much happiness in her new home in the West.

Our new school master is no longer a bachelor; he was married Wednesday.

Rev. G. W. Bosworth, D. D., will preach at the Sailors' Snug Harbor to-morrow morning and at the Baptist Chapel in the afternoon.

Capt. Schuyler Penney arrived home Tuesday morning of last week; his vessel rode out the late easterly gale off the back side of the cape. Capt. Penney pronounces the past winter to be the most severe he ever experienced.

The annual parish meeting was held in the C. U. Church, Monday evening, March 20th. Mr. H. M. Federhen was chosen moderator. There were five articles in the warrant, action upon which resulted as follows: Clerk, treasurer and collector, Mr. J. L. Whiton; parish committee, T. H. Newcomb, Alfred Sampson, Walton Hall. Voted,—to invite Rev. G. H. Hastings to remain another year; to raise $1150 for parochial purposes; to appoint a committee of five ladies to assist the parish committee in raising money; to adjourn to Tuesday evening, March 28th.

The people will be pleased to know that Rev. G. H. Hasting has consented to remain as pastor of the Christian Union Church another year. His earnestness in the pulpit and his geniality out of it, have made him a general favorite with young and old. We hope the associations of the coming year may be as pleasant as those of the past have been.

The vestry of the Baptist Chapel was crowded Thursday evening by an audience who were well entertained by a varied programme consisting of tableaux, wax (?) figures and singing. Refreshments were served after the completion of the exercises.

The sociable of the Ladies' Aid Society of the C. U. Church was held Thursday evening at the residence of Mrs. Dr. Harlow. It being the annual meeting, the officers for the ensuing year were chosen, and a full list will be given in next week's PATRIOT.

The Vulture Engine Company will hold its regular monthly meeting Monday evening.

The temperance people wonder how Mr. Faxon feels over the deciding (?) vote in the House.

The fire alarm telegraph so often advocated in the Point items has wisely been adopted by the town; that it will more than meet the anticipations of the people, is sure to be the fact.

The rubber overcoats stolen from the J. Q. Adams engine house a short time since, were found last Sunday by Mr. F. H. Smith, under an old barrel, back of his hen house.

At an adjourned parish meeting held Tuesday evening, in the C. U. Church, Mr. John Federhen 3d, was elected a member of the parish committee in place of Mr. Hall, who declined to retain the position. A committee was appointed to report the probable cost of building a vestry.

The Quincy Point Temperance Association held its regular meeting Wednesday evening; several selections were read. There will be another meeting next Wednesday evening, among other features there will be a lesson in astronomy given on the blackboard.

The Ladies' Benevolent Society met Wednesday afternoon at Mrs. H. M. Federhen's, and after doing considerable work, adjourned to meet at the same time and place in one week.

Wednesday evening there was a rehearsal at the residence of Mr. Marks, of the cantata "Under the Palms," which is to be given shortly in the Baptist Chapel by home talent.

Mr. T. B. Thomas has become the sole proprietor of the patent tree protector which bears his name.

There are quite a number of new houses being built in our district.

Quite a number of citizens at the Centre of the town, thought that it was the West District alone that opposed the Park Question. Not as many opposed as they thought, and we think we are not the only ones through the town that voted "No," on this question.

The revival meetings being held at the M. E. Church will close on Friday night.

The firm of Badger Bros., are engaged at present building an extensive hoisting machine for the quarry of T. H. & J. Q. McDonnell, situated on the Common near that of Barker & Sons. It is one of the finest machines of the kind ever construsted, and will be in full running order by the middle of April. It is well known that this class of machinery built by the above firm ranks second to none, as has been proved by its use for the past twenty years.

Some of the best suggestions to both parents and children to which it has been our privilege to listen, were given in a discourse last Sunday evening, by the pastor of the Congregational Church, Rev. Mr. Lord, from the parable of "The Thorns."

The thorns sown along with the truth in the family circle; the indifference of parents to their children's early habits; trusting to conversion from sinful practices through the agency of a "revival" in future years. The poison through evil communications of the school, where sensual vices are sown, too often germinate into practices destructive to both the health and morals; the sensuous inspiration of the midnight waltz, where purity is often tarnished by too familiar contact with the respectable libertine. These, and other timely suggestions were presented in a manner both chaste and cogent, which commanded throughout, the closest attention. While the cautions against sowing "wild oats" to scar the character and haunt the future memory, were most fitly given.

An effort will be made to have a repetition of this discourse. Mr. Lord's Sunday evening sermons are replete with fresh thoughts, which is telling on attentive audiences. * * *

☞ The Milford Journal tells of a novelty to be found in that town, which is a stiff hat of the latest shape; with a pocket.

Death of Longfellow.

Henry Wadsworth Longfellow, the eminent poet and scholar, died at his home in Cambridge at little after three o'clock Friday afternoon of last week. His funeral took place on Sunday from his home, and his remains were placed in the family tomb at Mount Auburn. Rev. William Everett of this town conducted services at the Berkley street Church, in Boston, on Sunday, and paid the following tribute of respect to the dead poet.

His sermon was from the text of Exodus, XIII., 21,—"And the Lord went before them by day in a pillar of a cloud, to lead them the way; and by night in a pillar of fire, to give them light." The pillars of cloud and fire were discussed as symbols of duty and immortality. Towards the close he spoke as follows:—

"There are now lying in the ancient city across the river, waiting for the last honors of reverence and affection, the lifeless remains which for seventy-five years were animated by a soul revered and loved as few in America have ever been. For forty years, wherever the English language was spoken or read, his works have been known and his name repeated as comprehending all that was tender, pure and true. His were indeed such poems as he asked to have read,—

> Songs which gushed from his heart
> As dews from the clouds of summer,
> Or tears from the eyelids start.

With the ear of two kindred nations completely at his command, he might if he would, have led his readers captive along roads of melody fringed with such pernicious flowers, and heavy with such poisonous air as the bards he condescended sometimes to translate, Gothe and Heine, or their sickly imitators of the present day, offer to their admirers. But he could not and he would not. He dared not insult the spirit that had touched his lips with hallowed fire by such reeking and foul offerings. Of him, as truly as of an earlier bard, it may be said his works contained

> Not one immoral, one corrupting thought,
> One line, which dying, he could wish to blot.

He was preeminently the poet of duty. He did not seek, like Wordsworth, to retire into the loneliness of nature and boast that his hard-working brethren could not understand her like himself; but he drew his themes from that nature combined with human life which our streets and our fields show us, and where man is working out his Father's will through happiness and through sorrow. Perhaps of all his poems none is more often repeated or more completely identified with him than that which dwells on the poetry of daily duty, pure and simple, as the anvil on which must be shaped the life of every one. No nobler strain of sympathy ever rang across the ocean than that which described the death of the old, the stern hero whose proclamations never spoke of glory, but only of duty.

* * * * *

He was a Christian poet, a consistent, devout, loving follower of his Master; consecrating his genius, his influence, his fame to the service of the Lord, as truly as the mediæval builders of his own Golden Legend consecrated every hour they gave to the spire of Strasburg. No services, however touching; no monument, however costly; no fame, however lasting; no audience, however wide, will preserve his memory so fitly as the example he gave America and England, that one who might claim any honor and profit both nations had to offer, should prefer, through his seventy-five years, to be guided solely by the thought of duty and the hope of heaven.

Administratrix's Sale.

A LARGE and Beautiful Home Estate for sale in Quincy, Mass. Will be sold at Public Auction on the premises, on MONDAY, April 10th, 1882, at 4 o'clock, P. M., the homestead of the late Samuel Curtis, on Franklin street; comprising one half acre of land in a high state of cultivation, well stocked with Fruit Trees, all in bearing condition together with a large two-story Mansion House, containing twelve apartments, with large L attached, and a good cellar, with walls of granite and brick floor; and a never failing well of water. Also, a large Stable, roomy and convenient. The lot fronts on Franklin street about 1[illegible]0 feet, with granite edge stone and iron fence.

The public seldom find so valuable an estate thrown upon the market to be sold to the highest bidder. Parties contemplating securing a home, should not forget to be at this sale, situated as it is within two minutes' walk of the Quincy Adams Depot, where thirty trains run to and from Boston daily; near Schools, Churches, and Grocery Stores. The neighborhood is unsurpassed, while the drives are numerous and splendid, and within thirty minutes' ride of the watering places. Trains leave Boston for Quincy at 2.30 P. M., and return at 4.48 on the day of sale. Sale positive, weather fair or foul.

Terms $100 down.

By order of

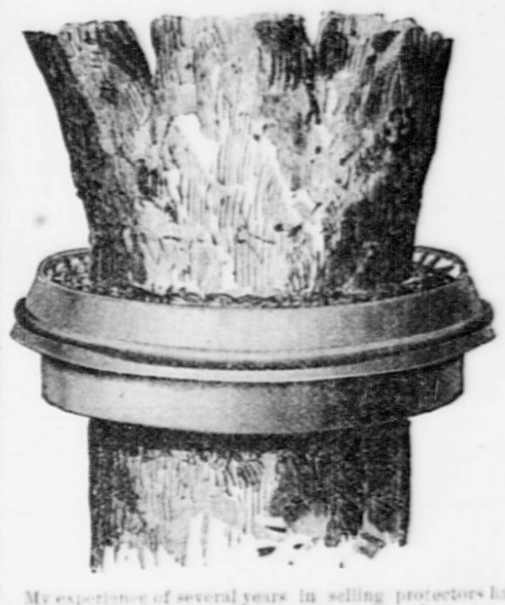
THOMAS' OIL TROUGH TREE PROTECTORS,

(Patented August 9, 1881.)

This Improved Protector effectually protects the trees against the

Canker Worms.



PLEASE Examine our new Protector. Below are some of the reasons why every one owning trees should use this Protector.

1. It is a first-class tree Protector with a perpendicular front to the pan, which prevents the oil from blowing out.
2. It has a pan large enough to contain oil for the season.
3. It is manufactured from heavy zinc, and will last for years.
4. Being corrugated prevents sagging when on the trees.
5. The protectors are smaller in the centre, which prevents the packing from falling through.
6. We use tow for packing, so there is no danger of girdling or injuring the tree.
7. By using our protectors you will get more and finer fruit.
8. It is so constructed as to be a perfect barrier against canker worms; it will prevent codling moths, tussock moths, bark lice, curculio, caterpillars, etc., from ascending the trees.
9. This Protector is so cheap that every one owning trees can apply it. It is simply insuring your trees against insects for a few cents a year.

My experience of several years in selling protectors has taught me what is required in the public is a cheap Oil Trough Protector, easily taken care of and something that cannot injure the trees, and will stop the grub from ascending. I am convinced that nothing can be fastened onto a tree without doing more or less injury. We have applied our Protectors to hundreds of trees where other protections have failed. Parties ordering, will please give their orders early to insure their being filled on time. Now is the time to put them on and prevent the codling moths, canker worms, bark lice and tussock moth from ascending the trees.

The Price of our Protectors is

10 cts. per inch in diameter, which includes applying to the tree and filling with oil.

Neatest, cheapest and most durable Protector in the market.

We are prepared to execute with promptness all orders. Address all orders to

New Town Seal to be Engraved.

The Almshouse Lot on Adams Street to be Sold.

The Prohibitory Law to be Enforced.

The Old Pound to be Removed to the Town Farm.

Large Taxes Anticipated.

THE SPECIAL MEETING

was called at 8 o'clock Monday morning last, and after the Clerk read the Warrant, the articles came up for consideration.

ARTICLE 1.—To choose a Moderator.

Chose Edwin W. Marsh.

ART. 2.—To see how the town will vote upon the following question, "Shall an act passed by the Legislature of the Commonwealth in the year 1882, entitled, 'An act for laying out a public park in the town of Quincy,' be accepted?"

It was voted to keep the polls open until half past twelve, so that all could have a chance to vote, but the result showed that a small number went to the polls,—only about one-quarter of the voters—yes 354, no 232. Having voted to accept the Act of the Legislature, (which was published in full in the PATRIOT of March 18th,) the town can at some further meeting choose Park Commissioners and appropriate money to purchase land for one or more parks providing two-thirds of the voters at a meeting called for the purpose, vote in favor of doing it.

ART. 3.—To see if the town will sell their land on Adams street, known as the Newcomb lot, and authorize the Selectmen to execute a deed for the same.

Voted, That the Selectmen are authorized to sell the land on Adams street, known as the "Newcomb Lot," and the proceeds, after deducting therefrom the necessary expenses of the sale, shall be paid over to the Commissioners of the Sinking Fund, who shall receipt therefor, and forthwith apply the same to the purposes of the fund held by them in trust, to extinguish the town debt.

ART. 4.—To see if the town will authorize the removal of the Pound to the Town Farm and appropriate money therefor.

Voted, That the Selectmen are authorized to remove the Pound to the Town Farm, the expense thereof to be paid from the appropriation for miscellaneous expenses.

This old pound, at the junction of Coddington and Sea streets, which the town has now voted to remove, was built, we learn of Mr. Seth Spear, in 1820; there was one previous to that time located near the residence of the late George Nightingale, on Temple street.

ART. 5.—To see if the town will construct a reservoir at the junction of Billings street and [illegible] avenue, and appropriate money therefor.

Voted, That Article 5 be indefinitely postponed.

ART. 6.—To hear and act upon the report of any committee the town may think proper.

There was no business under this article and it was Voted, That this meeting be dissolved.

ADJOURNED ANNUAL MEETING.

The adjourned annual town meeting was held at 1 o'clock, the same afternoon, and was largely attended; the hall proving much too small to accommodate the voters. Hon. John Quincy Adams was the Moderator,—an honored position he has occupied for several years with credit to himself and the town.

Although the meeting was large, the voters appeared to be very harmonious and a large amount of business was transacted in an incredibly short time. Very few articles received an extended debate, and most of them were disposed of as recommended by the committee appointed by the town to take into consideration all the articles in the annual warrant, not disposed of on the sixth of March last.

The appropriations recommended by the committee, and adopted by the voters, are very liberal, and the consequence is that taxes will be heavy in Quincy this year. The town has voted to raise some $25,000 more on the polls and estates than last year, which will raise the rate of taxation to $16 or $18 on $1000. Some wise heads think it will be higher than these figures. It will undoubtedly be higher than was ever known before in Quincy. The highest ever reached was in 1870, when it was $17.50 on $1000. Last year it was $12.50.

On motion of Charles F. Adams, Jr., the meeting passed the following votes, before commencing with the articles, viz:—

Voted, That no motion to reconsider any vote shall be in order, unless the mover thereof shall give notice of his intention so to do, before the Town has passed from the consideration of the article under which the question was taken.

Voted, That a Committee of four, for the floor of the house, and two for the gallery, be appointed by the Moderator, to count and report the number of votes upon all matters when, by reason of doubt, the Moderator may find it necessary to order a count, and Messrs. Herbert M. Federhen, E. W. Marsh, William L. Faxon, Sigourney Butler, Wm. G. A. Pattee and Jonas Shackley were appointed.

Voted, That debate on the main question be in order, pending the verification of a doubtful vote.

Voted, That the Moderator appoint three persons to act as Auditors for the ensuing year, and William A Hodges, Alfred Sampson and H. A. Keith were so appointed.

ART. 4.—To act upon the reports of Auditors of Accounts, Selectmen and School Committee.

Voted, That the reports of the Auditors, Selectmen and School Committee be accepted and filed with the town documents.

ART. 5.—To determine the method of repairing the highways during the ensuing year.

Voted, That the Highways be repaired under the direction of the Road Commissioners.

ART. 6.—To determine how the town lands shall be improved during the ensuing year.

Voted, That the Overseers of the Poor shall direct the improvement of the town lands for the ensuing year.

ART. 7.—To revise the Jury List.

Marshal P. Wright,
W. H. H. Willet,
Herbert T. Whitman,
John A. Wood,
Charles E. Whiton.

By request of the following persons, their names were stricken from the list:—Messrs. Augustus F. Bussell, Bryant N. Adams, H. T. Whitman, W. W. Ewell and Frank F. Crane.

On motion of H. H. Faxon, Esq., the Selectmen were authorized to remove all names where the persons were over sixty-five years of age, as the statutes do not require persons over that age to sit as Jurors.

The list was then adopted.

ART. 8.—To hear and act on the report of the Selectmen upon Guide Boards.

Voted, To accept the report of the Selectmen on guide-boards.

ART. 9.—To see if the town will appropriate the sum of two hundred dollars, for repairing and decorating soldiers' graves; the same to be expended under the direction of Post 88, of the Grand Army of the Republic.

Voted, That the sum of $200 be appropriated for the purpose of keeping in repair or decorating the graves within the limits of Quincy of soldiers or sailors who died in the military service of the United States, or the monuments or other memorials erected to their memory, the same to be expended under the direction of Post 88 of the Grand Army of the Republic, and the treasurer and commander of the said Post shall furnish to the Selectmen a true and detailed account, duly itemized and certified by them, of the manner in which said sum was expended, within thirty days after Decoration Day.

ART. 10.—To see what compensation the town will allow the Engineers, Members and Stewards of the Fire Department, for their services the past year.

The following vote recommended by the Committee was passed without discussion:—

That the officers and members of the Fire Department be paid as follows:

Chief Engineer,	$25
Assistant Engineer, (clerk)	25
3 Assistant Engineers, each $15,	45
6 Stewards—Hand Engines Nos. 2, 3, 4, Chemical Engines 1, 2, H. & L. Truck 1; at $40,	240
1 Steward of W. M. French Hose Co.	75
1 Engineer of Steam Pump,	100
1 Ass't. Engineer Steam Pump,	25
220 members, at $10 each,	2200
20 members, (9 months) W. M. French Hose Co., at $7.50 each,	150
20 members, (3 mos.) ex. W. M. French Hose Co., at $2.50 each,	50
1 Steward, W. M. French Hose Co. (3 months services,)	25
Total,	$2960

Also that the further sum of $1840 be appropriated to defray the miscellaneous expenses of Fire Department.

ART. 11.—To see if the town will purchase a new Hook and Ladder Truck, as a substitute for the one now located on Canal street.

Mr. Henry H. Faxon called on the Engineers of the Fire Department to enlighten the voters as to whether one was really needed.

Mr. H. M. Federhen responded, saying all the committees (this year and in former years), appointed to look into the matter, and also the Engineers, thought a new one was a necessity.

The following vote was passed with but little opposition:—

Voted, That the Engineers and Messrs. Duggan, Porter, Beeching and Federhen be authorized to purchase a new Hook and Ladder Truck at an expense not exceeding $1000; and $1000 is hereby appropriated for that purpose.

ART. 12.—To see if the town will establish a telegraphic fire alarm system, and appropriate money therefor.

The town fully recognized the need of a fire alarm system and passed the following vote without discussion:—

Voted,—That the Moderator appoint a committee of five persons, of whom the Chief Engineer shall be one, who shall be authorized to procure and establish a system of electric fire alarm for the town, at an expense not exceeding $3200; and the sum of $3200 is appropriated for that purpose.

The following gentlemen comprise the committee:—John W. Hall, John A. Duggan, Charles H. Porter, W. P. Beeching, and H. M. Federhen.

ART. 13.—To see if the town will extend the line of water pipes to the junction of Franklin and School streets, also to the junction of Adams and Hancock streets, and lay a line of water-pipes from the steam-pump through Cottage avenue and Foster street to Washington street, and appropriate money therefor.

This article was laid upon the table until Article 14 had been acted upon, and if the town had not voted to purchase a steam fire engine under that article, would probably have voted to extend the pipes. When it was taken from the table there was considerable discussion.

The Committee recommended that the article be indefinitely postponed.

Mr. Benj. F. Curtis hoped the town would not postpone the article, and gave an estimate of the value of the property that would be protected.

Mr. Henry H. Faxon agreed with Mr. Curtis.

Mr. Edwin W. Marsh favored extending the pipes, but thought the article should be postponed this year, as with the new steamer we would be better protected than ever before, and because the appropriations would be very large without that.

Mr. Charles H. Porter was opposed to the laying of the pipes. He thought that with the new steamer, it was not needed; it would simply give double protection.

Mr. Herbert M. Federhen also spoke against it. He said a steamer could easily cover the territory as it could force water through 2500 feet of hose and then throw a stream that would do good service in putting out a fire.

Mr. Henry H. Faxon and others did not take much stock in Mr. Federhen's remarks. They said if a steamer attempted to force water that distance, and do good service, it would burst a large quantity of hose, which cost nearly as much per foot as the iron pipe laid in ground, and the pipe was durable.

An estimate was then given, viz:—that the iron pipe would cost all laid and completed, $3750, or $1.25 per foot for 3000 feet; 10 hydrants at $65 each, $650; total $4300.

Mr. Benj. F. Curtis still urged the necessity of laying iron pipes, even if only a part of what was asked for was done. He thought Washington street, particularly in the vicinity of Mr. Washington M. French's residence, needed greater protection. The buildings there were packed thickly together, and there was danger some day of a large fire, if better protection was not given.

Mr. Charles F. Adams, Jr., then made a financial statement in regard to the very satisfactory work which the town had done in the last few years. He said also that the town was rich enough to have anything it wanted if it only went to work in a business-like manner. He would like to have the pipes laid to Washington street so as to give protection to the new Crane Library Building, but with the additions already made to the Fire Department this year he favored postponing the article for the present.

Mr. Henry H. Faxon said, in a humorous manner, that there was no danger of that building, it was too homely to ever burn. He did not, however, believe in waiting. Next year the town would want to enlarge the Town House; buy land for a park, and a hundred other things. He admitted that in the opposite corner of the hall was the assembled wisdom, which was bound to have it the way the Committee had recommended. Still he believed the laying of the iron pipe was the most economical act the town could do.

Mr. John Q. A. Field opposed extending the pipes, and it was Voted, To indefinitely postpone the article.

ART. 14.—To see if the town will purchase one or more Steam Fire Engines and Equipments, and appropriate money therefor.

The Committee recommended the following:—

That the Moderator appoint a committee of five persons, of whom the Chief Engineer shall be one, who shall be authorized to purchase one steam fire engine, at a cost not exceeding $4000; one pair of horses at a cost of $600; one pair of harnesses at a cost of $200; and the sum of $4800 is hereby appropriated for the purpose.

Mr. B. F. Curtis wished to have the recommendation divided, so that the town should vote on the engine separate from the horses, harnesses, etc., which was accordingly done.

Without much discussion it was voted by rather a small vote, 136 yea, and 93 nay, to purchase a steam fire engine as recommended, and $4000 was appropriated. The following committee was appointed to purchase the steamer:—Messrs. John W. Hall, John A. Duggan, Charles H. Porter, W. P. Beeching, and H. M. Federhen.

The part relative to purchasing horses, harnesses, etc., brought out considerable discussion.

Mr. Benj. F. Curtis was opposed to buying horses for that purpose; thinking it would be better to hire.

Mr. H. M. Federhen responded and cited Hyde Park where the town was obliged to pay $15 for horses at every alarm, and thought this would amount to more than the cost of keeping the horses. He favored buying horses, and thought some arrangement could be made with the Road Commissioners whereby they could be used on the roads in the vicinity of the engine-house.

Mr. Charles H. Porter favored the purchase of horses, saying the town should have something effective, and that a steamer would be useless without horses.

Mr. Henry H. Faxon thought the town should hire horses, but was willing to refer the matter to the Engineers and four citizens.

Mr. Edwin W. Marsh favored the purchase of horses.

Mr. Charles F. Adams, Jr., favored Mr. Faxon's idea of referring the matter to a committee. The town then

Voted, That the Moderator appoint a committee of five persons, of whom the Chief Engineer shall be one, who shall be authorized to purchase one steam fire engine, at a cost not exceeding $4000, and Messrs. John W. Hall, (the Chief Engineer) and John A. Duggan, Charles H. Porter, W. P. Beeching and H. M. Federhen were appointed, and the same committee with the addition of the remaining engineers of the Fire Department were authorized to purchase one pair of horses at a cost of $600; one pair of harnesses at a cost of $200, if found to be necessary and expedient, and the sum of $4800 is hereby appropriated for the purpose.

ART. 15.—To see if the town will purchase land and erect a building for an engine house, or alter the old stone schoolhouse on School street, and appropriate money therefor.

The Committee recommended that the Engineers may prepare for temporary use by the steam fire engine the Stone school house on School street; and the sum of $500 is appropriated for the purpose.

After voting to add four citizens to act with the engineers, the vote was passed as recommended. The four citizens appointed are John A. Duggan, Charles H. Porter, W. P. Beeching and H. M. Federhen.

ART. 16.—To see if the town will purchase a horse and suitable equipments, as recommended by the committee on protection against fire, for the W. M. French Hose Co., and appropriate money therefor.

The following was the vote passed as recommended by the Committee:—

Voted, The Moderator shall appoint a committee of four persons, with the Engineers of the Fire Department who shall be authorized to procure a horse and suitable equipments for the W. M. French hose carriage, at an expense not exceeding $400, and that sum is hereby appropriated therefore.

The committee appointed are the Engineers, and Messrs. John A. Duggan, Charles H. Porter, W. P. Beeching and H. M. Federhen.

ART. 17.—To see if the town will construct a self-filling reservoir at the corner of Franklin and High streets, and appropriate money therefor.

Article seventeen was indefinitely postponed, as recommended by the Committee.

ART. 18.—To see if the town will enlarge the Willard schoolhouse, or make other provision for the accommodation of said school, and appropriate money therefor.

This article called forth probably as much discussion and fun as any other article.

Mr. Henry A. Faxon inquired of the School Committee for the number of pupils in the district, etc., and if an enlargement was really necessary.

Mr. Edwin W. Marsh, chairman of the School Committee, responded saying that something must be done to accommodate the children, whose numbers are increasing rapidly in that district, as the building was now crowded.

Mr. Henry H. Faxon hoped that the town would not vote to enlarge its school-houses, and thought it would be better to build a new one somewhere between the Willard and Adams schools.

Mr. Edwin W. Marsh thought it would not be wise to build a new school house. The scholars could not be so well graded, and it would be more expensive. A new principal at a salary of $1200 would be required; when, if they enlarged the Willard School, that expense would be saved. The schools in that part of the town were better than in most any other section, simply because they could be better graded.

Mr. Geo. W. B. Taylor spoke against enlargement; thinking it unwise to get too many children under one roof, and raised the question of escape in case of fire. He thought 500 children was as many as should be placed under one roof.

Mr. Sigourney Butler, of the School Committee, favored enlargement, thinking the children could be better educated than by the establishment of another school. He said the State Officers have visited Quincy and found our school-houses to be safe and acceptable, with the exception of a few doors, which should swing outward instead of inward.

Mr. Jonas Shackley responded, saying the Willard School-house was deemed very safe, as to fire, having several doors for egress; and the addition would improve the building in that respect.

The question was then put to vote, and it was agreed not to enlarge by a vote of 153 to 144.

Mr. Henry H. Faxon then moved that $10,000 be appropriated and a committee appointed to select a site and build a school-house somewhere between the Willard and Adams schools.

This motion was opposed vigorously by Messrs. Charles F. Adams, Jr., Sigourney Butler and Charles H. Porter, and upon being put to vote was defeated.

Mr. Sigourney Butler than moved a reconsideration of the vote whereby it was voted not to enlarge.

Mr. Henry H. Faxon spoke of the work done by the School Committee, thinking it had not been as satisfactory as it should have been. He said the School Committee were in a ring and bound to have their way. He would advise rubbing their heads together.

Mr. Edwin W. Marsh, chairman of the School Committee, replied and defended the board of which he was a member.

Mr. Charles F. Adams, Jr., called for Superintendent Brown to speak on the subject.

Mr. Brown favored enlargement, thinking the scholars could be better educated at a much less expense. He said the schools that were largest got the most instruction for the money. Where there was but one class in a school it made more rapid progress. The scholars at the Adams and Willard schools were learning faster than at Wollaston and Atlantic.

The question of reconsideration was then put and carried.

The following vote, recommended by the Committee on Warrant, was then passed:—

The School Committee may make such enlargement of the Willard Schoolhouse as may seem to them most expedient, provided the total cost thereof shall in no case exceed $6000; and that sum is hereby appropriated for that purpose.

ART. 19.—To see if the town will accept the report of the Selectmen, relocating Valley street, and appropriate money therefor.

A humorous part of the meeting was the reading by the Moderator, of the report of the Selectmen on relocating this street. The report being long the Moderator did not wish to read it, but the meeting having asked to have it read, the obliging Moderator complied in a hurried, school-boy style, without regard to emphases and stops, much to the delight and amusement of many of the voters, and the town immediately

Voted, That the report of the Selectmen, relocating Valley street, is hereby accepted; and the sum of $500 is appropriated therefor.

ART. 20.—To see if the town will accept the report of the Selectmen, laying out Arnold street, and appropriate money therefor.

The following vote was passed as recommended by Committee:—

That the report of the Selectmen, laying out Arnold street is hereby accepted, provided the abuttors shall satisfy all claims for land damages, but not otherwise, and in that event $100 is appropriated to be expended therefor.

ART. 21.—To see if the town will accept the report of the Selectmen, extending Quincy street, and appropriate money therefor.

The following vote was passed:

That the report of the Selectmen, extending Quincy street, is hereby accepted, and $125 is appropriated to be expended therefor.

ART. 22.—To see if the town will appropriate the sum of one thousand dollars for the improvement of the Squantum Causeway.

The following vote was passed as recommended by Committee:—

That this article be referred to the Road Commissioners, and that the further consideration thereof be indefinitely postponed.

ART. 23.—To see if the town will improve that part of Sea street, lying between Quincy's woods and Rye island, and appropriate money therefor.

Voted, That Article 23 be referred to the Road Commissioners.

ART. 24.—To see if the town will build a retaining wall, and regrade Washington street opposite the estate of the late H. Farnum Smith, and appropriate money therefor.

Voted, That the Road Commissioners regrade Washington street and build a retaining wall opposite the estate of the late H. Farnum Smith, at an expense not exceeding one hundred and fifty dollars; and that sum is hereby appropriated for the purpose.

ART. 25.—To see if the town will build a retaining wall on Washington street adjoining the land of Charles Loring and appropriate money therefor.

Voted, That the Road Commissioners build a retaining wall on Washington street, adjoining the land of Charles Loring, at an expense not exceeding $150; and that sum is appropriated for the purpose.

ART. 26.—To see if the town will authorize the Selectmen to purchase land on Sea street of H. H. Faxon, for the use of Mount Wollaston Cemetery, and appropriate money therefor.

Voted, That the Selectmen are authorized to purchase land as proposed on Sea street of H. H. Faxon for the use of the Mount Wollaston Cemetery.

ART. 27.—To see if the town will authorize the Selectmen to sell to H. H. Faxon, land near the junction of Sea and Coddington streets.

Voted, That the Selectmen are authorized to sell to H. H. Faxon land near the junction of Sea and Coddington street as per plan prepared.

ART. 28.—To see if the town will instruct the Selectmen to clear the snow from all traveled sidewalks.

The Committee recommended that Article 28 be referred to the Road Commissioners and they are directed not to shovel the snow from any sidewalk at the Town's expense, excepting those in front of the town buildings and the old Cemetery.

This article brought forth considerable discussion.

Mr. Benj. F. Curtis strongly opposed the recommendation, thinking that the snow should be shoveled at least from one sidewalk of each street, in the thickly portions of the town.

Mr. Charles F. Adams thought there would be no limit if this should be done, and said the Committee in their recommendation wished to give the people a strong hint to remove the snow from their sidewalks.

Messrs. Jonas Shackley, W. Lyman Faxon, H. H. Faxon, J. Q. A. Field and H. T. Whitman spoke against the town shoveling any snow from sidewalks.

Mr. Jacob Flint thought both sidewalks should be shoveled, where there was so much horse racing as in Quincy.

On a motion of Mr. Shackley the town voted to strike out all the words after commissioners, in the recommendation of the Committee.

Mr. Benj. F. Curtis then moved as an amendment that $1500 be appropriated for shoveling snow from sidewalks.

This amendment was defeated and on a motion of Mr. H. H. Faxon, it was Voted, That Article 28 be indefinitely postponed.

ART. 29.—To see if the town will authorize the Selectmen to keep Huckins avenue clear of snow for the benefit of the school children.

Voted, That Article 29 be referred to the Road Commissioners.

ART. 30.—To see if the town will take any steps towards establishing a public park, and securing as a part thereof, certain portions of the land held in the Woodward trust.

As no legal action was possible it was Voted, That Article 30 be indefinitely postponed.

ART. 31.—To see if the town will cause a design for a Town Seal to be prepared, and adopt the same.

Voted, That the design for a town seal reported by the committee on the warrant be adopted as the seal of the town, and that said design be referred to the committee appointed under Article 32 of the warrant, with authority to perfect the same in points of detail and to have it engraved; the cost of said engraving to be defrayed out of the appropriations in the hands of said committee appointed under Article 32.

The design is substantially the same as the die that adorns Pattee's History of Quincy, viz:—Merry Mount in 1640. It is a beautiful design and one appropriate for the town.

ART. 32.—To see if the town will appoint a committee to arrange for receiving the Thomas Crane Memorial Hall from the donors, and appropriate money to defray the expenses of the same.

Voted, That the Selectmen and the Trustees of the Thomas Crane Public Library are appointed a committee of the town to make and carry out all suitable arrangements for the acceptance of the Crane Memorial Hall from its donors upon its completion, and also to superintend the grading of the lot, and they are authorized to expend for those purposes a sum not exceeding $2,000, and that amount is hereby appropriated for that purpose.

ART. 33.—To see if the town will by its vote or otherwise ask the Legislature to extend to women who are citizens, the right to hold Town Offices, and to vote in town affairs on the same terms as male citizens.

Mr. F. A. Claflin favored Woman's Suffrage, citing England and Wyoming, where the women enjoyed the privilege of voting.

Mr. Charles H. Porter spoke also in favor; saying it would be only a question of time when this privilege would be granted.

Mr. Charles F. Adams, Jr., opposed the suffrage of women, and thought the question should not be brought before such a meeting.

Mr. H. H. Faxon favored it.

Mr. H. M. Federhen opposed, and brought to notice the small number who now availed themselves of the privilege of voting for the School Committee.

Voted, That Article 33 be indefinitely postponed.

ART. 34.—To see if the town will alter or amend the By-Laws, or any portion thereof.

ART. 35.—To see if the town will exempt from taxation the property belonging to St. Mary's Total Abstinence and Mutual Relief Society, situated on Willard street, West Quincy.

ART. 36.—To see if the town will authorize the Selectmen to appoint such number of Night Police as they may deem expedient, and appropriate money therefor.

Voted, That Articles 34, 35 and 36 be indefinitely postponed.

ART. 37.—To see if the town will instruct the Selectmen to appoint special officers to enforce all laws bearing upon the sale of intoxicating liquors, and appropriate money therefor.

The Committee thought that all laws regulating and punishing crime should be equally and impartially enforced by regular officers of the law, who should be paid from the general appropriation for that purpose, and deemed it inexpedient to appoint special officers to compel obedience to special laws, or classes of criminal offences. Police officers should be made to feel that they are responsible for every infraction of criminal law; and therefore recommended that Article 37 be indefinitely postponed.

Mr. Henry H. Faxon was the first speaker on this article. He said "an enemy hath done this," referring to the recommendation of the committee. "Let us not pass it over but see that the law is enforced." He favored an additional appropriation of $500 for the police force, and that a special officer be appointed; then the town would know where the blame belonged if the law was not enforced.

Messrs. Wm. G. A. Pattee, Charles F. Adams, Jr., Edwin W. Marsh, Geo. W. B. Taylor and John H. Dee favored the recommendation, thinking all the police should be responsible and held to their duty.

Mr. Faxon said some of the police officers the past year had drank more intoxicating liquors than the citizens, and he did not believe in such men to enforce the law. He made a feeling appeal to the voters to do something to encourage the helpless wives and half-starved children. He knew of cases the past year, where men and women, had been helped by the town, who could find money to buy lager beer by the dozen and rum by the gallon.

Mr. Theophilus King, Jr., favored the appointment of special police and an appropriation.

On being put to vote the Committee's recommendation was defeated and on motion of Mr. Faxon, the following vote was passed by a large majority.

Voted, That the Selectmen are instructed to appoint special officers to enforce all laws, bearing on the sale of intoxicating liquors in this Town, and $500, in addition to the $400 recommended by the Committee, was appropriated for that purpose.

ART. 38.—To see if the town will grant the free use of the Town Hall for free lectures.

Voted, That the Selectmen shall grant the free use of the Town Hall, whenever it shall be requested in writing by not less than two respectable citizens of the town, for a free lecture on any scientific, literary or moral topic, subject to such reasonable regulations as they may deem expedient, and two hundred dollars is appropriated to defray the cost thereof.

ART. 39.—To see if the town will elect a Board of Health or a Health Officer.

Voted, That Article 39 be indefinitely postponed.

ART. 40.—To raise money to defray the necessary expenses of the town for the ensuing year.

Voted, That the Collector of Taxes shall be paid in the following manner namely,—he shall be entitled to receive one-quarter of one per cent. on the amount of all taxes on property actually collected by him during the present town year; and fifteen cents on each poll tax actually collected by him; and he shall receive no further or other compensation whatever as such Collector.

Voted, That the amount appropriated for street lighting during the present year shall be expended under the direction of the Road Commissioners, and they are instructed to report in print before the next annual town meeting on the existing rules and regulations relating to street lighting, and to propose such alteration therein as may seem to them expedient.

Voted, That in view of the alarming increase in the cost of supporting the poor in this town, Voted, that a committee of three be appointed by the Moderator to take the whole subject into consideration, and to report a comprehensive system of dealing with the same; said committee to submit its views to the town in print before the next annual meeting.

Messrs. C. F. Adams, Jr., Theophilus King, Jr., and Rupert F. Claflin were appointed as that committee.

Voted, That all supplies procured for the support of the poor, such as flour, meat, tea, coffee, etc., shall be purchased in quantities at the lowest wholesale market prices, and distributed from the Almshouse to all applicants for outside relief by an agent of the town, appointed by the Overseers of the Poor for that purpose, upon orders issued by said Overseers.

Voted, That the Overseers of the Poor shall proceed forthwith to examine into all cases where rent is paid by the town for the poor, and discontinue all such as can be so disposed of, and they shall transfer to the Almshouse all persons receiving such aid whenever it can in their judgment be safely done.

Voted, That the Overseers of the Poor shall appoint a Town Physician who shall have sole charge of the sick poor, and act as advising physician to the Board of Health, and he shall receive a suitable compensation for his services, to be fixed by the Overseers of the Poor but not exceeding $300 by the year; and $300 is appropriated for that purpose.

Voted, That the Overseers of the Poor, in dealing with the poor of the town, act in co-operation as far as possible, with the Board of Associated Charities.

Voted, That interest at the rate of six per cent. be collected on all unpaid taxes after November 15, 1882.

Voted, That the Town Treasurer be directed to deposit the money of the town in his hands, in such safe bank or trust company, as will pay the largest amount of interest on such deposit.

Voted, To raise and assess on the polls and estates of the town, the sum of one hundred and twelve thousand and five dollars ($112,005), for the following purposes, viz:—

The Quincy Patriot.

SATURDAY, APRIL 1, 1882.

For the Patriot.

To —— ——

If poets prayer can banish care,
No trouble shalt thou know,
But all thy life as maid or wife,
Be heaven for thee below.

And yet, fair girl, the happy whirl
Of pleasure now around thee,
Can't always last, old Time flies fast,
And years will thicken 'round thee.

May no sad tears in coming years,
Bow down thy spirit's lightness,
Be thine old age the happiest page,
Of all thy life of brightness.

ALDEN H. DAY.

Farm and Garden.

Early Peas.

But few garden vegetables will endure the cold winds and frosty nights of April and May, so well as the pea, and but few vegetables that find their way upon the tables of the masses, are so universally liked; so every person who has a garden is very sure to plant a row of early peas in some sheltered corner, as soon as the frost leaves the ground, that they may have green peas the Fourth of July, if not the Seventeenth of June.

There are now so many varieties to pick from, which are really good, that it is difficult to decide which is the best; each cultivator has his favorite. For some years the Tom Thumb ranked high as a dwarf variety; now we have McLean's Little Gem, which has been improved to the Premium Gem; Blue Peter and others, Carter's First Crop growing two and one half feet high is a very good early variety, being both productive and good flavored. The pea, unlike many other vegetables, seems to grow better by planting deep; from experiment it has been found to yield better if planted four inches deep; good crops have been grown in light soil when planted six, and even eight inches deep; but the best crops have been grown when planted four or five inches deep. As a rule it is best to buy seed, because unless planted late the worms find their way into the peas that are grown in this State.

Early peas should be planted where the land can be occupied by other crops after they are grown; squashes, cucumbers and other vines may be planted where they will run over the ground occupied by the peas, after the crop is gathered; or the ground may be sown with turnips, or set with cabbages, as there is time enough for these crops to grow after the peas are gathered. While peas may be started with stable manure, they will produce a much larger crop, if in addition to the manure, ground bone be liberally sprinkled in the drill.—Massachusetts Ploughman.

To Raise Early Cucumbers.

A good method to produce early cucumbers is the following: Make a trench at the warmest place of the garden; into this put old manure, about three inches, and on this plant the seeds, and cover with saw-dust, two or three inches. Cucumbers thus treated are said to come earlier, to endure rain, drouth, and even a little frost, far better than those treated another way. Against severe night frosts they should be protected by boards.

Take middle sized flower pots; fill them two-thirds with good soil; put the seeds on this, and cover with saw-dust; sprinkle with warm water, and put the pots near the stove. On the appearance of the plants, place the pots near the window. Care should be taken to harden the plants before transplanting into the garden, by admitting air to them both day and night.

Take egg shells (the hole to be on the upper end three-fourths of an inch), fill them with good soil, and therein plant the seeds. Plants thus raised, kept either in the house or hot-bed, are easily transplanted.—Golden Rule.

RAILWAY GARDENING. The Boston and Maine Company now allows its station agents $10 a year each with which to buy seeds, plants, etc., and offers prizes of $50, $30, and $20 to the agents whose stations are best kept.

Anecdotes.

A youngster seated at the tea-table, said: "Mamma, may I have some sardines?"

"Wait till I'm ready, child."

"Why, ma, it's me 'at wants 'em," was the comment, in tones of surprise.

"Why were you not at church last Sunday, Clara?" asked Amelia.

"I couldn't go; didn't have any thing to wear. I shall go next Sunday if my sack is done."

"O, you sack-religious thing!"

In speaking of a newly-wedded pair, a gentleman said of the husband:

"The trouble with John is, he has no mind of his own."

"Oh, that will make no difference; Sarah will always be ready to give him a piece of hers!" responded the lady.

"Why did you send me that almanac, Augustus?" asked Angelina.

"Because, darling," answered Augustus, as he vainly strove to twist the few downy sprouts upon his upper lip into a curl, "because, darling, I wished you to select a date for our—the, aw—ceremony.

"Oh, I see!" she said; then, smiling a bewitching smile, she murmured, "Call it the first of April." Augustus will some day succeed in raising a moustache, but he goes to see Angelina no more.

Walnut Leaf Hair Restorer.

It is entirely different from all others. It is as clear as water, and, as its name indicates, is a perfect Vegetable Hair Restorer. It will immediately free the head from all dandruff, restore grey hair to its natural color, and produce a new growth where it has fallen off. It does not in any manner affect the health, which Sulphur, Sugar of Lead, and Nitrate of Silver preparations have done. It will change light or faded hair in a few days to a beautiful glossy brown. Ask your druggist for it. Each bottle is warranted. Chas. N. Crittenton, New York, and Geo. C. Goodwin & Co., Boston, wholesale agts. S 24po

Miasma poisons the blood, promoting the "Chills," "Malaria" and "Shakes." A sure antidote and preventative is "Wheat Bitters."

PERUVIAN SYRUP cures Dyspepsia, General Debility, Liver Complaint, Boils, Humors, Chronic Diarrhœa, Nervous Affections, Female Complaints, and all diseases originating in a bad state of the blood. poly

Household Receipts.

PEACHES IN JELLY. Take one can of good peaches and cook them over with a cup of sugar. Separate the peaches and syrup. Soak the peaches in a little brandy, if you wish. Put a package of Cox's gelatine in a cup of cold water and let it stand one hour; then add one lemon, juice and peel, a cup of boiling water, and the syrup from the peaches. Stir the whole over a hot fire a moment till the gelatine is thoroughly melted. Strain twice through a flannel bag, put the peaches in a mould, pour the jelly over them and set in a cold place—on the ice in summer—when it will be firm in an hour and ready for the table. Serve in an ornamental glass dish and garnish with peach leaves.

A BEEF PIE. Cold roast beef, one onion, pepper and salt, dozen boiled potatoes. Cut the cold beef in thin slices, and put a layer on the bottom of your dish. Shake in a little flour, pepper and salt, cut up and add a tomato (if in season), or onion finely chopped, then another layer of beef, and seasoning till your dish is full; if you have any gravy put it in; have ready a dozen potatoes, boiled and mashed, with butter and salt, spread over the pie an inch thick; bake twenty-five minutes or a little more.

PLAIN OMELET. Six eggs, one table-spoonful of flour, one cup of milk, a pinch of salt. Beat the white and yolks separately. Mix the flour, milk and salt, add the yolks, then add beaten whites. Have a buttered spider very hot; put in. Bake in a quick oven five minutes.

Fashion Notes.

Buff tints are revived.

New beiges are striped.

Ombre fabrics are out of style.

Chene silks are coming into favor.

Scarf rings are now worn by ladies.

Velvet ribbon is seen on new bonnets.

Sulphur yellow, with brown, is a stylish combination for dresses and bonnets.

Dark straw hats, with gloves and hosiery to match, are announced for next summer.

Dolly Varden lives again in a new polonaise, a novel neckerchief, and a daintily shaped dancing shoe.

In spring costumes there is a tendency to use lengthwise tucks in clusters in the place of kilt plaitings and shirrings.

Watered silks are combined with cashmere, surah and plush in the French costumes imported for misses and little girls.

Open work, wheel, and Kensington embroidery, in Hamburg edgings and insertions, form the bosom trimmings of domestic chemises.

Pale rose and pure white dresses, with silver and pearl accessories, form the favorite evening toilet for young ladies of high fashion.

Black, blue and lemon-colored pocket handkerchiefs of sheer linen, embroidered with contrasting colors, are among the eccentric novelties lately imported.

Lace is the most fashionable, as well as the most elegant and most economical trimmings for all costumes, wraps and toilets light enough to admit of its use.

Petticoats are profusely trimmed with needlework flowers, resembling the needle-wrought bands that border the new nun's veilings, ginghams and batistes.

In many garments the style is enhanced by having all the trimming placed lengthwise, both in front and back, rather than to shorten the appearance of the wearer by a crosswise border of great breadth.

This and That.

☞ The French pronunciation of Eau de Cologne is easy, thus: odor Cologne.

☞ I you want to get rich mount a mule, because when you are on a mule you are better off.

☞ It is a difficult thing for a dog without a tail to show his master how much he thinks of him.

☞ Now will the lone and homesick oyster take his annual hot bath in soup at the church festival.

☞ Germany has solved the problem for us. In that country more girls marry at thirty-five than at nineteen. Now we all know why girls of thirty-five remain nineteen for so many years; they don't want husbands.

☞ Weak minds make treaties with the passions they cannot overcome, and try to purchase happiness at the expense of principle. But the resolute will of the strong man scorns such means, and struggles nobly with his foe to achieve great deeds.

Honesty is the best policy in medicine as well as in other things. Ayer's Sarsaparilla is a genuine preparation, an unequalled spring medicine and blood purifier, decidedly superior to all others in the market. Trial proves it.

Poor digestion frequently causes trouble which is all impossible when "Wheat Bitters" are used.

WISTAR'S BALSAM OF WILD CHERRY cures Coughs, Colds, Bronchitis, Whooping Cough, Croup, Influenza, Consumption, and all diseases of the Throat, Lungs and Chest. 50 cents and $1 a bottle. poly

Swayne's Ointment.

The symptoms of Itching Piles are moisture, like perspiration, intense itching, most at night, seems as if pin worms were crawling in or about the rectum. The more you scratch the worse they itch; very distressing. The private parts are often affected. DR. SWAYNE'S OINTMENT is the most effective remedy extant for this tormenting complaint. Gives rest at night without that desire to scratch. Also has no equal in quickly eradicating Tetter, Itch, Salt Rheum, Erysipelas, Barbers' Itch, Pimples, all Scaly, Crusty, Itchy Skin Eruptions. Here is the proof: "Certainly the best remedy ever used in my practice." Dr. Cotton, Woodstock, Vt.; "Troubled with Itching Piles for over twenty years, it cured me completely," L. S. Messer, Enfield, Me. Sent for 50 cts. (in 3 ct. stamps), 3 boxes, $1.25. By Dr. Swayne & Son, Philad'a, Pa. Sold by all Druggists. Feb. 10—1y

WHEAT BITTERS

THE BEST AND The Richest

BLOOD, BRAIN and NERVE

-F-O-O-D-

CAREFULLY PREPARED, THOROUGHLY TESTED, ACCEPTABLE AND RELIABLE.

The Phosphates of the Wheat are its most valuable food property, and are, when properly prepared, the most acceptable nutriment with which to build up the system.

The Blood, Brain and Nerve are the forces which bear the strain of every day work and life, and in order to save sickness it is wise to BUILD FOR HEALTH.

Wheat Bitters are prepared, not by fermentation but by solution and are richest in the Phosphates, while the starch and impure matter are eliminated. These make in themselves a basis, to which is added the best and choicest medicinal qualities, necessary to make it a tonic and bitter. It is at once healthful, pleasant to the taste and must not be confounded with the thousand and one cheap alcoholic bitters which are sold as cure-alls. Medicine is doubly effective when used with food, so as to nourish while it corrects.

Sold by druggists, $1.00 per bottle.

Nothing Short of Unmistakable Benefits

Conferred upon tens of thousands of sufferers could originate and maintain the reputation which AYER'S SARSAPARILLA enjoys. It is a compound of the best vegetable alteratives, with the Iodides of Potassium and Iron,—all powerful, blood-making, blood-cleansing and life-sustaining—and is the most effectual of all remedies for scrofulous, mercurial, or blood disorders. Uniformly successful and certain, it produces rapid and complete cures of Scrofula, Sores, Boils, Humors, Pimples, Eruptions, Skin Diseases and all disorders arising from impurity of the blood. By its invigorating effects it always relieves and often cures Liver Complaints, Female Weaknesses and Irregularities, and is a potent renewer of waning vitality. For purifying the blood it has no equal. It tones up the system, restores and preserves the health, and imparts vigor and energy. For forty years it has been in extensive use, and is to-day the most available medicine for the suffering sick.

Poetry.

A Curious Literary Production.

The following is one of the most curious compositions ever written. It evinces an ingenuity peculiar to its own. The initial letters spell "My boast is in the glorious cross of Christ." The words in italics, when read on the left hand side from top to bottom, and on the right hand side from bottom to top, form the Lord's Prayer complete:

Make known the gospel truth, Our Father, King;
Yield up thy grace, dear Father, from above;
Bless us with hearts which feelingly can sing,
Our life Thou art forever, God of love.
Assuage our grief in love for Christ we pray,
Since the Prince of Heaven and glory died,
Took all our sins, and hallowed the display;
Infinite Being, first man, and then was crucified.
Stupendous God! Thy grace and power make known;
In Jesus' name let all the world rejoice,
Now labor in Thy heavenly kingdom own—
That blessed kingdom, for Thy saints the choice.
How vile to come to Thee is all our cry;
Enemies to Thyself, and all that's Thine,
Graceless our will, we live for vanity;
Loathing the very being, evil in design.
O God, Thy will be done from earth to heaven;
Reclining on gospel, let us live,
In earth, from sin delivered and forgiven,
Oh! as Thyself, but teach us to forgive;
Unless its power temptation doth destroy,
Sure is our fall into the depths of woe;
Carnal in mind, we have not a glimpse of joy
Raised against heaven; in us no hopes we know.
Oh! give us grace, and lead us on the way;
Shine on us with Thy love, and give us peace;
Self and this sin that rise against us, slay;
Oh! grant each day our trespasses may cease;
Forgive our evil deeds, that oft we do;
Convince us daily of them to our shame;
Help us with heavenly bread, forgive us, too,
Recurrent lusts; and we will adorn Thy name.
In Thy forgiveness we as saints can die,
Since for us, our trespasses so high,
Thy Son our Saviour, died on Calvary.

How Seth Hawkins stole the Old Lady's Night-gown.

The Boston News gives the following, as having occurred in one of the villages of the Old Bay State, within the recollection of the writer. We do not know when we have enjoyed so hearty a laugh, as on reading this incident in the life of Seth Hawkins:

Sunday night was the season which Seth chose to do his weekly devours as Mrs. Hornby would say, and his road to neighbor Jones, whose daughter, Sally, was the object of his particular hope, lay across three long miles of territory, stumpy as an old woman's mouth, and as irreclaimable as a prodigal son gone away for the third time.

One all sufficiently dark night, unheeding wind and weather, as gallant and spruce a lover as ever straddled a stump, Seth, in best "bib and tucker," and dickey, and all that, started upon his accustomed weekly pilgrimage to the shrine of Sally Jones—a sweet girl by the way, as strawberries and cream are sweet.

Seth knew every mark, if he could see it; but the night was very dark, and in a little while he became confused in his reckoning, and taking the light which gleamed from farmer Jones' cottage in the distance, for a guide, he pushed boldly on, regardless of intermediate difficulties surging occasionally to the right or to the left, as some obstruction rose in the path, until he ran stem on, as sailors would say, to a huge stump, and rolled incontinently over to the other side.

He gathered himself up as best he could, shook himself to ascertain that no bones were broken and then restarted on his mission of love, his ardor somewhat dampened by feeling the cold night wind playing in fantastic gusts around his body, denoting that the concussion had breached his "oh-fie-for-shame," and that the seven and six penny cassimeres were no more to be the particular delight of his eye, in contemplation of their artistic excellence.

He knew not the extent of the damage sustained, but soon gained the house. His first glance was over his person to ascertain if decency would be violated by an unwonted display; but seeing nothing, and trusting to the voluminous proportions of his coat for concealment, he felt reassured, and took his seat in a proffered chair at the fire.

Whilst conversing with the farmer about the weather, and with the dame upon the matter of cheese, he glanced at Sally, and saw with painful surprise, that she was looking anxiously and somewhat strangely toward a portion of his dress. She averted her eyes as she caught his glance; but again catching her eye upon him he was induced to turn his eye in the same direction, and saw, good heavens! was it his shirt? oozing out of a six inch aperture in the inside of one of his inexpressibles! He instantly changed his position, and from that moment was on nettles. Was he making more revelations by the change? He watched the first opportunity to push the garment in a little. Could he succeed in hiding it, it would relieve his embarrassment. Again he watched his chance, and again stowed away the linen. It seemed interminable, like the doctor's tape worm and the more he worked at it the more there seemed left.

In the meantime, his conversation took the hue of agony, and his answers bore as much relation to the questions asked, as the first line of the Song of Solomon does to the melancholy burthen of "Old Dan Tucker."

At last with one desperate thrust, the whole disappeared, and he cast a triumphant glance toward Sally. One look sufficed to show that she had comprehended the whole, and with the greatest effort was struggling to prevent a laugh. Meeting his glance, she could contain herself no longer, but screaming with accumulated fun, she fled from the room; and poor Seth, unable to endure this last turn of his agony, seized his hat, and dashing madly from the house, clearing the stumps like a racer in the dark, and reaching home he hardly knew when or how.

As soon as he was gone Mrs. Jones looked about for a clean night-gown that she had out for service on the back of the chair on which Seth had sat. She was positive she took it out, but where upon earth it was she could not conceive.

"Sally!" cried the old lady from the door, "have you seen my night-gown?"

"Yes'm" echoed her voice, as if in the last stage of suffocation—"Yes'm, Seth Hawkins wore it home!"

It was unfortunately the case, and Seth had stored it away in the crevasse of his pants! It was returned the next day with an apology, and he subsequently married Sally; but many years afterwards, if any article of any description was missing, of apparel or otherwise, the first suggestion was that Seth Hawkins had stowed it away in his trowsers.

Seth Hawkins is now a prominent and influential merchant in the city of Boston, and often relates the story himself for the amusement of his young friends.

New Era in Quincy.

The 6th day of March, 1882, will be recorded as a new era in the history of old Quincy, for the bold step that the citizens of Quincy then took. It should cause every man, woman and child to rejoice that the dawn of day has began to shine into every household; that darkness has began to disappear, and that the glorious sunshine of liberty is to rule the people. God grant that every town and city in the United States may follow in her footsteps and say "no." We will not be ruled by an unprincipled element that is trying to rule. But those that would rule with justice should invite this inharmonious element to join in and help to roll the great wheel of progression.

Gentlemen, we must be firm in principle if we would wish to see the rising generation noble and good. If we trample upon God's holy laws we may expect our children to follow in our footsteps. I hope our board of selectmen will do their duty the coming year, and look well how they spend the town's money. When they pay out money to the poor, to search and see that they do not pay money to the poor that are better off than some that pay taxes. I see, by the town's report, that there has been money paid the last year to buy fuel to the amount of about twenty-two dollars; and I have seen the beer cart stop at the door of the same family and carry in a box of beer and bottles more then once. I do not feel willing to labor hard and pay taxes to help pay for the beer that such persons drink. It is an insult upon the Town of Quincy. Make those that ask for help of the town work upon the highways and upon the town's land, if they are able, and then they will not be altogether drones upon the town. Many take the advantage of sympathy and become indolent. Man was not put here on the earth to rust out. Kind words never die, some times plain words opens the eye. When we stop and think of the many that have been dealing out intoxicating liquors, need we wonder that so many have been helped outside of the poor house.

A good principled man can do much good in this world; a bad man can do much harm. Oh, that men would learn wisdom; learn to do good and forget evil. Young men drink pure cold water. It will not craze your brain; it will make you bright; it will not take away your manhood. Young ladies beware of the young man that spends his time in the dram shop.

A True Friend.

Married Folks Would be Happier.

If home trials were never told to neighbors.

If they kissed and made up after every quarrel.

If household expenses were proportioned to receipts.

If they tried to be agreeable as in courtship days.

If each remembered the other was a human being, not an angel.

If women were so kind to their husbands as they are to their lovers.

If fuel and provisions were laid in during the high tide of summer.

If both parties remembered that they were married for worse as well as for better.

If men were as thoughtful for their wives as they were for their sweethearts.

If there were fewer silk and velvet street costumes and more plain, tidy house dresses.

If there were fewer "please darlings" in public and more common manners in private.

If wives and husbands would take some pleasure as they go along, and not degenerate into mere toiling machines. Recreation is necessary to keep the heart in its place, and to get along without it is a big mistake.

☞ The Milford Journal says: "To take a drink in Oregon, costs a man so indulging $5. The rum is not worth that money, but the city requires a license costing that sum before a man can get any bitters at any hotel or saloon. It is a penal offence for the proprietors of these establishments to sell to any person who is not armed with such license. Every six months the local papers publish the names of all who have applied for such documents, and the public thereby knows who are drinkers.

As a purifier of the blood, Ayer's Sarsaparilla has no equal. It wonderfully improves the complexion, and brings to old and young the bloom of health.

If you would not have affliction visit you twice, listen, at once to a word of advice, "Try Wheat Bitters."

For the Patriot.

The Manners of Murderers.

It is surprising to notice how strangely some men behave who have been sentenced to death for the highest crime known to the law. At first thought it would seem that all in this terrible condition would carry themselves in the same way, and manifest the same spirit—that is that they would all be thoughtful, sober, penitent and prayerful.

The dreadful fact that a day is appointed by the highest authority, when a man who has been vile enough to deprive a human being of life deliberately, is to be strangled to death, would appear to be sufficient to make the most hardened criminal sober and sad, if not crushed down completely in anguish and despair. I think a good man would have an exceedingly sore spot in his heart, if he knew that between certain hours of a certain day he would surely die, and be conscious of the coming on of the dark night of death.

But the remarkable fact is that some men, who have been convicted of the henious crime of murder and condemned to be hanged on a fixed day, are quiet, calm and collected, and often given to light conversation and even to merriment. We have at this time, three young men, in the chief prison in this city, known as the Tombs, who have been convicted and sentenced to be executed in April. Two of the three criminals have had their cases before three courts, the highest court of appeals affirming the judgment of the two lower courts. Now see their manners as I have observed them for a long time.

Leighton is a mulatto, very light indeed, more than ordinary intelligent. He has fair ability and has received a pretty good education. He killed a young woman with a razor, which, strange to say, appears to be the favorite weapon which colored persons use in their quarrels and fatal fights. The negro takes a razor to kill with; the Italian a knife; the American a pistol; and the Irishman also, when he fails with his fist and his foot with the boot on, or the nailed soled brogan.

Now Leighton is quiet, mild in manners and moderately sociable. Always polite and though not anxious to converse with a visitor, if the visitor speaks to him he will enter into conversation in an intelligent and agreeable way. He had never been arrested for any offence before he committed this crime. He says he did not mean to take the woman's life. He had always led an honest and industrious life. He expresses the deepest sorrow for the awful deed. When he was sentenced to death he addressed the court for one hour. The address was well written. He read it in a clear, unfaltering voice. A large part of it was the word of solemn warning to that class of young men who are living thoughtless and sensual lives. He said he hoped his counsel would be heeded by them. He is a protestant, and says he has prayed for pardon and feels that his sins are forgiven. His manner and conduct, I am glad to say, are becoming to one in his wretched state, sitting in his gloomy cell in the shadows of the scaffold.

Lindram, another criminal condemned to death, is a young man of 28 years. He took the life of a woman also, in whose house he boarded, for the slight provocation of being informed that she wished him to leave. This young man had done no wrong before this, grave enough to be brought to public attention. He is an engraver by trade. He says he has no religious faith whatever. His counsel wanted to make insanity a defence upon his trial. He refused to allow this to be done as he said he was not insane. And if he were not as wise and good as he ought to be he was not a hypocrite. So he maintained that he was entirely sane, as he doubless is, though badly arranged if he is not deranged. Now that he has been convicted and sentenced he is not only willing to be hanged but he is anxious for the day of his execution to come. I am ready to go to the scaffold at any time, he said the other day, for there can be no need of preparation for death when I do not believe in immortality. He says he does not wish to have a clergyman attend him on the scaffold, but as it will please his mother to have one accompany him and offer prayer he will consent for his mother's sake.

This is one redeeming trial in this wretched man's character, he loves his aged widowed mother, who often visits him. The presence of his sorrowful mother affects him sensibly, and he listens to all she says with an affectionate respect. When his counsel and some friends urged the Governor to grant a reprieve that he might have a better preparation, if possible, for death, he said that was useless. He thought if he should be reprieved for four years it would not result in any change of his views, and he would be no better prepared for death then than now. The idea of being imprisoned is very unwelcome. He says he will never consent to be sent to prison. He much prefers to be sent to the scaffold. Though without any religious faith he treats all who go to him with words of spiritual advice and comfort in a respectful and courteous spirit. He can express his thoughts in good and forcible language.

The other condemned person is McGlaire. In several respects this is a remarkable criminal. He is very young for one in his lamentable circumstances. He is not yet 19 years old. He is quite tall and prepossessing in his appearance. He has a pleasant, good natured face, bright smiling black eyes, and very social in his manners. He likes to have friends call to see him and speak with him. His parents, though poor, hard working people, are respectable, and are crushed with grief. This most unfortunate young man has always been a favorite of his mother and his father.

Though so young he has received a pretty good education, and can read and write very well. He is a bright young fellow, with a good head, and his ways are so frank, kind and genial that when you meet him and hear him speak, in a voice unusually pleasant, you would never imagine that he is a criminal of the highest grade, and condemned to the ignominious death of a felon. He says he does not fail to pray often and earnestly to God that he may be forgiven. He says he did not mean to kill the man whose life he took while he was attempting to rob his saloon. He said he thought the saloon-keeper, as he came down stairs, disturbed by his entrance to commit a burglary, was going to shoot him, and he fired in self defence and the shot proved fatal. McGlaire dresses well and neatly, and presents a very tidy appearance. But since he has been sentenced to death he seems to be in a merry mood of mind. He appears to have tried to put the thought of his awful condition as far as possible from his thoughts. He walks about in the inclosure of the corridor, where the condemned criminals are kept, smoking his cigar and chatting in a gay, laughing way with the officers, as if he had no idea that he was a felon condemned to die so soon.

Some visitors were in the Tombs recently who noticed this young man by his fashionable dress and jaunty air and gay manners, and inquired who that young man was in such high glee, with a happy look and a pleasant word and a merry joke for all who came along; when told he was a murderer, sentenced to be hanged in April, they were pale with astonishment. A gentleman said, who observed him as if he were contented and well pleased with his lot, "that scene will never be effaced from my memory." When he looked up and recognized a person who had spoken to him with a smile and a bow, taking out his cigar for politeness sake for a moment, when the question was put, "how do you feel to-day?" The reply was, "Oh, first rate; I hope you are well?" Poor young man, sadly unfortunate young man, crushed by crime in the very bloom of his youth. May his awful doom be an effectual warning to scores and hundreds of young men who are now walking in the broad way which leads to destruction.

Let us trust that the crimson stain of blood guiltiness may be removed from the souls of these young men, through their sincere penitence and the tender mercy of God.

Let Women Remain Women.

The advanced thinkers of the day seem determined not to permit the minds of women to rest in the sphere which it was intended they should fill. Was it ordained that woman should strengthen her pinions of intellect and fly with equal rapidity and force beside man? Must she be urged on out of the path where there is softness and sweetness of soul into the wide ways occupied by men, where the material is met which makes the latter hard and coarse grained. If there is one thing desirable in this age, where it appears there is more to drive women out of than retain them within limits which makes the sex attractive, it is to woo woman back to herself, and instruct her in the vine-clinging, nestling-under-wing ideas, which will keep her as we want woman—tender, mild, and not too much addicted to blue stockings. Learned women are no doubt very superior creatures, but as a general thing a man does not care to have them sit on the other side of his fireside through life. When woman must meet the world and can enter the professions of men, it is well for their pockets, but a sad perversion from the pale of domesticity. It is too bad when women must be men besides. Where there is no necessity for this let them be themselves without the crusting which follows "intellectual culture" as interpreted by strong-minded women and men of "advanced thought."—Commercial.

Don't Worry.

A saying which is often quoted to those who are apt to worry over things that have not happened and may never occur is:—"Don't cross a bridge until you come to it." It is said to have originated in the following way:

There was once a man and woman who planned to spend a day at a friends house, which was some miles distant from their own. So one pleasant morning they started out to make the visit; but they had not gone far before the woman remembered a bridge they had to cross which was very old and unsafe, and she began to worry about it.

"What shall we do about the bridge?" she said to her husband. "I shall never dare to go over it, and we can't cross the river any other way."

"Oh," said the man, "I forgot that bridge; it's a bad place. Suppose that it should break through. We should be drowned."

"Or suppose that you should step on a rotten plank and break your leg, what would become of me and the baby?"

"I don't know," said the man, "what would become of any of us, for I couldn't work, and we should starve to death."

So they went on worrying, till they got to the bridge, when lo and behold, since they had been there last a new bridge had been built; and they crossed over in safety, and found they might as well have saved themselves all their anxiety.

SATURDAY, APRIL 8, 1882.

A Rascally Affair.

We learn from the Boston daily papers that a rascally attempt has been made to extort money from our venerable townsman, the Hon. Charles Francis Adams, and blackmail his family. Fortunately the affair was looked into and resulted in the arrest of the principal rascal, as he was about leaving Boston for New York, on Wednesday. Mr. Adams has been in failing health the past two years, and his memory has become greatly impaired, and he retains but a confused recollection of any recent events. As he was so generally known, and no accident having ever happened him, his family have allowed him to go around unattended on the street, fearing that a consciousness of his decline might disturb him. A gang of rascals in Boston have made a business of preying on elderly persons, and somehow became cognizant of facts regarding Mr. Adams, and worked on him for plunder.

The first intimation that Mr. Adams' family had of the affair came through the Merchants' Exchange Bank. On Friday of last week his clerk was notified that Mr. Adams' account at the bank was overdrawn. This notice occasioned great surprise as the balance on deposit was unusually large, amounting to about $18,000. On inquiry it was found that a check for $17,500, regularly signed and endorsed by Mr. Adams, but filled in by another hand, had been deposited for collection by another depositor in the bank, and the amount had been transferred to the accounts of this depositor.

It not being one of Mr. Adams' usual checks nor was it filled in by him, inquiry was made of the person who deposited the check, and he stated that it had been brought to him for collection and gave the name of the party, of whom he professed to know nothing. He further stated that the suspicious appearance of the check had attracted his notice and he told the party that he must not draw against it until the following Monday, by which time it would certainly be known if everything was all right. As the unknown check was still in the bank, the account was trusteed and the matter put in the hands of a detective for investigation.

The law partner of the party through whom the check was deposited, called at Mr. Adams' office and informed his sons and their counsel that the check represented a sum of money lost by Mr. Adams in a gaming transaction, and intimated that the party was willing to come forward, if guaranteed against immediate arrest, and tell the whole story. He was sent for and the interview was most extraordinary. The parties called themselves J. S. Morrison and J. F. Norton, the latter having an office at 1 Pemberton square. No pretence was made at concealment as Morrison, on belief that the family of Mr. Adams would rather pay almost any sum than allow the story to get public; he acknowledged himself to be a professional banco player and said Mr. A. had been spotted as a good subject for plunder.

Quincy Yacht Club.

The annual meeting of the Quincy Yacht Club was held on Saturday evening last, in the School Committee room, and the following gentlemen were elected officers for the ensuing season:—

Commodore,—Sigourney Butler.
Vice Commodore,—Charles H. Porter.
Fleet Captain,—Peter B. Turner.
Secretary and Treasurer,—N. B. Furnald.
Measurer,—Charles F. Colby.
Judges,— P. B. Turner, James T. Penniman, C. H. Porter, N. B. Furnald, J. M. Glover, C. F. Colby, Samuel Bass, George Saville, G. H. Hitchcock, and Josiah A. Fenno.
Regatta Committee,—George Morton, Benjamin F. Bass, James T. Penniman and George Saville.
Committee on Membership, — B. F. Bass, George Saville, Peter B. Turner, and G. W. Morton.

The Treasurer's report shows an increase in membership and over one hundred dollars in the locker.

The Club will probably give this season five club regattas and one grand union regatta open to all yachts belonging to any organized Club.

Appointments.

The Selectmen have made the following appointments:—

Town Physician, Dr. S. M. Donovan.
Keeper and Matron of Almshouse, Mr. and Mrs. George A. Ordway.
Town Clock, Charles F. Pettengill.
Janitor Town Hall, James E. Maxim.
Truant Officer, Samuel B. Turner.

SPECIAL POLICE.

On By-laws, W. M. French, F. A. Spear, George H. Locke, Joseph Warren Hayden, Walter H. Ripley, Edward H. Richardson.
For West Quincy, John Harris, William B. Barry, Edward McDevitt.
Congregational Church, John A. Pratt.
St. John's Church, George Cahill.
Granite Quarries, James B. Fletcher.
At Large, E. S. Fellows, George B. Pray, James E. Maxim, Samuel B. Turner, A. G. Olney, George A. Ordway.

UNITARIAN. At the First Church, as on former occasions, special notice will be taken of Easter Sunday. The pulpit and its neighborhood will be beautifully decorated with plants and flowers; the excellent choir of the church has prepared appropriate music, and the pastor will preach a sermon upon the theme suggested by the day. In the evening there will be an Easter Vesper service. The following anthems are to be sung at these services:

MORNING ANTHEMS.

This is the Day,	S. C. Cooke
They have taken away my Lord.	Dr Stainer
Christ our Passover.	John Goss

EVENING ANTHEMS.

This is the Day.	John Sewall
Christ is Risen,	Dr. Elvey
The Lord is my Strength.	Novello

VESTRY. At the adjourned parish meeting of the Universalist Society of Quincy, held on Fast Day, it was voted that the building committee proceed at once to erect a vestry on land adjoining the church. Messrs. William Parker, Levi C. Ela and Joseph G. Brackett are the building committee, and they were instructed not to exceed the sum of four thousand dollars in its erection.

☞ A man in Florida has grafted in a grape fruit tree six varieties of the citrus family. Growing from the same stump are shaddocks, lemons, limes, sweet and sour oranges

Brief Locals.

☞ April showers are numerous.

☞ There has been seven deaths in Quincy the past week.

☞ Rev. Mr. Kelley will preach at the almshouse to-morrow.

☞ The regular monthly session of Probate Court in Quincy, will be held on Wednesday morning next, at 9 o'clock, at Town House.

☞ Fast Day was quite pleasant, and quite a number of our citizens improved the day by moving their furniture to a newly leased house.

☞ Deputy Sheriff French has been housed the present week, but we learned yesterday that he is improving and hopes to get out in a few days.

☞ There will be a special meeting of Paul Revere Post 88, of Quincy, at on Monday evening next, April 10. Comrades are requested to be present.

☞ Miss Mamie Sylvester, of Newton, but, formerly a resident of this town, has been visiting the past week, her schoolmate, Mrs. Charles H. Winslow.

☞ Rev. Mr. Eaton, of Brighton, preached a very able doctrinal discourse at the Universalist Church last Sunday, which was much admired by an attentive audience.

☞ Bert. Newcomb, who about five years ago went to Wisconsin to live, returned on Saturday last to this town, and is as eager for a good game of base ball as ever.

☞ Mrs. Isaac M. Holt returned home on Saturday from a pleasant visit of some four months in Florida. She reports good health of the Quincy folks residing in the section she visited.

☞ Dr. A. Salls, of Champlain, N. Y., a Homepathic physician, has taken residence at Mrs. Underwood's. He is a gentleman of experience, and comes to us highly recommended.

☞ All persons intending to contribute plants and flowers for the Easter decorations of Christ Church are requested to send them to the Church early Saturday, labelling them in order that they may be returned to their respective owners.

☞ Master Henry N. W. Rideout, in company with his aunt, Miss Carrie L. Rideout, a teacher in the schools at Brookline, is improving his vacation by a visit to some of the many points of interest to be found in the states of New York and New Jersey.

☞ We learn that Henry H. Faxon, Esq., has purchased the Torrey estate adjoining his residence on Washington street for $5000. It consists of half an acre of valuable land and some old buildings thereon. The property belonged to the estate of the late Eleazer Frederick.

DIRECTORS CHOSEN. The Quincy Mutual Fire Insurance Company held their annual meeting at their office on Wednesday afternoon for the choice of directors. The following gentlemen were elected:—

Israel W. Munroe, Thomas Curtis, Charles A. Howland, John Hardwick, Charles H. Porter, of Quincy; Alfred Loring, Hingham, H. W. Blanchard, Boston, Sumner A. Hayward, Brockton, Royal W. Turner, Randolph, Chas. Breck, Milton, J. Alba Davis, West Roxbury, J. F. C. Hyde, Newton, George Marston, New Bedford.

The directors hold their meeting next week for the election of president.

SHIPPING AT QUINCY POINT. Arrived March 25th, Schooner Emma C. Rommell, Capt. Sloan from Philadelphia, with coal to D. Howard Bills.

Arrived March 27th, Schooner R. & S. Corson, Capt. Lambert, from Philadelphia; same day Schooner Kolon, Capt. Libby, from New York; the 28th, Schooner John Stroup, Capt. Sturgis, from Philadelphia; all with coal to Cyrus Patch.

Sailed April 8th, Schooner Helena E. Russell, Capt. Mehaffey, for New York, with granite from Churchill & Hitchcock and others.

DISTRICT COURT. The following cases have been before the court this week:—

Patrick McMahar, of Weymouth, second drunk. Fined $5 and costs.

James Boyd, of Quincy, for the larceny of a gold ring of the value of ten dollars. Discharged.

Martin F. Smith, of Randolph, for keeping a liquor nuisance. Found guilty and fined $50 and costs. Appealed.

Timothy Cronin, of Quincy, for being drunk was fined the usual amount, $1 and costs.

QUINCY MUTUAL. The thirty-first annual statment of the Quincy Mutual Fire Insurance Company will be found in our columns to-day. We take pride in publishing the reports of this Company, as they always shows a handsome year's work. The increase in the cash fund the past year has been over forty thousand dollars; and the other exhibits show that the business has been careful managed the past year, and that the Company is in a very prosperous condition.

SEEDS. We would call the attention of farmers and others who are desirous of procuring choice vegetable and flower seeds to the advertisement in our columns of Messrs. Everett & Gleason, 34 South Market street, Boston. These gentlemen have had large experience, and are capable of furnishing that which can be relied upon. Their stock is new, and of the choicest kinds. Their catalogue is sent free to all applicants, and is highly appreciated by farmers and gardeners.

☞ The State tax for Massachusetts this year will be about $2,500,000, an excess of $1,000,000 over the past two years.

Quincy Point Items.

The officers of the Ladies' Aid Society elected for the ensuing year are, President,— Mrs. J. L. Whiton; Vice Presidents,— Mrs. T. H. Newcomb, Mrs. T. B. Thomas and Mrs. H. M. Federhen; Secretary,— Miss Nettie Penney; Treasurer,— Mrs. Schuyler Penney.

Several of the Point Knights of Honor visited Brockton Wednesday evening.

A petition is being circulated asking the Selectmen to appoint Mr. H. H. Faxon, a special police to enforce the liquor law; we hope it will receive the favorable consideration of the Board.

The Quincy Point Temperance Association held its regular meeting Wednesday evening. The exercises comprised readings by Mrs. W. T. Barry and Rev. G. B. Lawton, and a lesson in astronomy by Mr. W. T. Barry. Next Wednesday evening there will be a debate upon the following: Resolved, —That the best interests of this country will be promoted by prohibiting Chinese immigration. Mr. H. M. Federhen, Rev. G. B. Lawton and Mrs. Dr. Harlow in the affirmative, and Rev. G. H. Hastings, Mr. Walton Hall and Mrs. H. Farnum Smith in the negative.

There were many pleasant family reunions Fast Day.

Mr. I. F. Hall and family were at the Point, Thursday.

An Easter concert will be given tomorrow evening in the Christian Union Church, commencing at 7 o'clock. The subject will be "The Day of Triumph" and the exercises will consist of anthems, readings, scripture recitations and addresses by C. W. Carter and Edward Southworth of the Congregational Sabbath School. The church will be made attractive by floral decorations as in years past and every effort will be made to have the exercises interesting and instructive.

Wednesday afternoon the Ladies' Benevolent Society met at the residence of Mrs. H. M. Federhen.

Will the Road Commissioners be kind enough to send teams to remove the stone heap, left by some one, in the centre of Washington street, near the residence of Mr. Kittredge? It has been a nuisance for a long while.

The Vulture Engine Company held its regular meeting Monday evening and appointed a committee to interview the Engineers in regard to the appointment of a steward; it seems the company has elected one but the Engineers have not approved of him and so far as we can learn do not intend to. The company met Fast day and played the engine, and afterward had a chowder at the engine house. Special meetings have been frequent during the week.

The young ladies between twelve and sixteen years of age who attend the Christian Union Church, have formed an association called "The Busy Bees" and have met frequently to prepare articles for a fair, which they intend to hold shortly for the benefit of the church.

Seventy vessels passed through the draw of the Point bridge during the month of March. Mr. J. W. Hayden who tends the draw, has asked the Selectmen to pay him two hundred dollars per year for his services; as he is obliged to be at his post every day in the year. It seems as though the amount asked for (which is in addition to his house rent) is very reasonable.

There was a smash-up at the Neck, Tuesday; two light teams collided and the parties in one were thrown out and somewhat bruised; those in the other, drove rapidly away in the direction of the Centre.

The annual business meeting of the Baptist Church was held last Monday evening, and the following officers elected:—Clerk,—M. A. Marks; Treasurer,— D. Howard Bills; Trustees,— D. H. Bills, Robert Clark, M. A. Marks, W. T. Barry, and Z. H. Sidelinger.

Last week this church completed the payment of $1000, on account of the debt on their Chapel, making a total of about $3300, which has been raised and paid for their building, within two years, in addition to amounts raised for current expenses, and contributions to denominational societies. While they are indebted to numerous friends for substantial aid, the larger portion of this amount has been contributed by themselves. Since occupying their new building there has been a steady increase at all of their services. We understand that Rev. Geo. B. Lawton, — who encouraged the church to build, and who, since his resignation as pastor has been engaged in securing some financial aid in reducing the indebtedness, — will probably enter another field of service in a few months. The Church is now looking for a pastor. Rev. I. C. Archibald of Newton will preach to-morrow.

Rev. Geo. B. Williams has removed from Germantown to the Centre.

Improve Around Your Homes.

Spring has come, and with it the usual improvements which everybody admires to see. There is nothing that so cheers the heart as to go through a town, and see neat and well-kept residences. This much we can all do to cheer the heart of every passer-by; little knowing how many sad hearts are encouraged and brightened by the sight of neat, handsome houses and well-kept lawns. We are more than glad to see the fine appearance that the property of I. G. Whiton is assuming, and thank him cordially for his efforts to beautify the Point district as he has done. We wish all the residents of the Point would do as well, then there would be no where a prettier drive or walk than our own district.

Neponset.

Two large three-masted schooners, from Mobile, with Cypress lumber for A. T. Stearns, have recently arrived at Neponset.

On Saturday afternoon last Mrs Jos. Pillsbury, one of our aged citizens, and old resident of this village died suddenly. She had been about the house as well as usual that day; supposed cause was heart disease. She was 66 years of age.

The pulpit of the Appleton M. E. Church was occupied by a lady preacher last Sunday. Union services were held in this church Fast Day.

B.

NEPONSET. The Hawthorne Social Club intend giving their third and last reception of the season at Woods Hall, Neponset, Friday evening next. But a limited number of tickets have been sold and a pleasant time may be expected by all who attend.

Mrs. Thompson Baxter.

All who have known of the useful, active life which has drawn to a close since our last publication will be glad to linger for a few moments and devote them to the memory of a good woman.

Mrs. Thompson Baxter, who for nearly fifty years has lived in Quincy, died at her late residence on Washington street on Sunday last.

She was born in Springfield, N. H., May 24th, 1805; and was indeed a woman of "ye olden time." Quick to see what needed to be done, she was as ready to do it. Her hands were always busy in some good work. She was brought up in the trying times succeeding the Revolution and then learned those lessons of economy, independence and promptitude in action which made her so useful.

She was deeply interested in the war of our own times, losing one who was near and dear to her in our country's service. Unwearied in her efforts, she spent many, many hours working in every way to forward the good cause of the Woman's Sanitary Commission. She was ever ready in social and private life to do more than her part, watching with the sick even within a few years.

After a weary period of suffering and distress, which friends and children labored in vain to much alleviate, she has passed on where the "wicked cease from troubling and the weary are at rest."

The funeral services conducted by Rev. Samuel Kelley were held at her home on Tuesday. Appropriate and solemn, they were agreeably diversified by singing, which is always welcome in the house of mourning.

Mr. M. A. Perkins, Mr. J. R. Arnold, Mrs. R. M. Sanborn and Miss Abbie Arnold of South Braintree very touchingly and finely rendered the following pieces: "She's gone to the beautiful land." "Come unto me" and "Rest."

"I will not mock thee, with the poor world's common
And heartless phrase
Nor wrong the memory of a saintly woman
With idle praise."

"With silence only as their benediction
God's angels come
Where, in the shadow of a great affliction
The soul sits dumb."

"Yet, would I say what thy own heart approveth
Our Father's will,
Calling to Him the dear one whom He loveth,
Is mercy still."

"Not upon thee or thine the solemn angel
Hast evil wrought:
Her funeral anthem is a glad evangel
The good die not."

"God calls our loved ones, but we lose not wholly
What he hath given;
They live on earth, in thought and deed as truly
As in his heaven."

East Milton Items.

The annual exhibition of the Milton High School took place Thursday evening, March 30th. This portion of the town was represented in the graduating class by Orissa M. Baxter and Arthur A. Merritt, who acquitted themselves with high honors.

On the following evening Mr. Tuell, principal of the school, gave a reception at his residence to the graduates of '80 and '81, and the present classes. It was not until late that they bade their honored principal and his genial lady good-night.

Last Tuesday evening the members of the West Quincy Literary Society called in a body upon their retiring president, Miss Mollie Zeigler, at her home in East Milton, and after spending most of the evening in a pleasant, sociable way, completely surprised her with a set of Shakespeare's complete works, handsomely bound. Mr. Benj. Fuller presented the gift in behalf of the society, as a token of their appreciation of her services as president, and also with many good wishes for her future success and happiness. Miss Zeigler's resignation was caused by her removal from town. Miss Lena Holt was elected her successor.

The East Milton Literary Society met at Mrs. Brokenshire's last Wednesday evening. Miss Frye gave for the evening's entertainment an able discourse on Daniel Webster.

THISTLE-DOWN.

Longfellow.

April 5th, 1882.

To the Publishers of the Patriot.

The sermon which Rev. Wm. Everett preached at Berkley street Church, and from which you quote, in your last Saturday's issue, was an excellent one, and most of his remarks upon Longfellow were admirable, but I think, for one, that it would have been better had he remembered the homely old adage "comparisons are odious." Longfellow's poems are what theyare—good—if he had written differently they would have been unlike himself; he has (had alas!) his special style of genius and ideas, his special way of expressing those ideas, but I think Mr. Longfellow so simple and unpretending as to all lovers of true poetry, to have it said of him that he "sometimes condescended to translate Goethe," it would have been a shock, and I do not think that he would have regarded it as a compliment, however it might have been meant, for praise should be tempered with judgment.

Surely one may love and admire Longfellow without detriment to the glorious German poet, whose wondrous genius absorbs, destroys, disperses all things approaching the gross in his text, as the sweet strong winds of heaven remove our earthly impurities

Camp Fire at Weymouth.

On Tuesday evening last some thirty members of Paul Revere Post attended the grand camp fire given by Reynolds Post, No. 58, of Weymouth, and the result was a decidedly good time. Some nine Posts were represented from Norfolk County.

The Town Hall was well filled, some 350 being present, who enjoyed the turkey supper that was furnished by Reynolds Post 58. Mr. T. D. Cook of Boston was the caterer. At 8.45 the guests were ushered into a hall where was spread all that could be desired in the form of edibles; unlike other camp fires the comrades were treated with turkey instead of the old New England dish, baked beans. After the cravings of the stomach were satisfied, speech-making followed, which so enlivened the occasion that all would gladly have stayed longer. Singing was furnished by the Star Quartette of Weymouth Landing.

The benefit of these camp fires is to encourage the members of the Grand Army in the good work which they perform, and all veterans, with proper and necessary qualifications, should not fail to join the ranks and swell the Grand Army to its utmost capacity.

Weymouth.

A very enjoyable evening was spent at the private party given at Clapp's Hall, on Thursday evening. Hartshorn and Norton's band, as usual, gave fine music.

The boot and shoe business remains quiet in this place. The manufacturers expect but little work before the buyers have placed their fall orders.

Miss Jennie B. Hagan of Vermont, conducted the Spiritual services at Williams' Hall, last Sunday. Miss H. will occupy the platform the remaining Sundays in April, afternoon and evening. Collection in the afternoon; evening 10 cents.

The carpenters are nearly all employed. A new livery stable, near the market on Washington Square, is being erected; also a large building on land belonging to Dr. A. G. Nye, near Williams' hall; the first floor will be occupied by Alfred Wyman. It is rumored that the Delphi Lodge, K. of P. will occupy the second and third stories. On Lincoln Square M. C. Bryant is having built a large two-story building, to be used by M. C. Bryant & Co., grocers.

Wilkins, the horse dealer, has disposed of nearly all of the horses he lately purchased in Kentucky.

Appropriate Easter services will be held at the Episcopal Church, on Front street, to-morrow.

Not only is the boot and shoe business dull, but we are informed that in some places the newspaper trade is quiet, and some of the workingmen employed in printing offices, after substituting the word printer for farmer, have learned the following lines of the poet:

Corn for the rich man, corn for the poor,
Corn for the chickens, around the door.
Corn for the master, corn for the dogs,
Corn for the cattle, corn for the hogs;
Corn for the drist mill, corn for the shop,
Corn for the Maine farmer, Devils to pop.

The new hall on Washington Square will not be the largest in the village. Lincoln Hall contains many more square feet.

The storm prevented many from attending the concert given by the Moab male quartette on Tuesday evening, in the lecture room of the Union Church. The fine singers on this occasion were assisted by Miss Ella Chamberlain, the celebrated whistler of Boston, and Mrs. J. G. Worster, Miss S. Josie Dowse, Miss S. Allen, Miss H. Thayer, and Mr. Nate C. Wheeler of Weymouth, with Mr. Lewis E. Tilden and Mr. J. W. Wheeler as accompanists. The fifteen numbers announced by programme were given entire and with perfect satisfaction to those present.

NORFOLK, SS. PROBATE COURT.

TO the Next-of-Kin, Creditors, and all other persons interested in the estate of

GEORGE W. WHITE,

late of Braintree in said County, deceased, intestate:

Whereas, application has been made to said Court to grant a letter of administration on the estate of said deceased, to Nancy White and William Walter Dennett both of Braintree, in the County of Norfolk,

You are hereby cited to appear at a Probate Court to be holden at Hyde Park, in said County of Norfolk, on the fourth Wednesday of April, current, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, to show cause if any you have, against granting the same.

And said petitioner is hereby directed to give public notice thereof, by publishing this Citation once a week, for three successive weeks, in the newspaper called the Quincy PATRIOT, printed at Quincy, the last publication to be two days at least, before said Court.

Witness, GEORGE WHITE, Esquire, Judge of said Court, this fifth day of April, in the year one thousand eight hundred and eighty-two.

JOSEPH W. LOMBARD, Auctioneer
Quincy, Mass.

Administratrix's Sale.

A LARGE and Beautiful Home Estate for sale in Quincy, Mass. Will be sold at Public Auction on the premises, on MONDAY, April 10th, 1882, at 4 o'clock, P. M., the homestead of the late Samuel Curtis, on Franklin street; comprising one half acre of land in a high state of cultivation, well stocked with Fruit Trees, all in bearing condition together with a large two-story Mansion House, containing twelve apartments, with large L attached, and a good cellar, with walls of granite and brick floor; and a never failing well of water. Also, a large Stable, roomy and convenient. The lot fronts on Franklin street about 100 feet, with granite edge stone and iron fence.

The public seldom find so valuable an estate thrown upon the market to be sold to the highest bidder. Parties contemplating securing a home, should not forget to be at this sale, situated as it is within two minutes' walk of the Quincy Adams Depot, where thirty trains run to and from Boston daily; near Schools, Churches, and Grocery Stores. The neighborhood is unsurpassed, while the drives are numerous and splendid, and within thirty minutes' ride of the watering places. Trains leave Boston for Quincy at 2.30 P. M., and return at 4.48 on the day of sale. Sale positive, weather fair or foul.

Terms, $100 down.

By order of
ABIGAIL L. GREGG,
Administratrix.

Immediately after the sale of House, one Piano, in good condition and splendid tone, for cash.

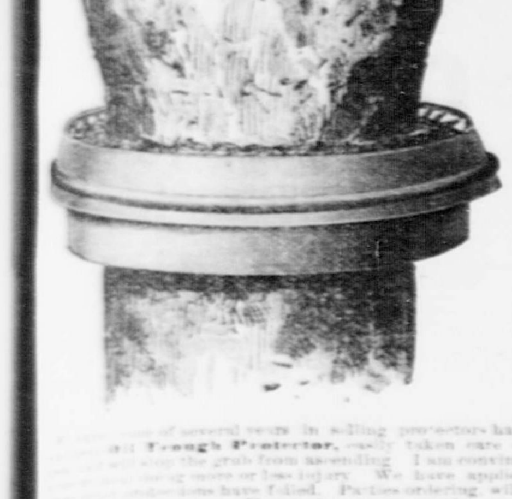
THOMAS' TROUGH TREE PROTECTORS.

(Patented August 9, 1881.)

This Improved Protector effectually protects the trees against the

Canker Worms.



PLEASE Examine our new Protector. Below are some of the reasons why every one owning trees should use this Protector.

1. It is a first-class tree Protector, with a perpendicular front to the oil-pan, which prevents the oil from blowing out.
2. It has a pan large enough to contain oil for the season.
3. It is manufactured from heavy zinc, and will last for years.
4. Being corrugated prevents it sagging when on the trees.
5. The protectors are smaller in the centre, which prevents the packing from falling through.
6. We use tow for packing, so there is no danger of girdling or injuring the tree.
7. By using our protectors, you will get more and finer fruit.
8. It is so constructed as to be a perfect barrier against canker worms; it will prevent codling moths, tussock moths, bark lice, curculio, caterpillars, etc., from ascending the trees.
9. This Protector is so cheap that every one owning trees can apply it. It is simply insuring your trees against insects for a few cents a year.

[illegible] of several years in selling protectors has taught me what is required by the public [illegible] Trough Protector, easily taken care of and something that cannot injure the [illegible] will stop the grub from ascending. I am convinced that nothing can be fastened solid to [illegible] more or less injury. We have applied our Protectors to hundreds of trees, [illegible] protections have failed. Parties ordering will please give their orders early to insure [illegible] on time. Now is the time to put them on and prevent the codling moths, curculio, [illegible] tussock moth from ascending the trees.

The Price of our Protectors is

Neatest, cheapest and most durable Protector in the market.

DURGIN'S

BEEF, IRON AND WINE.

—IS MADE OF—

Extract of Beef,
Citrate of Iron and
the Best Sherry Wine.

—o—

In this preparation are combined the stimulant properties of Wine, and the nutriment of Beef, with the tonic powers of Iron; the effect of which on the blood is so justly valued. The peculiar feature of this combination is that it

Combines Nutriment with Stimulus.

In a majority of cases, along with failure of strength, and indeed as one cause of that failure, there is an inability to digest nourishing food. Hence it is very desirable to furnish nourishment in a form acceptable to the stomach, and, at the same time, to excite this organ to do its duty. On the other hand, wine stimulus, although needed, is ill borne if given by itself, producing headache, excitement and other symptoms, which may be avoided by the addition of a nutritious substance, such as Extract of Beef.

It can also be taken in this way by the most delicate or sensitive woman or child, to whom it may be inadmissable as usually given. Prompt results will follow its use in cases of sudden exhaustion, arising either from acute or chronic diseases, and it will prove a Valuable Restorative for all convalescents.

As a nutritive tonic it would be indicated in impaired nutrition, impoverishment of the blood, and in all the forms of General Debility. Each tablespoonful contains one ounce of the Extract of Beef, with two grains of Citrate of Iron dissolved in Sherry Wine.

Last Quarter, April 11, 1.46 A. M.

☞ The official statistics show that 769,919 bushels of potatoes, valued at $438,461, have been imported into the United States since last March from Ireland, Scotland, Nova Scotia and Canada.

☞ The Czar of Russia has decreed that liquor shall be sold at only one place in each village, by a native who is appointed and receives a salary and nothing beyond, and is liable to imprisonment if any one gets drunk on his premises. If a community becomes notorious for drunkenness, the sale of liquor is to be stopped entirely.

☞ The clerk of the United States Supreme Court has salaries and fees amounting to about forty thousand dollars a year. No reporter is allowed to take notes on paper of plea or decision in that court, while the court is in session. Each justice has a body-servant to whom the government pays twelve hundred dollars a year.

☞ Somebody started the cruel rumor that Jay Gould was financially embarrassed, and so, just to allay the burning in his gentle bosom, the sufferer invited three or four brother-sharks to his closet in New York, recently, and modestly spread before them the fruits of his honest toil, aggregating $54,000,000. His boarding-house mistress has decided that he can stay.

A FRUGAL PEOPLE. The statistics show that in some particulars the Chinese will bear imitation. In the San Francisco jail, in the year 1880, there were 165 inmates, of whom only five were Chinese. In the county hospital, 2955 inmates, of whom only 10 were Chinese. In 8655 arrests for drunkenness, not a Chinaman is found. In sobriety, in frugality, these people excel everybody on the face of the earth. The United States cannot afford to close its ports to any people who desire to change their condition for the better.

☞ In the pretty town of Morton, Delaware Co., Pa., they have gone the right way about pushing the place ahead. A town-improvement society has been organized for the purpose of raising funds for necessary improvements. They assess business houses and dwellings as follows: Houses valued at $1000 or less, $1 per year; houses valued at $2000 or more, $2; business places, from $3 to $5; unmarried men over twenty-one are asked to pay $1 each. The tax is, of course, optional; but a lage number have expressed their intention of complying with the terms.

☞ In the North American Review for April, Gov. Eli H. Murray, of Utah, treats of the existing crisis in the political fortunes of that territory. According to the present method of local government there, the minority of the population, the Gentiles, though they possess the greater part of the wealth of the territory, are practically without a voice in legislation. The author proposes a drastic yet entirely practicable remedy for these and all the other evils prevalent in Utah. An article entitled "Why they Come," by Edward Self, is devoted to the consideration of the many important questions connected with European immigration to this country. Dr. Henry A. Martin, replying to a recent article by Henry Bergh, defends the practice of vaccination. E. L. Godkin has an article on "The Civil Service Reform Controversy;" Senator Riddleberger on "Bourbonism in Virginia;" and General Albert Ordway on "A National Militia." Finally there is a paper of extraordinary interest on the exploration of the ruined cities of Central America.

The Review is for sale by E. B. Souther.

CARPETS. During the past ten years there has probably been more improvement made in the designs, coloring and general style of carpets than in any other branch of interior furnishing.

The large corporations like the Lowell, Bigelow and Roxbury Carpet Companies employ the best designing talent in the country, and this spring, more than at any previous time, their productions exhibit a high grade of artistic merit.

The huge figures and characters, yellows, reds, greens, and other old-fashioned colors, have entirely disappeared, and the modest, small-figured carpets, perhaps copied from some old Eastern rugs, are seen in their stead.

While the colors to-day are old gold, olive, ecru, Venetian red, peacock blue and other modern shadings.

Then the wide borders, some as wide as the carpet itself, add greatly to the general style and assist in producing the rug effect now so desirable.

In the carpet business the most important factor in this revolution has been the large dealer, who has united the practical with the æsthetic and produced a happy medium in the carpet of to-day.

In this city John H. Pray, Sons & Co. have always taken the lead, doing a large wholesale business in connection with their retail, and controlling a great many exclusive patterns.

They have been in a position and found it to their advantage to devote especial attention to improvements in design and colors, and it is in no small degree due to them that American carpets have attained that standard of excellency for which they are now noted.

Messrs. Pray & Sons have always been staunch supporters of American carpets from the time they were first manufactured.

They realized early that the Lowell, Bigelow and Roxbury carpets were equal, if not superior, to any thing made either in this country or abroad, and they feel satisfied with the result of their adherence to native talent, ingenuity and industry.—Boston Traveller.

For the Patriot.

Washington Letter.

WASHINGTON, April 4th, 1882.

The past week in Congress has been devoted largely to a discussion of the tariff question. Mr. Carlisle made a very powerful argument in favor of the immediate and direct action on the part of Congress. Mr. Kasson conceded the necessity of the revision of tariff duties but advocated referring the question to an extra legislative body for investigation and report. The reputation of both these gentlemen, and the ability with which they discussed this great economical question, held the attention of the house as it has not been held before, this session. Mr. Kasson argued that Congress was unable to legislate intelligently on this subject. He insisted that members of Congress were under the influence of local prejudices and that they were handicapped by party platforms. For these reasons, and in view of the fact that the subject was of such importance as to demand the entire attention of those to whom its consideration should be intrusted, he contended that a revision of the tariff could be more speedily brought about through the labor of a committee of experts. Mr. Carlisle, on the contrary, argued the duty of Congress to act, and to act at once, on a matter that was so vitally important to the business interests of the country as an adjustment of custom duties. He insisted that the bill shifting the duty of Congress to the shoulders of a commission of experts could lead to nothing beneficial, but would, on the contrary, serve to keep in a state of agitation and suspense the very interests which it now intended to relieve. The debate was continued throughout the week, perhaps the most noteworthy speech being that of Mr. Dunnell, who, deserting the ground occupied by the Republican party, took the position that Congress, and Congress alone, was competent to act in this matter. Reviewing the disasters which overtook the Democratic party in the forty-fifth and forty-sixth Congresses, he attributed them to the failure of that party to redeem its pledges to revise the tariff and he warned his colleagues that the same disasters would overtake them if they shrink this work.

The reduction of the public debt by $16,462,947 for the month of March is the largest monthly reduction, except that of last September, that has been recorded for several years. These enormous monthly reductions of the debt show the healthy condition of the national finances and the marvelous growth of national resources, but they do not fully show the results that are accomplished, and it is only when the results of a term of years are aggregated that we can fully realize what has been accomplished. In 1865 the interest bearing debt was the greatest in the history of the country, viz: $2,381,530,000 and the interest upon it $151,000,000. The interest bearing debt is now only $1,514,752,700, and the annual interest about $61,000,000. This shows that within the last sixteen years the bonded debt has been reduced $866,787,000, effecting thereby a saving of $90,000,000 per year in interest. In the same period there has been a reduction of the non-interest bearing debt of $163,377,000 making the total reduction since 1865, over one billion of dollars! The daily decrease since August 31, 1865, on which day the public debt was greatest, has averaged over $142,000. The total receipts in the Treasury for the present month show an increase over those of March 1881 of $4,300,000. It may be said without exaggeration that history does not record a financial statement that will compare with that of the United States since the war.

ADAMS.

MR. PELEG FORD, of Greenbush, Mass., relates how he restored a piece of run-out land to fertility, as follows:—

"I have a field of one and a half acres (rather scant measure), which was planted in squashes in 1880. It was only moderately manured, and each hill had a handful of Bradley's Phosphate. At the last hoeing of the squashes, I hoed in herds-grass seed. I had a good crop of squashes, and the grass seed took well."

"Last spring, early in April, I top-dressed the whole field with four hundred pounds of the same Phosphate (about two hundred and seventy-five pounds per acre). On the 1st of July, I cut from it nine thousand five hundred and fifty pounds of hay, weighed when dry and fit to put in the barn. This crop was cut before it had fairly blossomed out, on account of its lodging badly. In September I cut another crop of three thousand two hundred and twenty pounds, although on account of the dry season it was much lighter than it would otherwise have been."

"As this land was considered all run out when I broke it up in 1870, I think these are good crops, and give Bradley's Phosphate great credit for them. But my neighbors and I were most surprised to notice that we could count the squash hills in which the Phosphate was used the previous year. The grass was nearly a foot higher in those spots in both crops, and they could be plainly seen at quite a distance."

"This proves to us that Bradley's Phosphate has great lasting qualities, and is not exhausted by the first crop."

WORTH SUBSCRIBING TO. The Spring number of Ehrichs' Fashion Quarterly is out; and as usual it is full of matters interesting to ladies. Commencing with the important item of ladies' costumes, it traverses the whole field of feminine necessities, and shows the latest styles in bonnets, feathers, flowers, shoes, buttons, gloves, worsted wear, and a hundred other necessities and accessories of the toilet. The book is filled from end to end with illustrations drawn from actual articles of costume, and the descriptions which follow the pictures are so tersely and clearly written that no lady can be at a loss in making her selections, and deciding exactly what will suit her. As a compendium of the great art of "shopping," the Fashion Quarterly possesses a value all its own. Other fashion magazines illustrate the newest styles only; but the Quarterly gives all the popular styles, whether old or new, and adds the price of each. Thus a lady, after consulting its pages, knows exactly within what limits of form, color, and style of trimming her selections for the toilet must be made, and has besides the superior advantage, obtainable from no other quarter, of knowing just what everything should cost her. A magazine like this is as much a necessity to every lady, as is the trade paper, with quotations and reports, to every merchant. It is a useful, well-conducted family magazine, and, at its price of fifty cents a year, should find no lack of subscribers. The publishers are Ehrich Bros., of Eighth avenue, New York.

☞ The domes of the great churches in Moscow and St. Petersburg are plated with gold nearly a quarter of an inch thick. The dome of the Isaac Cathedral in St. Petersburg represents a value of $45,000,000 and that of the Church of the Saviour in Moscow, $15,000,000.

The remarkable success which is attending DR. F. E. GREENE, of 34 Temple Place, Boston, in the cure of diseases peculiar to females, is without parallel. We should advise our lady readers suffering from this class of diseases to consult him without delay.

ELECTRINE SOAP.

To Housekeepers.

We are manufacturing this chemically pure and unadulterated Soap, which is warranted not to injure the finest fabrics.

Astonishing Facts.

A large proportion of Soaps that are sold are made from Putrid and Filthy Grease obtained from hospitals, jails and tenement houses, and the loathsome and repulsive Fat of Dead Animals that have possibly died of disease, and which no process can render fit for human use. Most of our eminent medical men are aware of this, and have become alarmed at the great increase of skin diseases transmitted from impure Soap. Microscopic examinations have revealed the germs of disease in Soap to an alarming extent.

PURE SOAP.

Chemically pure Soap is white and is made of pure beef tallow, borax and other pure ingredients, and any attempt to cheapen it is a fraud upon the public.

ELECTRINE SOAP
HAS NO ADULTERATION!!

Ask your grocer for it, and you will find that it is cheaper, will wash easier, save the clothes and labor, do the work better and quicker than any Soap you ever used.

A Human Barometer.

The Real Relation Between the Human Body and the Weather Scientifically Explained.

Scientific American.

One of the most valuable developments of modern science along the line of human necessity is the National Weather Bureau at Washington. Experience has shown that eighty-six per cent. of the predictions of the signal service are accurate; and these predictions are unquestionably of the greatest advantage to the seaman, the agriculturist and the entire commercial world. The service has proven its necessity by its usefulness, for in past times the facilities for foretelling atmospheric changes were meagre indeed. The only indications our fathers had of coming changes in the weather were aching limbs, twinging joints or painful corns. These "indications," though crude, were usually correct, and hence naturally suggest the enquiry as to the relation between the human system and the weather. The body is unquestionably an excellent barometer. It foretells changes in the atmosphere long before they occur, and this fact has been taken advantage of by physicians who, when all other agencies fail, prescribe a change of air, thus hoping the body may find an atmospheric condition better suited to its needs. And yet the real relation between the human body and the weather has never been fully understood, nor has there ever been, until now, a correct explanation of what rheumatism (which seems in league with the atmosphere) really is. It was originally thought by many to be a trouble in the joints, and as such was treated in the most strange, not to say, ridiculous manner. This theory became dispelled when the same trouble attacked the muscles, and the feeling then prevailed that it was purely a muscular disorder. But this idea was found to be too narrow, and now it is universally conceded that rheumatism is a blood disease. And what a terrible disease it is. It often comes without warning and prostrates the system with agony. Again its beginning is gradual, and its growth slow. In its acute form it manifests itself in every conceivable shape and always accompanied by intense pain. At one time it is inflammatory, at another neuralgic. Sometimes it assumes the form of gout, and again that of pleurisy or lumbago; but in whatever manner it appears it is terribly painful and always to be dreaded. The pain and annoyance of rheumatism are increased by its great danger for it is liable to attack the brain or heart at any moment, thereby causing instant death. Indeed, nearly every case of heart disease with all its dreadful suddenness which has ever occurred, can be traced more or less directly to rheumatic causes. In its chronic form it stiffens the joints, contracts the muscles, undermines the health and ruins the life. It frequently attacks men and women who are apparently in perfect health. Indeed, it is as greatly to be dreaded as any possible form of physical woe.

But, however severe its effects may be, the exact cause of this blood trouble has been an undecided question, and it is only within the past year that any decision upon the subject has been reached. In order to fully determine what the cause of rheumatic disorders really was, certain authorities sent letters of inquiry from Washington to the leading practicing physicians of the land, and these inquiries were responded to quite generally, thus furnishing data of great value to science and mankind. The views held by the doctors are of a varied nature, but so overwhelming a proportion hold to one belief as to leave but little doubt that it is the correct one. This belief, briefly stated, is that uric acid in the blood causes rheumatism, and that it is only by removing this poisonous acid that rheumatic or neuralgic troubles in all their terrible forms can be cured. This being true, the important question arises: "How does this poisonous uric acid get into the blood, and how can it best be removed?" Uric acid is a waste material of the body which the kidneys should carry out, but because they are weakened they cannot throw it from the system. Restore the kidneys and you restore the power that will force the uric acid from the system and thus banish the rheumatic agonies which it causes. This is reason; it is science. No one whose kidneys are in a perfect condition was ever troubled with rheumatism, and no rheumatic sufferer, however slight the pain may be, has perfect kidneys. The conclusion of this truth is inevitable; perfect kidneys mean freedom from rheumatism.

When rheumatism has manifested itself in any special part of the body, attempts have usually been made to treat that part of the body. As a result, the plan has departed but the disease has remained, lying subtly concealed and ready to break out at some unexpected moment. Checking the pain in any single locality only scatters the disease through the system, when, if the seat of the disorder, which are the kidneys, were reached, a complete cure would be the result. The way, therefore, to expel this rank and poisonous acid before it assumes an inflammatory or chronic form is by keeping the kidneys in absolute health. This is no easy thing to do, and no means has, until within the past few years, been known which would successfully reach and effect these great organs. At last, however, scientists have discovered that the leaves of a tropical plant, previously but little known to science and unknown to medicine, possessed marvelous qualities adapted for the kidneys. These leaves have been skillfully combined in the remedy now known as Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure. It is, up to the present time, the only known preparation that acts so directly upon the kidneys as to effectually cure the various dangerous forms of kidney disease, and hence remove all uric acid from the blood. As a result, the cures it has been the means of performing are really very remarkable. Indeed there are thousands of persons in America to-day, who owe their restoration to health and entire freedom from rheumatism to this simple yet powerful remedy, which is known universally, manufactured in Rochester, N. Y., and sold in every drug store in the country.

From the doctors in the various cities in the United States who have certified over their own signatures to the scientific statement that uric acid in the blood is the cause of rheumatism, are a large number of Boston physicians, among them being Dr. A. P. Lighthill, Dr. John B. Foley, Dr. Fred J. Garbit, Dr. M. L. Chamberlain, Dr. Albert N. Blodgett, Dr. John C. Sharp, Dr. Chas. W. Stevens, Dr. Henry W. Bradford, Dr. Timothy H. Smith, Dr. Charles M. Newell, Dr. William A. Dunn, Dr. J. F. Perry, Dr. John Burke, Dr. Michael F. Gavin, Dr. Aaron Young, Dr. Elisha S. Rowland, Dr. Otis Gray Randall, Dr. Stephen C. Martin, Dr. George F. Bigelow, Dr. O. W. Dow, Dr. Morris P. Wheeler, Dr. Robert W. Newell, Dr. Franklin F. Patch, Dr. Darius Wilson, Dr. William M. Cornell, Dr. Henry Sohl, Dr. Nathaniel Downes, Dr. William K. Ripley, Dr. George C. Shattuck, Dr. William Ingalls, Dr. J. P. Oliver, Dr. Joseph F. Gould, Dr. Wilson Atwood, Dr. A. Fernald, Dr. Francis H. Brown, and Dr. Hamilton Osgood.

The theory of the doctors as above explained finds its confirmation in the fact that when the kidneys have been cured, rheumatism is completely moved. This is not, of course, always accomplished instantly, for in a disease so subtle, the cure is often very slow, but under no other plan can any hope of permanent relief ever be found. There are hundreds of cases on record during the present Winter of persons afflicted with rheumatic troubles of the worse order who have been entirely cured by following the theory above stated and using the remedy mentioned. Many of these persons had the very worst possible symptoms. Vague aches in different portions of the body were followed by agonies of the most intense in some particular spot. Acute and throbbing pains succeeded each other and the coursing poisonous acid inflamed all the veins. Troubles which began with slight disorders increased to derangements the most serious. It is sad to think that all this suffering was endured when it could have been so easily relieved. Acting upon the theory and using the remedy above mentioned the kidneys could have been restored to their usual vigor, the uric poison expelled from the system, the inflammation removed and the pain entirely banished.

These are some of the real and scientific facts regarding rheumatism, attested by the highest authority and they are, beyond question, the only correct ones ever brought forth. We are aware they are advanced ideas, but ten years hence they will be the accepted belief and practice of the world. If people suffer from rheumatic troubles in the future and with these plain truths before them, they certainly can blame no one but themselves.

Rumor's Growth.

Says Gossip One to Gossip Two,
While shopping in the town:
"Old Mrs. Pry to me remarked,
Smith bought his goods of Brown."

Says Gossip Two to Gossip Three,
When buying her a gown:
"I've heard it said to-day, my dear,
Smith got his goods from Brown."

Says Gossip Three to Gossip Four,
With something of a frown:
"I've heard strange news—what do you think?
Smith took his goods from Brown."

Then Gossip Four to Gossip Five,
Who blazed it 'round the town:
"I've heard to-day such shocking news—
Smith stole his goods from Brown."

Farm and Garden.

Early Potatoes.

The high price of potatoes will encourage cultivators to make unusual exertions to get new potatoes large enough to sell at the earliest moment possible. Those who have warm light land will be able to plant much earlier in the season than those who have only cold heavy land; but if the potatoes be planted in a hot-bed the middle or last of April, and set out the last of May, a crop may be obtained on heavy land nearly as early as on light land, planted without starting the seed in a hot-bed. Seed for sprouting should be cut to two good eyes and placed in the hot-bed from two to four inches apart, according to the size it is intended to let them grow before transplanting. The day before the plants are removed they should receive a heavy watering. In removing the plants a cutter of the proper size should be used, and the plants lifted with a mason's trowel and placed in a shallow box, setting them so near each other that they can be transported without disturbing the earth around the roots. With a little care plants can be transplanted without stopping their growth, and done very rapidly too. Plants started in a hot-bed, and thus planted out on cold land, will be several weeks earlier than if planted in the usual way.

When the seed is planted in the field without sprouting, a week or ten days time may be gained by planting whole potatoes, providing not more than four of the strongest stalks are permitted to grow in each hill.

The land for early potatoes should be thoroughly prepared by pulverizing and mixing with it a heavy dressing of good manure.—Ploughman.

PLUM TREES. The New York Sun says: The black warts or knots on plum trees are caused by a fungus, and they should be cut away as soon as discovered, and the trees stimulated to make a vigorous growth. A quart or two of salt scattered over the surface of the ground of each tree will be beneficial, and aid in checking the disease. This we know from our own experience to be the remedy. Cut off and burn the infected branches, and you will save your trees and fruit.

☞ Test your onion seed by placing a little in moist sand, cotton or moss in a warmish room. If fresh, it will soon (in about three days) sprout. Onion seed should not be more than one year old, and the difference in the crop from new and old seed is such that all onion culturists should test their own seeds before sowing.—Rural New Yorker.

Anecdotes.

"Are you lost, my little fellow?" asked a gentleman of a four-year-old.

"No," he sobbed in reply, "b-but m-my mother is."

"My dear doctor," said a lady, "I suffer a great deal with my eyes."

"Be patient, madam," he replied, "you will probably suffer a great deal more without them."

"What colored dishes will you have, ma'am?" said the polite clerk to the boarding-house keeper.

"Oh, most any color that won't show dirt," was the reply.

"Do you know how I get into bed so quick, mamma?" said a little girl.

"No, darling; how do you?" was the reply.

"Why, I put one foot on the bed, and then holler out 'Rats!' and scare myself right in."

Very kind drug-clerk to little girl: "Now be sure and tell your papa to take this medicine according to directions on the bottle; an overdose might affect his brain."

Little Girl—"Oh, I guess there's no danger of that, for I've heard mother tell him lots of times he never had any brains."

"Did yer see anythin' of a horse around here," said one rustic youth to another.

"Sure's you're born, I did," was the response.

"Where did you see it?"

"Oh, hangin' up in the corn crib."

"Hangin' up in the corn crib?"

"Yes—a horse shoe; ain't that somethin' of a horse?"

A Chapter of Accidents.

One of the best advantages of having a clear head is, that you can be trusted to do any work in which great care or a good memory is required. If a boy should be sent by his father with a telegram, and he should allow something else to take up his attention and keep him by the way, so that his father should lose a large sum of money by it, he would not be called trustworthy.

But suppose instead of being a telegraph messenger for his father, he had grown a little older, and kind friends had secured a place for him as operator in a telegraph office, where he would have many messages to send. If then he should allow a glass of beer or wine to distract his mind, he might send the message wrong, or send it to the wrong place. The same result might occur if he were sick with the beer or wine he drank the night before. The consequence might be a collision on the railroad, and the loss of life and property.

You see by this how important it is to be trustworthy, and not allow the brain to be deranged. Alcoholic drinks will do this more surely than almost anything else. Wherever you are and whatever you do, you ought to wish to keep yourself in prime order, so as to be able to do your best. You cannot do this if you take even a small quantity of alcoholic liquor. A ship-master had taken his vessel through a gale, and, thinking the worst of it was over, he was scudding along with most of his sails furled, when he went into his cabin. While there he took a glass of liquor, and after a few minutes he returned to the deck. That one glass had changed his ideas, and he ordered another sail spread. The sailors dared not disobey, but the mate coming up called out to furl the sail again, and they did so in great haste. That one glass spoiled his judgment, and had it not been for the mate, it might have cost them the ship, and their lives also.

Does that seem too much to be done by one glass? Hear what Dr. Brinton says about even a glass of wine or beer or cider: "A single glass of fermented liquor will often suffice to take the edge off both mind and body." A single glass has many a time occasioned a serious accident. A railway engineer once took a glass of ale while the engine was taking in water. Soon after starting he put on more steam; the train whizzed along with frightful velocity, and at last the cars fairly bounced off the track, rolled down an embankment and sixty lives were lost. The engineer did not probably realize the danger. The glass of ale took off the keenness of his judgment, as well as his feeling of responsibility.

A servant girl in Haverhill, Mass., was left alone for a few hours in a large country house. When her work was done she went down into the cellar and helped herself to some cider. After that she went out to the barn with a light, and stupidly set the barn on fire. The flames spread to the house, and $20,000 worth of property was destroyed by this "accident."

Fires decreased one-half, in Maine, during the first fifteen years after the passage of the prohibitory law. This is a law which forbids the sale of liquors, and makes it difficult for people to get a drink. Accidents by fire and by water are common after drinking, because a man needs to have his wits about him to handle fire or to take care of himself on the water. The oldest of the boys who saved the ship mentioned in lesson nineteen afterwards became a ship-master, Captain Brown, of the Kedron. He made it a point whenever he heard of a shipwreck to inquire into the causes, and in more than two-thirds of the cases where he could learn the facts, he found that the drink was to blame. When his ship lay at Canton, China, he set his own sober crew to counting the accidents that happened to drinking sailors on the ships around them. Within three weeks they counted twenty men that lost their lives; fell from the rigging, walked off the dock in the dark, and other accidents that never would have happened but for the drink they had taken.

Page after page might be filled with the mere name and date of accidents that have happened on the water through the drink, and probably there have been many more when ships have never been heard of; no one left to tell the tale. On the other hand; in Orient, a small shipping community on the eastern end of Long Island, where they are all intelligent temperance people, they lost but one ship during the first twenty-five years of their temperance history.

For still our ancient foe,
Doth seek to work us woe.

ERRATA. In last paragraph but one in last number, third line, read anatomical. In seventh line of same paragraph, after enter, the words, "a wine shop" should be added.

Household Receipts.

LOAF CAKE. Take three cups of sponge dough (like pancake batter), one cup of sugar, one cup of flour, three eggs, beaten separately, one-half teaspoonful of soda dissolved in a little warm water; one teacupful of raisins, nutmeg and cinnamon to taste. Beat sugar and butter to a cream, make it as you do a cake before you mix with the dough. Put in the raisins the last thing. Let it rise the same as bread and bake an hour.

MAKING TEA. A French chemist asserts that if tea be ground like coffee before hot water is poured upon it, it will yield nearly double the amount of its exhilarating qualities. Another writer says if you put a piece of lump sugar, the size of a walnut, into a teapot you will make the tea infuse in half the time.

This and That.

☞ Doesn't come a-miss—a boy baby.

☞ When Adam was in his bachelorhood he found his nights lonely, and always welcomed the morn with gladness. Still, for all that, he was happier when Eve came.

☞ "Can't there be happiness where there is no love?" solemnly queries an author in a book on marriage. Not much happiness, perhaps, but if the girl is awfully rich, there can be lots of fun.

☞ A Peoria toper justifies himself in this manner: "I am fond of long life. Joviality and good feeling promote long life. Whiskey engenders joviality and good feeling. Hence I cultivate whiskey."

☞ "Mottoes doan't mean bizness. Maxims kin be forgotten faster den written. Promises am a wheel with one cog gone. Friendship will las' as long as you kin afford to pay ten per cent. per annum."

☞ It cast a gloom over the entire church fair, the other night, when the minister's son walked up to the grab-bag and prize-cake table and demanded that the game be fully explained before he bought his chips!

☞ "Farewell" was the title of a poem sent to a newspaper, and the cruel editor, in acknowledging its receipt, said: "It is a good thing that the gifted authoress bade it good-bye, as she will never see it again."

☞ "George": Your article on "The Cat" is purposely omitted. No doubt it would afford much a-mewsment to the reader; but we must paws somewhere on making up this week's issue, and we do so at the cat's tail.

Walnut Leaf Hair Restorer.

It is entirely different from all others. It is as clear as water, and, as its name indicates, is a perfect Vegetable Hair Restorer. It will immediately free the head from all dandruff, restore grey hair to its natural color, and produce a new growth where it has fallen off. It does not in any manner affect the health, which Sulphur, Sugar of Lead, and Nitrate of Silver preparations have done. It will change light or faded hair in a few days to a beautiful glossy brown. Ask your druggist for it. Each bottle is warranted. Chas. N. Crittenton, New York, and Geo. C. Goodwin & Co., Boston, wholesale agts. S 24po

PERRY DAVIS' VEGETABLE PAIN KILLER

A Never-Failing Cure for Burns, Scalds, Bruises, Cuts, Sores, etc.

After forty years of trial, PERRY DAVIS' PAIN KILLER stands unrivaled. It is safe! It acts immediately! It never fails!

Editor of the St. John (N. B.) News, says: In flesh wounds, aches, pains, sores, etc., it is the most effectual remedy we know of. No family should be without a bottle of it for a single hour.

From the Cincinnati Dispatch: We have seen its magic effects, and know it to be a good article.

From I. S. Potter, U. S. Consul at Crefeld, Rhenish Prussia: After long years of use, I am satisfied it is positively efficient as a healing remedy for wounds, bruises, and sprains.

W. W. Sharper, Valdosta, Ga., says: It is a panacea for all bruises and burns.

From R. W. Adams, Saco, Me.: It gave me immediate relief.

R. Lewis says: In forty years' use it never has failed me.

W. W. Lum, Nicholville, N.Y., says: I use your PAIN KILLER frequently. It relieves pain and soreness, and heals wounds like magic.

J. W. Dee says: For scalds and burns it has no equal.

PERRY DAVIS' PAIN KILLER is not a new untried remedy. For forty years it has been in constant use; and those who have used it the longest are its best friends.

Its success is entirely because of its merit. Every family should have a bottle ready for use. Much pain and heavy doctors' bills may often be saved by prompt application of the PAIN KILLER. Unlike most medicines, it is perfectly safe even in the hands of a child. Try it once thoroughly, and it will prove its value. Your druggist has it at 25c., 50c., and $1.00 per bottle.

Various Causes—

Advancing years, care, sickness, disappointment, and hereditary predisposition—all operate to turn the hair gray, and either of them inclines it to shed prematurely. AYER'S HAIR VIGOR will restore faded or gray, light or red hair to a rich brown or deep black, as may be desired. It softens and cleanses the scalp, giving it a healthy action. It removes and cures dandruff and humors. By its use falling hair is checked, and a new growth will be produced in all cases where the follicles are not destroyed or the glands decayed. Its effects are beautifully shown on brashy, weak, or sickly hair, on which a few applications will produce the gloss and freshness of youth. Harmless and sure in its results, it is incomparable as a dressing, and is especially valued for the soft lustre and richness of tone it imparts.

AYER'S HAIR VIGOR is colorless; contains neither oil nor dye; and will not soil or color white cambric; yet it lasts long on the hair, and keeps it fresh and vigorous, imparting an agreeable perfume.

For sale by all druggists.

Poetry.

Something Left Undone.

BY H. W. LONGFELLOW.

Labor with what zeal we will,
 Something still remains undone,
Something uncompleted still
 Waits the rising of the sun.

By the bedside, on the stair,
 At the threshold, near the gates,
With its menace or its prayer,
 Like a mendicant it waits;

Waits, and will not go away;
 Waits, and will not be gainsaid;
By the cares of yesterday
 Each to-day is heavier made;

Till at length the burden seems
 Greater than our strength can bear,
Heavy as the weight of dreams,
 Pressing on us everywhere.

And we stand from day to day,
 Like the dwarfs of times gone by,
Who, as Northern legends say,
 On their shoulders held the sky.

Miscellany.

OBADIAH'S METHOD.

"We must really economize somewhere!" said Obadiah, tugging wildly at his whiskers.

"Yes, indeed," said I, wringing my apron, "we must. But I'm sure, Obby dear, we are neither of us extravagant. We must eat, we must drink, and we must live."

And Obadiah and I sat and looked at each other in a sort of wild despair.

We had only been married six months — Obadiah and I. We were very young, both of us, and perhaps we had begun the world too early. Our relations told us we hadn't any business to marry; but as their gratuitous opinion was all that they had ever given us, we had never paid much attention to these utterances.

We hired a little one-story cottage, just on the high road, which was to let cheap, because there were only two rooms and a kitchen to it. But what did Obadiah and I want with more than two rooms and a kitchen? I had the new furniture which Grandmother Newcomb had given me, and a rag carpet which my mother had woven the winter before she died. To be sure, our accommodations were not extensive, but we did not expect to hold fashionable receptions, or give large dinner parties.

Obadiah had plenty of work in the woolen factory down by the depot, and I hung out my little sign, "Dressmaking and Millinery," and hoped that some one would see it and give me an order. But no one came. I had plenty of time after my house-keeping duties were over in the morning, and I couldn't be always beswaxing the furniture, arranging the china cupboard, or polishing the windows.

"I wish I could get some dressmaking to do," said I, wistfully; for Obadiah's earnings were so small, and I did so long for a dollar or two of my own.

"Why don't you advertise in the village newspaper?" said old Mr. Meggs.

Obadiah burst out laughing.

"Advertise!" said he. "Why, what on earth do you take us for, Meggs? It costs a good deal of money to advertise."

"It costs something, certainly," said Mr. Meggs, thoughtfully, stroking his chin, "but then it calls public attention to the particular iron that you have in the fire."

"A little local paper like that?" said Obadiah, rather contemptuously.

"It's local custom that your wife wants, isn't it?" said Mr. Meggs.

"And I never did think much of newspapers," said Obadiah.

So that settles the question; and afterwards, when the foreman of the woolen factory cut down the wages of all the workmen twenty per cent., and coal went up, and the winter set in cold and hard, and we began to consider the question of how we could economize, the local newspaper was almost the first thing upon which Obadiah settled.

"That, at least, is an unnecessary extravagance," he said.

I winced a little. The Boggsville Herald had been my constant companion for more lonely evenings than I cared to remember.

"It's only a dollar and a half a year, Obadiah," said I, "and really is a very interesting little paper."

"Just a dollar and a half too much," said my husband, curtly. "The subscription is just out. I'll tell 'em we won't renew it. If you care so much about it, Josie, you can easily borrow Mrs. Megg's paper."

I was silent. I never could make Obadiah understand the deep-rooted aversion to "borrowing" of any creature whatever, that I inherited from my mother.

So we cut down the weekly paper, and left off using butter, and burned candles a penny a pound cheaper, and I cleaned and re-bound, and new buttoned Obadiah's great-coat instead of buying a new one, left off going to church because my old cloak was too shabby and I couldn't afford anything better.

And oh, how I did miss the Boggsville Herald.

"If I could only get a little dressmaking to do," said I to myself, "I would subscribe again on my own account. But I can't bear to ask Obadiah for a cent of his hard-earned money."

I was sitting, very sad and lonely, one freezing February day by the window, trying to mend one of Obadiah's old waistcoats, when a travelling peddler, with a huge basket of china ornaments on his arm and a bundle on his shoulder knocked at the door. He nodded his head in an insinuating manner at me as I answered his summons.

"Couldn't I sell you something this morning, ma'am?" said he, with a very liberal display of a very white and even set of teeth. "Anything in the way of elegant mantel vases, statuettes, decorated china match boxes—"

"I have no money," said I, spiritlessly. "And I don't need any of your wares."

"Ah, but you do not know what a splendid article I have here," he persisted, loosening the strap which crossed his shoulders, and lowering the precious package carefully to the floor. "A pair of real wedgeboard faiences. Oh, don't shake your head, ma'am, I shan't charge you a cent for looking at 'em, you know. I'm certain you are an artist—all ladies are born artists—and this is really something quite out of the ordinary."

And with a succession of nods and grins, he unwrapped a pair of really pretty blue vases nearly two feet high, and ornamented with garlands in white.

"Only six dollars a pair ma'am," said he. "Dirt cheap. It's positively giving them away at that price."

"I have no six dollars to spare," said I, indifferently.

"It's a great bargain at that price," he insisted.

"I do not want them."

He was silent for a few moments.

"I'm sorry ma'am," said he. "They'd be a great decoration for a house like this; but if you really won't buy, it would be doing me a great favor to allow them to stand here until to-morrow. I've a long tramp before me, and I'm not going to any place where I think they may be likely to buy anything of that sort. I'll set them by the chimney piece, ma'am, where they won't be in any one's way. And I am very tired with carrying 'em."

I felt sorry for the poor jaded wretch so I made no objection. And when he was gone, the vases did make the room look wonderfully pretty, I could not but wish that they were mine. Obadiah perceived them at once when he came home to tea.

"Hello!" said he, "what does this mean?"

So I told him, adding:

"I only wish that I could afford to buy them, they are so handsome."

Obadiah walked around and around them with his hands in his pockets and his brow knit thoughtfully.

"Yes, they're pretty," said he "but they are not perfect."

"Not perfect!" I echoed.

"Don't you see that lengthwise crack down one? And the end of the little raised rosebud is chipped off on the other. I hope you didn't do it Josie?" with a sudden glance of apprehension.

"I? Certainly not!" I cried. "Why, I haven't so much as touched the things."

"Then I dare say it will be all right;" said Obadiah. And he sat down to supper.

The next day, however, my friend, the china vender, came along, smiling and obsequious as ever.

"There are your vases," said I, "just where you left them."

But all at once he broke into a storm of reproach and obloquy. They had been cracked and damaged in my care. They were perfect when he left them the day before. I had worked the mischief, and I of course was responsible for the value of the articles. Of course I knew the rascal was telling a falsehood, but what could I do? I was alone and fairly cowed by the ferocity of the man.

"You must pay me for them," he reiterated, again and again, "or I will have you arrested at once!

I burst into tears.

"How can I pay you," said I. "The vases were damaged when you left them here. And, besides, I have not five dollars—no not one dollar—in the house." (Which, also, was true enough.)

While I spoke he had been glancing furtively around.

"I don't want to be hard with you ma'am," said he. "Of course, a poor man like me has got to save himself from loss, and if you let me have that set of blue and white India china on the dresser in exchange, I'll leave the vases, and we'll say no more about it!"

It went to my heart to part with the India ware, which had been a relic of my mother's housekeeping days, but I was so cowed and terrified by the man's bullying manner that I believe I would have given the house from over my head if he had asked for it; and he went away leaving the beautiful vases on the floor. How glad I was to see Mrs. Meggs come cheerfully in, half an hour afterward! good, motherly old soul, with silver spectacles, and an elderly dimple still lingering on her cheek.

"Why, my dear," said she, "what's the matter?"

And I told her all.

"But, my dear," said she, "how came you to be taken in? There was an article in the paper last week, warning everybody against this very imposter. Didn't you see it? It was called the 'Vase Swindler.'"

I colored deeply, and hung down my head.

"We have stopped taking the paper," said I. "Obadiah thought we couldn't afford—

"And your beautiful old china, too?" said Mr. Meggs. "Why, there was half a column in the paper, week before last, about the value of old china just now. And by what it stated, your set of old china must have been worth twenty dollars at least."

Twenty dollars! And I had frittered them away for a pair of wretched, cracked, tawdry things, of the very sight of which I was already sick.

"My dear," said Mrs. Meggs, "your ideas of economy are altogether misplaced. You should read the papers."

Obadiah went and subscribed for the Boggsville Herald that very evening.—And in the first number he saw an advertisement for hands, at a new steam factory in the neighborhood, which offered steady work and wages a third higher than he was receiving. And I inserted a modest little "Dress-making Wanted," and it was answered within the week, and I am now making my own snug little income, thank heaven! And if anybody tells us now that we can't afford to take a paper, we tell them, Obadiah and I, that we can't afford to do without one.

Letter from Kansas.

CHEROKEE, April 3, 1882.

Dear Patriot:—Since my last communication I have gone farther from you and am now located in southeastern Kansas, in one of the finest farming localities of the country. In former times this whole country, about here, was the home of Indians, and this town derives its name from one of their tribes. About a dozen years ago the site for a town was chosen, and to-day it shows houses by the hundreds and numbers about one thousand inhabitants. The principal business is farming, which of course calls for the various kinds of stores and a bank. There are three flouring mills doing a good business here, and the Gulf railroad is making extensive alterations, which, all together, makes a lively little town at the present time. It is a very quiet little place, owing probably to the absence of all saloons, as is the case throughout the entire state of Kansas. Yes, in this comparatively new state, we have a strong prohibitory law, and there is no place where anything stronger than cider, can be bought openly, but I am sorry to add, that it can be obtained in most any town on the sly, or by procuring a prescription of some physician.

This state I find to be a great farming country, and in this, the southeastern part, the farmers have some fine land to work upon. At the present time a drive through the country is very pleasant and as I had that privilege two or three times the past week, I will give you some of the sights I saw. The main crop is wheat, which having been sown last fall is now growing finely, and up from eight to fifteen inches and in fields of twenty to one hundred acres. The next crop is corn, which all of the farmers are now getting ready for, and in a few instances have commenced planting. Every farmer is busy ploughing, and as the land is nearly free from stones, most of them use a sulky plough with three horses, or mules as the case may be, and plough from two to three acres a day. Next comes the corn planter, which, with two horses, will plant ten acres in one day; and, as the soil needs no fertilizer, you can see how much faster the work is done here than it is in old New England. I noticed several fields of oats that had already been sowed and the young blade just springing up. In the garden I found the vegetable seeds just showing life, and if we are favored with a good season, the people in this part of the country cannot fail to be happy. The gentle sex are also busy with their flower beds, and seem to show as much taste in this line, as do the more accomplished ones of the East.

Apple orchards are quite numerous, and just now the buds are bursting and showing leaves and fruit buds in abundance. Peach trees have been in full bloom for over a week and indicate a large crop. Pear trees do not do so well, and so they are scarce. Plum and cherry trees are completely clothed with blossoms, and the ornamental trees, though few in number, are begining to put on their Spring dress. Small fruits are scarce, owing probably to there being no market for their disposal, as well as to the farmer not being tempted to their culture.

The home of the farmer is far different from what it is East. He lives in a small house, either of logs or rough boards, and seldom has more then two or three rooms, all of which are upon a level. The furniture differs some, according to the size of the owners pocket-book, but the house and surroundings are nearly the same in all cases. My business requires my stopping at farm houses occasionally, and in one, about fifteen miles West of here, I found considerable comfort, the inmates being very sociable and homelike. In the parlor(?) was a fine piano, and with the daughters to play upon it, we passed a pleasant evening, more so than one would imagine by passing by. As for barns, the farmer has none, all of the stock, except the horses, taking care of themselves, while for the latter he has a shelter made of a few posts, with a top covering of hay and straw, which, in a strong wind, must be very uncomfortable. In some instances I have noticed a shelter made by the cattle eating holes out of an old straw stack, and getting into these of a night. Neither has he any cover for his farm implements, the harvester, mower, corn planter and ploughs, all standing out in the weather from one year's end to another. As a class the farmers may be called poor, and all building material being so high, it is impossible for them to get things up in the same shape as you do in the East.

You can imagine that my ideas of western farming are not very flattering, and I would advise all young men in the East, who contemplate coming here for that purpose, to think well of it before they start, and then to think of it again.

The weather for the past few days has been delightful, and everything is coming ahead fast, while East I suppose you are having cold, dreary weather, and north-east winds all the time. Yesterday, at noon, the thermometer stood 83 in the shade, and in the evening, with a full moon, the young folks were all happy.

As yet I have seen no one from the Bay State, and, as near as I can learn, there are none in this vicinity, and I have to be the only representative of the "DOWN EAST YANKEE."

New York Fashions.

A LA MILITAIRE.

What with buttons and braids and braids and buttons, our ladies will carry on a warfare that will cause to quake the most military heart. Small bullet shaped buttons are very fashionable, and an instinct of nature points to a combination with braids which are run in rows around edges, up the fronts of costumes and in epaulets on shoulders. Again, these pretty pointings, (for indeed such stylish buttons are little more), are bestowed in military rows, illumining outfits of plain goods and forming substitutes for brocade. Metal is in high favor for buttons of all kinds and is colored in contrast or to match. Other buttons are of medium size, but fashion has taken a wide leap from the very large ones; they are dead, if not forgotten, and a great rush is made for their diminutive successors. Fringes are brought out to suit new fabrics, both silken and of jet. Shirring is extremely fashionable, and plaitings still live. In ways of making, however, there is a marked absence of novelty. Nothing is really new in design, and, as formerly, we shall have basques, trimmed skirts and overskirts, and of polonaises quite a tribe. Not a few.

NEW WOOLS

are covered with small sized birds' or animals' heads. In France, and elsewhere on the other side, the entirety is portrayed, but here, as yet, the homely phiz of poor Tray, the pensive countenance of an owl or the classic profile of a chanticleer suffices. Other wools show very large inwrought floral patterns, set very far apart, while a change is given by moons, intersecting rings or mathematical bodies, colors being quite pronounced or the reverse. Pretty outfits in wash fabrics are checked or striped, and here the Cash embroideries woven in colored stripes or chequer board designs, are chosen as a finish.

The colors are perfectly fast, and a fine cord on one side is made to draw up, so that they are easily sewn on. Perhaps, too, this may be the reason that the white frilling are again being used on underclothing. Cash's woven initial letters for marking have also proved a great success. No wonder, since they relieve us from that dreadful old ink bottle; the price, furthermore, being so low as to come within everybody's means. This year they are brought out in navy blue as well as Turkey red. Both wash perfectly; and so popular has this style of marking become, that ladies frequently have the entire name made to order.

PARASOLS.

As a sign of the prevalence of shirring, we notice the new parasols provided with a shirred ruffle that is often ended by lace. From eight to ten ribs are seen and materials, of course, follow dress goods, for the parasols of late years has steadily risen in importance, and it is a notable part of the outfit. Then, too, as flowers are extremely fashionable, behold a finish given the coming parasol, by an artificial bouquet set in a silken bow at the top. This, of course, can be removed if one should think it too gay, but ladies in general will find no little amusement in changing these flowers at will. Sun umbrellas are strikingly attractive, because made of double-faced satin, where frequently effective contrasts are noticeable.

The World's Epileptic Institute.

While passing through St. Joseph, and having heard a great deal about the World's Epileptic Institute located here, I concluded to pay the celebrated institution a short visit. We were met by Dr. Richmond, the proprietor, who has gained a reputation as broad as the land. He is a rather small, yet prepossessing man, of very affable and gentlemanly manners. He gave us a hearty welcome, and took great pains in showing us through his palatial and mammoth institution. It is a five-story building, 200x180 feet, with basement, and contains over three hundred rooms, and can accommodate five hundred patients, and each and every room is furnished in the most elegant and lavish manner. But we will begin at the office, which is a large room furnished with rosewood furniture throughout. In the office are thousands of photographs of those who have been benefitted by the Nervine. The walls are elegantly papered, and are profusely decorated with rich and costly pictures, relieved here and there by busts in stone and bronze of eminent men of this and other countries. In connection with the institute is a mammoth printing house and bindery, occupying six or seven large rooms, and a score of presses are kept running night and day turning out work for the doctor. The office is one of the finest and most complete in the West, and he has the rooms decorated, carpeted and trimmed up with as much care and luxury as is his own private office. On the first floor of this mammoth building is the doctor's private office, the printing department, bindery, tank room, packing, bottling, and consultation rooms, barber shop, drug store, etc., all of which are fitted up regardless of expense. The second floor has the hotel office, dining, billiard and cooking rooms, many guest chambers and several parlors. The third and fourth floors are all rooms, all of which are furnished with Brussels carpets and the finest furniture. The billiard room has six tables, all of which are free to the guests of the house and their friends. The bath room is large and neat, and is also free to guests. The entire building is surrounded on the east and south by an elegant five acre park, in which are lovely trees, beds of rich and rare plants, gravel walks and drives, delicious arbors, and a most beautiful summer house. There are also a number of fountains that add wonderfully to the beauty of the park, which is truly one of the most lovely and attractive in the western country, and the Institution has no equal for luxury and comfort in the world. Everything is perfect, and the visitor is at once charmed with the entire place and its surroundings. An idea of the immensity of the doctor's business may be given when we say that on the day we visited the Institution he showed us to his express room, and we saw the expressman take goods labeled to the following places, to say nothing of hundreds of orders from all quarters of America: Lyons, France; Geneva, Switzerland; Madrid, Spain; Brussels, Belgium; Cape Town, Africa; Shanghai, China; Yokohama, Japan; Bombay, India; Melbourne, Australia. The doctor employs hundreds of men and women in his Institute in the several branches, aside from the immense force required to conduct the hotel. It is worth a visit, and Dr. Richmond extends to all a cordial invitation to come and see him. He and his wonderful medical discovery have given to St Joseph a good name all over the habitable globe.

The Quincy Patriot.

SATURDAY, APRIL 15, 1882.

Telephone for Quincy.

The territory of Quincy and other towns and cities near Boston has lately passed under the control of the Suburban Telephone Company, of which Mr. A. P. Sawyer is president, and Mr. J. B. Gardiner general manager. The above gentlemen have been in town several times during the last two weeks, and now they propose to establish a line from Boston to Hingham, via of Quincy, Weymouth Landing and East Weymouth, with public stations at each of the named places. At Hingham the line will connect with one now running to Nantasket Beach. The station in Quincy will be at the PATRIOT Office, where all necessary arrangements will be made for the accommodation of the public. The cost of each connection with Boston and other cities and towns in the company's territory will be but ten cents.

It is also proposed by this company to establish an exchange in Quincy if the desired number of subscribers can be obtained, and as this company do not require nearly as many as did the Telephone Despatch Company, it seems as thought they could be easily secured. The business men of the town, and others who would be benefited by the introduction of the telephone, will in a short time be visited by Mr. Frank F. Prescott, who is to manage the office and exchange, and we hope he will be successful in obtaining for the town a needed modern improvement.

And now, while we are on the subject, it may not be amiss to suggest to the committee having in charge the building of the new fire alarm telegraph, that a penny may be saved to the town by running both the telephone and fire alarm wires on the same poles, in sections of the town where both desire a right of way. Neither would interfere with the other's satisfactory working, and the town could save money by it that can then be advantageously spent in other ways.

The telephone company have signified to us their willingness to erect poles, and give the top right, which is considered the best, to the use of the fire alarm wire.

Easter Sunday Services.

The observance of Easter Sunday has become very general and the elaborate floral decorations with appropriate services for the day usually draw large congregations to the different churches. The attendance at the morning services at Christ Church on Sunday was quite large. The arrangement of the flowers was very fine and displayed much taste. The choir was assisted by the Sunday School. In the afternoon the festival of the children connected with the Sunday School took place, and the church was literally packed. The exercises were very interesting, and at the conclusion of a short address, the pastor awarded prizes, consisting of silver crosses and other rewards to some twenty or more of the members in the different classes of the school. The mite chest offerings were then handed in and the objects for which they were given was explained and the children were called out in classes and presented with a handsome plant.

The decorations of the Unitarian Church were very choice, and beautiful. The whole pulpit was garlanded with smilax and running fern; the front was covered with a large panel of Easter lillies; while below it, and back of the table, was a bank of potted lillies crowned with their pure, white blossoms. The arms of the pulpit was massed with colored flowers, grasses and ferns; the Adams tablets hung with smilax. The whole was made very effective by the communion table spread for service, in the centre of which was a large cluster of Easter lillies, and on either side vases of roses; the cloth was draped with trailing green. The church was filled, and the whole service suggestive and interesting.

At the Congregational Church the pastor preached a sermon appropriate to the day. In the evening there was an Easter concert.

The Universalist Church was handsomely trimmed with beautiful flowers. In the evening there was a fine concert by the children of the Sabbath School.

The Adams Swindle.

The trial of the perpetrators of the banco fraud on the venerable Charles Francis Adams has been postponed by request of counsel to Tuesday next.

Mr. John Quincy Adams, in a statement concerning the attempted swindling of his father, said: "I asked Morrison how he managed to get hold of a check on the Merchants' Bank. He replied: 'Why that is part of our business; it is our stock in trade. When we decided to get Mr. Adams into our rooms we began by ascertaining in what banks he had deposits. We found out in a way that would not interest the public that he had nearly $20,000 in the Merchants' Bank. One of our men went to the bank and secured three or four counter checks, which are to be found in every bank of deposit, and when we succeeded in inducing Mr. Adams to sign a check, we handed him one of the blanks, which he immediately recognized as coming from his bank of deposit.'"

FREE FROM DEBT. Although Quincy was never noted for its piety, we are pleased to say, it has some nice churches; and, what is still better, all the Protestant denominations in the centre of the town are entirely free from debt. The small indebtedness of the Episcopal Society was raised on Sunday last; the Unitarian the past season; the Universalist last spring; and the Orthodox a few years since. The Catholics have the largest and most attractive church in town; and they have just completed a very large and nice parsonage.

BICYCLE CLUB. Some young men of this town held a meeting in French's block, on Monday evening, for the purpose of forming a bicycle club, and the following gentlemen were chosen officers:

President:—William Underwood.
Captain:—Chester Ford.
Secretary and Treasurer:— Warren S. Parker.

FINED. Officer Furnald arrested in the cars, on Fast night, Joseph Conlan and John F. Kanily, of Quincy, for disturbing the peace. They were brought before Judge Churchill, at the Dorchester District Court rooms, on Friday morning, and fined each $10 and costs for disturbing the peace, and $1 and costs for being drunk.

Brief Locals.

☞ Colds are very plenty,—most everybody in town has secured one.

☞ Mr. Timothy Sugrue, cautions the public from trespassing on his land.

☞ Mr. Charles F. Veazie leaves next week for St. Rita, New Mexico, to join his brother-in-law, Mr. Horace Feltis.

☞ We had quite a good snow storm on Monday morning, and several flurries since, but the flakes soon disappeared.

☞ Our thanks are due Hon. B. W. Harris, member of Congress from this District, for a document on Naval Affairs.

☞ Mr. Eugene O'Connor arrived home from Santa Rita, New Mexico, this week. He has been absent from home several months.

☞ There will be a conference of visitors of the Associated Charities of Quincy, on Tuesday, April 18th, at 3 P. M., in Lyceum Hall.

☞ Rev. Mr. Kelley officiates to-morrow, morning and evening, at the M. E. Church, West Quincy. Rev. Mr. Westlake being absent.

☞ At the Superior Court on Monday, Mr. B. F. Billings was found guilty of keeping a billiard hall without a license and fined $10 and costs.

☞ The Selectmen have drawn Messrs. Joseph M. Glover and George L. Miller as jurors for the civil session, April term, of the Superior Court, for Norfolk County.

☞ Last Friday evening the Knights of Honor, of Quincy were visited by a Roxbury Lodge. The meeting continued quite late. Refreshments were served and time fleeted pleasantly and quickly by.

☞ On Wednesday evening last a grand Camp Fire was held by Post 102 of Milton. About twelve Posts were represented, among them Post 88, of Quincy. A good time was the general result.

☞ Mr. John P. Bigelow of Livermore, N. H., has been visiting his aged parents in this place. He is looking well and says that there was plenty of snow at Livermore when he left, a few days ago.

☞ We learn that Paul Revere Post is not feeling well disposed towards the managers of the library for crowding in upon Decoration Day the exercises of dedicating the new Crane Memorial Library building.

☞ The forty-second annual meeting of the Massachusetts Homœpathic Medical Society, was held in Wesleyan Hall, Broomfield st., Boston, Wednesday, April 12th. Quincy was represented by Dr. A. Salls.

☞ The Crane Memorial Library building begins to look prettier as the grounds are graded; but it will not make so fine an appearance as it might if it had been placed in the centre of the lot, instead of in one corner.

☞ The Easter offerings at the Episcopal Church on Sunday last, amounted to $325. Through the exertions of the ladies connected with the sewing circle the sum of $200 had been collected to pay off the debt on the church and the society is now without any incumbrance and has a balance in the treasury.

☞ Owners of buildings whose tenants are "calculating" to go right on selling liquor without a license after May 1, may be interested to know that if they rent to persons who maintain a liquor nuisance they render themselves liable to fine or imprisonment if they fail to eject such a tenant after being notified of the nuisance.

SAD ACCIDENT. A little fellow, between five and six years of age, son of Mr. W. Walter Ewell, broke both bones in his right leg, below the knee, on Thursday afternoon last. He was playing in his yard with a dog and was knocked over, and was unable to get up. His mother had gone to the store for a few moments; but Mr. Albert Keating, who was passing about the time of the accident, immediately summoned aid, although it was over two hours before any doctors could be had to set the limb. Drs. Gilbert and Welch performed the operation, and we are pleased to say the boy is quite comfortable.

CHRIST CHURCH. At a meeting held in the vestry of Christ Church, on Monday last the following officers were chosen for the ensuing year:—

Wardens,—Samuel G. Wyman and Peter Butler.

Vestry,—Wm. Amory, Jr., Henry H. Hunt, George T. Defrees, Robert B. Metcalf, Sigourney Butler, J. Francis Hayward, Jeffrey R. Brackett.

Auditors,—W. F. Babcock and Arthur Billings.

Clerk and Treasurer, —Sigourney Butler.

BURGLARY. The apothecary store of Mr. John H. Veazie, in Adams' Block, was entered by burglars on Tuesday night and a quantity of cigars and confectionery and some change, the whole valued at about $25, were stolen. The back door of the store was found unfastened in the morning through which the rascals made their exit, but it is not known how they gained an entrance, but probably some one may have been secreted in the store when it was closed.

BAPTISM. Last Saturday afternoon Rev. Mr. Cotton baptized the following children:—Emma L. and Mary E. Deforest; Annie C. Tucker; William T., Alice M. and Henry R. Haskell; James F. Taylor and Arthur W. Farmer.

Quincy Point Items.

The Road Commissioners are doing some sensible work on Washington street. The gutters are being ploughed out, and the stone heap, mentioned in your last issue, has been properly buried, we hope never to rise again.

Though not exactly a Point item we take the liberty to compliment Mr. Vining upon the improvement he has made since purchasing his present residence. No estate on Washington street has been improved so much as his.

The meeting of the Quincy Point Temperance Association, held Wednesday evening, was well attended. A debate upon the Chinese question lasted nearly two hours, and was participated in by Mrs. H. F. Smith, Mrs Dr. Harlow, and Messrs. G. B. Lawton, W. T. Barry, E. H. Starbuck, Arthur Newcomb and H. M. Ferderhen. The vote was in favor of Chinese immigration.

Rev. A. H. Tyler of North Weymouth, will preach at the Baptist Chapel to-morrow.

The "United Six" gave a social dance at the Neck school-house Wednesday evening. Hanson's orchestra furnished the music, and there were about fifteen couple present, and a very pleasant time was had by all. We understand this was the first of a series to be given frequently.

The Easter concert, given Sunday evening by the Sabbath School connected with the Christian Union Church, attracted a very large audience. The exercises, which were quite interesting, consisted of reading selections from the bible, declamations, singing by the choir, remarks by Mr. Edward Southworth, and an illustrated talk by Mr. C. W. Carter. The floral display was very fine and handsomely arranged, covering the whole of the pulpit platform and being at least ten feet high. In front of the flowers was a large white cross, bearing the words, "Day of Triumph and Christ is Risen." The whole affair was conducted and arranged by Messrs. Charles Sherburne and Clarence Sampson, and was a success.

It is surprising how many people there are in a congregation of three hundred, who will see every thing that passes in a church except the contribution box.

An adjourned parish meeting was held in the C. U. Church, Monday evening, to hear the report of a committee appointed to arrange for building a vestry. The report showed the cost would be about $1000, but as further time was asked the meeting adjourned, subject to the call of the committee.

A scow, laden with stone, ran into the schooner Helen E. Russell, on Weymouth Fore River, near the Point bridge, Monday, carrying away the bowsprit of the former and damaging the quarter of the latter.

Thursday evening the Ladies' Aid Society held a sociable at the residence of Mrs. J. L. Whiton. The spacious rooms were well filled by the members and their friends, and the time was passed pleasantly in playing games, singing and conversation.

The Vulture Engine Company will hold a special meeting Monday evening. H.

West Quincy Items.

There will be a grand old folks concert in the M. E. Church, next Thursday evening, April 20th. Rehearsals for the same will be held in the church on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday evenings. Mrs. Clara T. Westlake, of Boston, has been engaged as soloist. A general invitation is extended to all to come and indulge in a good old fashioned time.

Mr. Wm. Wilson, we understand, has been promoted from fireman to engineer, upon the N. Y. & N. E. R. R., only being on the road four months. This is a surety of his ability.

Mr. John D. Nutting has purchased one of Mr. Herbert Doble's fast horses, together with his buggy. It makes a fine looking team.

The freighting has become so extensive at our station that the Company is putting in two long side tracks, which will be of great help to shippers, and a benefit to the road.

Mr. David McGrath has been stationed at Atlantic, as station agent for a while.

Miss Mary T. Ziegler, who has been teaching at the Willard School, is now teaching in North Easton. L.

Wollaston Heights.

Quite an addition is being made to the Shoe Machinery factory recently purchased by Mellen Bray and now utilized for the most part by him, for the manufactory of eyelets. The great influx of laborers here, has made every available tenement eagerly sought for at advanced rents.

Our churches too, under the impulse of a growing population and more fresh and vigorous preaching, are steadily filling with attentive listeners. The Easter Concert in the Baptist Church last Sabbath evening, drew a full house. To-morrow evening, the Sabbath School connected with the Congregational Church here, hold their concert. The subject "Nothing but Leaves." A select choir and quartette of male voices will aid in the singing, while Professor Doane will preside at the piano. ⁂

District Court.

The following cases have been disposed of the present week:—

Benjamin C. Bannon, of Braintree, for being drunk. It being the second offence he was sentenced to 30 days in the House of Correction.

Patrick Lines, of Weymouth, for being drunk. It was the third offence and he was sent for 6 months.

William Nahady, of Randolph, for an assault. He was discharged on payment of costs, amounting to $13.32.

Christopher Nolan of Milton for being drunk. Fined $1 and costs.

O. Chester Crocker, of Hanover, for an assault. Discharged.

William Paterson, of Hanover, assault on Hosea T. Baker. After hearing the evidence Judge Bumpus continued the case until Monday next.

POSTMASTERS. A movement has been inaugurated to bring before Congress the question of electing postmasters by the people. Why the President, whose time is fully occupied with far more important duties, should be called upon to appoint thousands of postmasters of whom he can know nothing, is hard to see. If Congress can be induced to make this change it will be a step in the right direction, which will be heartily received by the people.

The Hose Company's Ball.

The first reception and ball given by the W. M. French Hose Company, and held in the Town Hall on Monday evening, April 10th, proved to be an entire success. The friends of the company attested their regard and esteem in the large number present, there being not less than one hundred and fifty couple on the floor, including many public and prominent citizens.

The hall decorations were simple and pleasing in their effect. Prominently could be seen the portraits of Ex-Chief W. M. French and others showing the life of a fireman. Also the handsome weather-vane, given to the town by the Ex-Hose Company, attracted its share of attention. A genial friend supplemented the decorations with a huge sunflower, much admired by Oscar's friends. The music was furnished by Brown's Brigade Band of Boston. The elegant costumes of the ladies and gentlemen presented a pleasing feature in the grand march, at eight o'clock.

The order of dances being excellent and every care taken by the Company to provide for the comfort of their friends, made this reception one of the social events of the season. One of the many good things of the evening was the excellent supper, one of the best ever given in this town, under the care of Henry J. Seiler.

May the company so well and prudently perform their important and arduous duties, as to evoke a continuance of the high approbation which they have always merited. ⁂

It is Rumored.

That the annual election in the Fire Department is near at hand.

That there are several candidates for the office of Foreman in the Hook and Ladder Company.

That some of these will get left.

That the present board at Engineers should be re-appointed.

That the appearance of Crane Memorial Hall improves every day.

That it is the best library outside of Boston.

That the day of its dedication will be a gala one for Quincy.

That the liquor dealers will soon have to close their shops.

That the "Entre Nous" Club has ceased to exist.

That the order of things has been reversed so that the club is in debt to the treasurer.

That the club's liabilities are eleven cents.

That Walker's dancing school is the largest he ever had in Quincy.

That the ball is near at hand, and a good time may be expected.

That Mr. Walker proposes to have an evening class next winter.

SPECIAL RATES ANNULLED. The Old Colony R. R. Co. have issued a notice to their station agents calling attention to an act of the legislature passed March 21st and taking effect on the 17th of April, by which all special rates between points in Massachusetts are annulled. Both shippers and railroad companies regard this act with not a little solicitude as its effects will be great upon the transportation of merchandise. One effect of the promulgation of the act will be to place all shippers, large and small, occasional and regular, upon the same basis. The man who ships a thousand tons of granite will have to pay as much as the shipper of a single ton of the same class of goods. Another effect anticipated is the turning of freight away from the railroads into other channels. What the railroads will do, or whether they will be able to meet the new condition by lowering rates is yet to be seen. The Old Colony in its circular enjoins strict observance of the act as the penalty for violation is $200.

AMERICAN NEWSPAPERS IN 1882.—The American Newspaper Directory; which will be issued next month by Geo. P. Rowell & Co., of New York, will contain the names of 10,611 periodicals in the United States and Territories, which is a gain of 344 in the year just passed. The number of daily papers has increased in a somewhat larger proportion, and is now represented by a total of 996 against 921 in 1881. The largest increase has been in New York—10 dailies, 29 of all sorts. Illinois and Missouri show a percentage of gain which is even greater, while Colorado leads all others in the percentage of increase, both of daily and weekly issues. California, Nebraska, Nevada, Oregon, South Carolina, Tennessee, Vermont, and West Virginia have fallen behind 1881 in the total number of periodicals issued. In Georgia, Maine and Massachusetts the suspensions have exactly counterbalanced the new ventures. In every State not mentioned above, and in the Territories, there has been an increase.

DORCHESTER MUTUAL. At the annual meeting of the Dorchester Mutual Fire Insurance Company held at their office in Neponset, on Tuesday, April 11th, the following named gentlemen were chosen as Directors for the ensuing year:—

E. J. Baker, H. W. Blanchard, Charles H. Codman, William A. Gilbert, Henry O. Hildreth, Oliver Hall, Richard C. Humphrey, Nathan Holbrook, Laban Pratt, William Pope, J. W. Porter, E. A. Perkins, E. H. R. Ruggles, William H. Swan, M. P. Sumner, Wm. F. Temple, Thomas F. Temple, James Torrey, James H. Upham, William H. West, Seth Mann, 2d.

At a subsequent meeting of the Directors E. J. Baker was elected President and Treasurer, William F. Temple as Secretary and W. D. C. Curtis, Assistant Secretary.

SAILING OVERLAND. Perhaps the strangest steamboat trip ever recorded is that reported from Concordia parish, La. The steamer Minnie arrived at Natchez, having made the distance to that point from the Tensas river—23 miles — so to speak, overland. The steamer left the tortuous channel of the river, and followed the direct route of wagon road, occasionally, still further to reduce the distance, "cutting across lots." Some conception of the character of the deluge on the lower Mississippi and its tributaries may be derived from the weird, romantic and unprecedented voyage of the steamboat Minnie.

SENTENCED. George B. Dasha, of this town, who entered the dwelling house of Mrs. Mary Gallagher, on Marsh street, in December last, has been tried before the Superior Criminal Court, this week, at Dedham, and has been sentenced to three years in the State Prison for larceny and burglary.

Village Improvement.

All that tends to elevate morally, socially, intellectually every individual member of society to become better citizens can justly be termed "village improvement." We have our churches, schools, public buildings, libraries, etc., without which, no community is complete. Their influence is paramount, and lead all other improvements. Each individual, whether property holder or otherwise, is to some extent interested, directly or indirectly, in one and all such institutions. We are called upon by the laws of our common country to establish and sustain some of these, while others receive such support as their projectors, sympathizers and the common interest prompts.

The person who takes an individual pride, either by word or deed, in sustaining such improvements, is worthy the esteem and hearty congratulations of all humane and law abiding citizens. The neighborhood that can inaugurate, support, and carry forward successfully, any society, elevating in its character, is the one from which will spring and nourish the best, the germs which underlie and support all worthy enterprises.

A community that can point to such institutions should be excused if they, in their pride, appear a little enthusiastic or boastful. Such outbursts are warranted, and every community should be exalted that can utter them. Every community that can sustain its character for good, shun and repel all the lower phrases of society, should feel a moral relief of thanksgiving, while so much of our land is going to waste and decay by the festering plagues which pollute and pray upon its vital interests. All good citizens, who hate evil in its manifold forms and associations, should combine in one grand resolve and effort to thrust from among them every distasteful obstacle that obstructs the wheels of progress.

The policy recently adopted by this town and endorsed by the emphatic No at the polls, has only exemplified what can be done when a community is thoroughly aroused as to the dangers which beset them. Every property holder should be held responsible for any act committed by his tenant when insulting the community by establishing a business at variance with good citizenship. Do you wish honor, respect and confidence from earnest lovers of humanity? Then see to it that you betray no trusts by being led into any selfish forgetfulness of the public's good.

The citizen who places "Dangerous" over a wash-out, or removes obstructions from the public street, and by such acts shows his interest for the common welfare of all, should be considered a benefactor. Such manifestations, influenced in the cause of good citizenship, should long live in the hearts of all well disposed, who seek to advance all meritorious acts, all of which embodies and unfolds the grand secrets of Village Improvement.

Brooklyn Brevities.

April 10, 1882.

Things are mixed. This is Easter Monday, but it seems more like Christmas, with the falling snow. The mercury stood at 85° at my study window Saturday, and an overcoat was a burden as I went to Peekskill for the Sabbath, as usual. It stood at 30° this morning, a fall of 55°. Coming down the bank of the Hudson this morning, old Dunderburg and the other peaks of the Highlands looked snowy like December. These sudden changes tell on health.

Many ladies, it is said, sung Miserere on account of the storm, and postponed their Te Deum till fine weather allows them to display their new Spring attire. The floral display was elegant in the churches. Brooklyn Tabernacle, as usual, was beautified with horticultural glories, and Morgan made the organ peal in loudest strains. His salary has been cut down, and he has resigned, closing his long service with this month. The free seat plan did not work here. As elsewhere, there were too many "Sunday bummers," as Scribner's Monthly once styled those who are guilty of the indecency of attending church without contributing to the expenses of preaching, of music, of lighting and warming. A price is now fixed on most of the pews, but some are left for strangers. Few stated worshippers of any self-respect are willing to be regarded as paupers, and let the plate or basket pass unnoticed.

The Brooklyn bridge draws very slowly towards completion. It is an enormous sponge, sucking up the millions; but it will earn money fast when done. The matter of rapid transit here waits its completion. Legal barriers stop every step at present. It takes just the same length of time for me to go to the Grand Central R. R. station from here as to go from that station to Peekskill. Six conveyances are used in all. The first six miles take an hour and a half, including waits, and the last forty-one miles an hour and twenty minutes. But my postal card is full.

SUICIDE. William Capen, a farmer, residing on Brush Hill road, Milton, committed suicide, Sunday night, by plunging head foremost into his well. He left a note telling his wife where she would find the body, and stating that he had lived nearly threescore years with her very happily, and wished her a comfortable life and asked forgiveness for the rash act. Capen was 72 years old.

A pair of twins celebrated their 80th birthday at Nashua, N. H., recently.

Neponset.

Previous to the construction of Neponset bridge and turnpike, the southerly part of Dorchester, from the mouth of the river to Mattapan was generally known as Neponset.

Sometime previous to annexation, there were three banks in Dorchester:—the Dorchester Savings Bank, the Mattapan, at Harrison Square, and the Dorchester and Milton, afterwards the National Blue Hill Bank, at the Lower Mills village. There is now no bank in Dorchester district. The Blue Hill Bank has changed its name to National Blue Hill Bank of Milton, and recently removed to the Milton side of the river. By this move we are informed the bank will save about fifteen hundred dollars a year in taxes; besides its new location being near the depot is more convenient to many of its customers.

Mr. George Vinton who died at the residence of his son at the Quincy farm, on Monday last, at the age of 77, was for many years a resident of Dorchester. He was one of the seven voters of this town, who in 1840 left their old party to vote for James G. Birney, the first candidate of the Liberty party; afterwards the Free Soil. Four of the seven are now living at a very advanced age. The funeral services were conducted by Rev. Dr. Banvard, pastor of the Baptist Church, at Neponset, of which the deceased was for many years a member. B.

Respectfully inscribed to the memory of Mrs. Thompson Baxter.

Rest, Sister, rest, no more disease
Shall fill thy life with pain;
Thy Spirit now hath found release,
Our loss to thee is gain.

Thy mem'ry we will cherish long,
Thy council good and true,
Thy virtues well confirm'd and strong
Through years both old and new.

As mother, sister, wife and friend,
Thy work is all well done;
And in thy home, those virtues blend,
The vict'ry now is won.

We will not say to thee, good bye,
Thy love may present be
From thy new home, then may draw nigh
We'll still remember thee.

HEADQUARTERS GEN. S. THAYER
POST, No. 87, Dept. Mass., G.A.R.
So. Braintree, April 7, 1882.

At the regular meeting of the Post held this date, it was unanimously voted that we extend our sincere thanks to all those who aided in carrying through to so successful an ending, our late fair. We desire to call particular attention to the untiring efforts of the ladies of the several societies representing tables, to whom, in a great measure our success can be attributed. Also to the Braintree Dramatic Association for their fine entertainment, and the Perkins Quartette for music, and finally to the citizens of our town and our good friends from adjoining towns, for their liberal patronage. We assure you all that we will make such judicious use of our funds in relieving the wants of our needy comrades and their families, that not one of you will ever regret that you assisted us in increasing our charity fund, and we shall always look back on your good works with feelings of gratitude and pleasure.

THOMAS' OIL TROUGH TREE PROTECTORS.

Patented August 9, 1881.

This Improved Protector effectually protects the trees against the Canker Worms.

PLEASE Examine our new Protector. Below are some of the reasons why every one owning trees should use this Protector.

1. It is a first-class tree Protector, with a perpendicular front to the oil-pan, which prevents the oil from blowing out.
2. It has a pan large enough to contain oil for the season.
3. It is manufactured from heavy zinc, and will last for years.
4. Being corrugated prevents it sagging when on the trees.
5. The protectors are smaller in the centre, which prevents the packing from falling through.
6. We use tow for packing, so there is no danger of girdling or injuring the tree.
7. By using our protectors, you will get more and finer fruit.
8. It is so constructed as to be a perfect barrier against canker worms; it will prevent codling moths, tussock moths, bark lice, curculio, caterpillars, etc., from ascending the trees.
9. This Protector is so cheap that every one owning trees can apply it. It is simply insuring your trees against insects for a few cents a year.

My experience of several years in selling protectors has taught me what is required by the public is a cheap Oil Trough Protector, easily taken care of and something that cannot injure the trees, and will stop the grub from ascending. I am convinced that nothing can be fastened solid to a tree without doing more or less injury. We have applied our Protectors to hundreds of trees, where other protections have failed. Parties ordering, will please give their orders early to insure their being filled on time. Now is the time to put them on and prevent the codling moths, curculio, bark lice and tussock moth from ascending the trees.

The Price of our Protectors is
10 cts. per Inch in diameter, which includes applying to the tree and filling with oil.

Neatest, cheapest and most durable Protector in the market.

We are prepared to execute with promptness all orders. Address all orders to

A Service to the Public.

The service which the sons of Mr. Adams have rendered to the community by their bold action in giving publicity to the infamous plot against their father, cannot easily be over-estimated. It was probably no idle boast of the ringleader in this conspiracy that he had held other distinguished men in his power, and that they had paid roundly for their guilelessness. Since the story about Mr. Adams has been told several other cases, some of them instances of failure on the part of the swindlers, have come to light. One can easily fancy a hundred ways in which a man's good nature may lead him to trust himself to a stranger in the most innocent way, and yet if the stranger be a swindler he may place his victim in a situation where a good name may be imperilled unless the victim be willing to pay a large sum for an opportunity to escape. Some men would pay to avoid giving an explanation to their friends, others to save themselves from ridicule. Those who are so confident that their whole life gives the lie to suspicion of wrong, and who are willing to serve the community by declaring openly what has happened to them, are very rare, as is shown by the fact that while many swindlers live by blackmail and "banco" games, there are few complaints which the detectives are allowed to investigate.

What Mr. Adams could not do for himself his sons have done for him, at a sacrifice of much family and filial pride. They have made it easier for others who may be assailed by the arts of alluring strangers to resist, even when fairly entrapped, and to pursue the swindlers after escaping from their clutches. * * * * This last swindle might have been hushed up. There was no necessity, except on public grounds, of publicity. But the public good demanded it, and all concerned are deserving of the heartiest praise for bringing the whole affair to light, and for bringing at least one of the offenders to justice.—Boston Daily Advertiser.

Washington Letter.

Congressional Picnics, Fishing Excursions, and Banquets—Increase of Wrath in Congress—Congressional Bachinals.

WASHINGTON, April 11, 1882.

In the spring time some United States Senators' fancies gently turn to thoughts of fishing, excursions, picnics, anywhere away from the heavy debates of the upper House. A party of Senators have just returned from a fishing excursion of several days in Virginia. To-morrow Senator Fair the bachelor Senator from Nevada with a snug little fortune of $40,000,000, will give a picnic excursion to a number of ladies and gentlemen to the Great Falls of the Potomac, twelve miles distant. Yesterday another millionaire, congressman Allen of Missouri, was driven slowly on his last excursion in a hearse from the Arlington hotel to the railway station. He left a fortune of $15,000,000.

The past has been an unusually mild winter at the Capital, but there has been a great deal of sickness among members and senators, and there is reason for the suspicion that much of the ill-health arises from the system-wrecking dissipation that has become too fatally fashionable among members and Senators during the last few years, or since the Senate has become the "House of Millionaires." At no previous time in the history of the country has there been so large a number of wealthy men in Congress. The present Senate contains at least a score of Senators not one of whom is worth less than $200,000. The richest man in the Senate is, of course, Fair, of Nevada, who probably possesses as much as all the other Senators together. Next to him in lucre is David Davis of Illinois, a widower, who is reputed to be the possessor of millions. It is somewhat difficult to name the Senator whose fortune ranks third in size, but, if Eugene Hale of Maine has received the mantle of his father-in-law, Zach. Chandler, with its well lined pockets, his fortune is nearly as large as that of David Davis. The wife of Senator Hale is the only daughter of the late Senator Zach. Chandler. Other very wealthy Senators are Miller, of California; Mahone, of Virginia; and Sawyer, of Wisconsin; known to be worth more than a million each. Sewell of New Jersey is a railroad man and is reported very wealthy. Senator John Sherman, of Ohio, it is said, is worth more than $1,000,000, his property consisting largely of real estate in Washington. Among other Senators who write their fortunes with seven figures, are Cameron, of Pennsylvania; Davis, of West Virginia; and Plum, of Kansas; Senators Hill, of Colorado; Brown, of Georgia; Groome, of Maryland; McPherson, of New Jersey; and Pendleton, of Ohio, are all worth more than $500,000. Many other Senators are comfortably fixed, possessing little hoards of from $50,000 to $300,000. Among those who have but little, comparatively, here below, that is not more than $100,000 apiece, are Morrill, of Vermont; Anthony, of Rhode Island; Rollins, of New Hampshire; Jones, of Nevada; and Jones, of Florida; Johnson, of Virginia; Beck, of Kentucky; Saunders, of Nebraska; Allison, of Iowa; and Harrison of Indiana.

The House has not as many wealthy men in proportion to its members, but there are several millionaires in this body, and many more who, before this late day of colossal fortunes, would have been considered rich. It may be useless to moralize on the influence of this great increase of wealth in the two legislative bodies of the United States, and the undermining and virtue-sapping tendencies that the abuse of wealth will produce on individuals and on States. But it is certainly more profitable to moralize now than it will be at the inquest. There can be no doubt that the efficiency of members and senators is seriously impaired by stomachs ruined, or brains clouded or crazed from the so-called "high-toned" dissipation in which some of our improvised statesmen disport their wealth. There is scarcely an evening that some wealthy congressman does not give a dinner. These dinners are, to speak mildly, orgies of gluttony and drunkenness.

ADAMS.

A NEW INVENTION. The Scientific American says, that "a novel water cart has been patented by Mr. John G. Littlefield, of Milton, Mass. The object of this invention is to provide for filling the tanks of water carts, especially street watering carts, rapidly and conveniently in situations where water under pressure is not to be had; the cart horses being used for that purpose."

SAMARITAN
NERVINE

SAMARITAN NERVINE

Cures Epileptic Fits, Spasms, Convulsions, St. Vitus Dance, Vertigo, Hysterics, Insanity, Apoplexy, Paralysis, Rheumatism, Neuralgia and all Nervous Diseases. This infallable remedy will positively eradicate every species of Nervous Derangement, and drive them away from whence they came, never to return again. It utterly destroys the germs of disease, by neutralizing the hereditary taint or poison in the system, and thoroughly eradicates the disease, and utterly destroys the cause.

SAMARITAN NERVINE

Cures Female Weakness, General Debility, Leucorrhoea or Whites, Painful Menstruation, Ulceration of the Uterus, Internal Heat, Gravel Inflammation of the Bladder, Irritability of the Bladder. For Wakefulness at Night there is no better remedy. During the change of life no female should be without it. It quiets the Nervous system and gives rest, comfort and nature's sweet sleep.

SAMARITAN NERVINE

Cures Alcoholism, Drunkenness and the habit of Opium Eating. These degrading habits are by far the worst evils that have ever befallen suffering humanity. Thousands die annually from these noxious drugs. The drunkard drinks liquor not because he likes it, but for the pleasure of drinking and treating his friends, little thinking that he is on his road to ruin. Like the Opium Eater, he first uses the drug in small quantities as a harmless antidote. The soothing influence of the drug takes strong hold upon its victim, leading him on to his own destruction. The habits of Opium Eating and Liquor Drinking are precisely what eating is to alimentiveness, as over eating first inflames the stomach, which redoubles its cravings until it paralyzes both the stomach and appetite. So every drink of liquor or dose of opium, instead of satisfying, only adds to its fierce fires until it consumes the vital force and then itself. Like the gluttonous tape-worm, it cries, "Give, give, give!" but never enough until its own rapacity devours itself. Samaritan Nervine gives instant relief in all such cases. It produces sleep, quiets the nerves, builds up the nervous system, and restores body and mind to a healthy condition.

SAMARITAN NERVINE

Cures Nervous Dyspepsia, Palpitation of the Heart, Asthma, Bronchitis, Scrofula, Syphilis, diseases of the Kidneys, and all diseases of the urinary organs. Nervous debility, caused by the indiscretions of youth, permanently cured by this invaluable remedy. To you young, middle-aged and old men, who are covering your sufferings as with a mantle, by silence, look up, you can be saved by timely efforts, and make ornaments to society, and jewels in the crown of your Maker, if you will. Do not keep this a secret longer, until it saps your vitals, and destroys both body and soul. If you are thus afflicted, take DR. RICHMOND'S Samaritan Nervine. It will restore your shattered nerves, arrest premature decay, impart tone and energy to the whole system.

SAMARITAN NERVINE

Cured my little girl of fits. She was also deaf and dumb, but it cured her. She can now talk and hear as well as anybody.

DURGIN'S

BEEF, IRON AND WINE.

—IS MADE OF—

Extract of Beef,
Citrate of Iron and
the Best Sherry Wine.

In this preparation are combined the stimulant properties of Wine, and the nutriment of Beef, with the tonic powers of Iron; the effect of which on the blood is so justly valued. The peculiar feature of this combination is that it

Combines Nutriment with Stimulus.

In a majority of cases, along with failure of strength, and indeed as one cause of that failure, there is an inability to digest nourishing food. Hence it is very desirable to furnish nourishment in a form acceptable to the stomach, and, at the same time, to excite this organ to do its duty. On the other hand, wine stimulus, although needed, is ill borne if given by itself, producing headache, excitement and other symptoms, which may be avoided by the addition of a nutritious substance, such as Extract of Beef.

Iron also can be taken in this way by the most delicate or sensitive woman or child, to whom it may be inadmissable as usually given. Prompt results will follow its use in cases of sudden exhaustion, arising either from acute or chronic diseases, and it will prove a Valuable Restorative for all convalescents.

As a nutrative tonic it would be indicated in impaired nutrition, impoverishment of the blood, and in all the forms of General Debility. Each tablespoonful contains one ounce of the Extract of Beef, with two grains of Citrate of Iron dissolved in Sherry Wine.

The Blood, Brain and Nerves are the forces which bear the strain of every day work and life, and in order to save sickness it is wise to

BUILD FOR HEALTH.

Wheat Bitters are prepared, not by fermentation but by solution and are richest in the Phosphates, while the starch and impure matter are eliminated. These make in themselves a basis, to which is added the best and choicest medicinal qualities, necessary to make it a tonic and bitter. It is at once healthful, pleasant to the taste and must not be confounded with the thousand and one cheap alcoholic bitters which are sold as cure-alls. Medicine is doubly effective when used with food, so as to nourish while it corrects.

PERRY DAVIS'

VEGETABLE

PAIN KILLER

A Never-Failing Cure for Burns, Scalds, Bruises, Cuts, Sores, etc.

After forty years of trial, PERRY DAVIS' PAIN KILLER stands unrivaled. It is safe! It acts immediately! It never fails!

Editor of the St. John (N. B.) News, says:
In flesh wounds, aches, pains, sores, etc., it is the most effectual remedy we know of. No family should be without a bottle of it for a single hour.

From the Cincinnati Dispatch:
We have seen its magic effects, and know it to be a good article.

From I. S. Potter, U. S. Consul at Crefeld, Rhenish Prussia:
After long years of use, I am satisfied it is positively efficient as a healing remedy for wounds, bruises, and sprains.

W. W. Sharper, Valdosta, Ga., says:
It is a panacea for all bruises and burns.

From R. W. Adams, Saco, Me.:
It gave me immediate relief.

R. Lewis says:
In forty years' use it never has failed me.

W. W. Lum, Nicholville, N. Y., says:
I use your PAIN KILLER frequently. It relieves pain and soreness, and heals wounds like magic.

J. W. Dee says:
For scalds and burns it has no equal.

PERRY DAVIS' PAIN KILLER is not a new untried remedy. For forty years it has been in constant use; and those who have used it the longest are its best friends.

Its success is entirely because of its merit. Every family should have a bottle ready for use. Much pain and heavy doctors' bills may often be saved by prompt application of the PAIN KILLER. Unlike most medicines, it is perfectly safe even in the hands of a child. Try it once thoroughly, and it will prove its value. Your druggist has it at 25c., 50c., and $1.00 per bottle.

Farm and Garden.

The Asparagus Bed.

Among the first things in the garden to claim attention in the spring, is the asparagus bed. If the bed was covered last autumn, as it should have been, with a good coat of manure, as soon as the frost is well out of the ground, the soil under the manure will be very fine and loose. If one has but a small bed the manure can be forked in, but if a large field then it should be lightly ploughed in with a small one horse plough, providing the plants have been set at the proper depth, say six inches below the surface.

By stirring the soil early in the spring the noxious plants that live through the winter are killed with less labor; and the light and warmth is let into the soil; so that the asparagus starts earlier and with more vigor.

The old method of trying to kill the weeds by the application of large quantities of salt has been abandoned by many of our most successful cultivators. Salt may check the growth of weeds, but it never keeps them down during the entire season; its use has been abandoned by some because careful observation has taught that the asparagus was injured, as well as the weeds; not growing as large, and the flavor not being as good.—Ploughman.

Bertha Morgan.

This cow has now become famous both for her milk, and the high price she has commanded. She was recently purchased of Mr. W. P. Hazard, of Westchester, Penn., for $2500 to take her place at the head of the herd of Valency E. Fuller, Esq., of Hamilton, Ontario, Canada, alongside of the bull "Welcome," the son of "Le Broeg's Prize," that is valued at $5,000—Bertha Morgan, was dropped April 20, 1873, by Patterson's beauty. Her dam could not be bought for $10,000, and is the last thing her owner would sell; she has made 18 lbs of butter.

Bertha herself made in January last, 19 pounds 6 ounces in one week. There have been only eight cows in the United States that have made more butter in one week than Bertha Morgan; and these are not all now living, so that she is nearly the best cow in the country; and is the only cow in Campbell Brown's list of butter cows with a record of over 18 pounds, whose dam also made 18 pounds. Besides, she has two sisters with records of over 15 pounds.—Massachusetts Ploughman.

Top-dressing with Phosphate.

MR. HIRAM HARDING, of Chatham, Mass., wrote us in October, 1881:—

"I have used Bradley's Phosphate on my grass for two years past with entire satisfaction. This year, I put it on three acres at the rate of five hundred pounds per acre, sowing it broadcast the latter part of April. This was too late to obtain the full benefit of it, and I should use it a month earlier another season; but I was able to cut two good crops of grass from that land; the second crop was very heavy for this season. The crop was also very good upon land where I used the Phosphate two years ago; and the turf is very thick and green now upon both fields, showing that its good effects are not exhausted the first season."

Anecdotes.

"One half of the world doesn't know how the other half lives!" exclaimed a gossiping woman.

"Oh, well," said her neighbor, "don't worry about it, 'tisn't your fault if they don't know."

"Ma, am I all made now?" asked a little miss of three-and-one-half years at the breakfast table yesterday morning.

"Why dear?" said the fond mother.

"Because I have had my ears pierced and was vaccinated yesterday," said the little Tot.

"Look heah, squire, dars a niggah in Galveston what's been sassin' me; supposing I jes' maul de life outen him?"

The lawyer replied: "You would be apt to get your neck stretched."

"Now, boss, you is jokin'. What do white folks care for one niggah moah or less now de census is done tuck?"

"Nothing," said an impatient husband, "so reminds me of Balaam and his ass, as two women stopping in church and obstructing the way, to indulge in their everlasting talk."

"But you forget, my dear," returned the wife meekly, "that it was the angel who stopped the way, and Balaam and his ass who complained of it."

Walnut Leaf Hair Restorer.

It is entirely different from all others. It is as clear as water, and, as its name indicates, is a perfect Vegetable Hair Restorer. It will immediately free the head from all dandruff, restore grey hair to its natural color, and produce a new growth where it has fallen off. It does not in any manner affect the health, which Sulphur, Sugar of Lead, and Nitrate of Silver preparations have done. It will change light or faded hair in a few days to a beautiful glossy brown. Ask your druggist for it. Each bottle is warranted. Chas. N. Crittenton, New York, and Geo. C. Goodwin & Co., Boston, wholesale agts. S 24po

Temperance.

[Furnished for publication by the W. C. T. Union.]

It Makes Men Wicked.

One of the worst things about alcohol is that it makes men wicked, or helps them to be so. The most dangerous part of any city are those that have the most rum-shops. The most wicked men and women are drinking people. Drink makes some silly and some stupid. It makes others furious, or cunning, or violent, and these often do much mischief. They do not seem to have any care for the right. Drink paralyzes all the finer feelings of both body and mind.

Men who are kind enough when sober, are often dangerous when drunk. Drunken men often take a malicious pleasure in doing mischief. If they have a spite against any one, they take revenge when intoxicated, because when sober common-sense is gone they forget about the consequences. The law calls it a crime just the same as if they were sober. The great crime of the drunken man comes in when he consents to drink that which takes away his senses. He has no right to poison himself and become like a wild beast let loose in our houses. He who does this ought to suffer the full penalty of the law, for all the wicked acts he may commit. He does not always receive punishment, because those who are hurt by him do not always complain.

In such cities as New York, Brooklyn and Chicago, scarcely a day passes, for months together, that the daily papers do not contain accounts of crimes committed by drunken persons.

If you see the daily papers of any large city having many drinking-shops, it would be an instructive experiment to look over the police reports for one week, and see how many of the crimes are due to drink. A Philadelphia Grand Jury says of one month recently, that a careful examination shows nine-tenths of the crimes entered are due to drink. This is a common estimate of those who have studied the matter.

Household Receipts.

GINGER COOKIES. The taste of ginger cookies can be improved by using half a cup of cold coffee instead of water. There is almost always at least so much left after breakfast; or, if not, put a little water in the pot and let it boil for a minute or two, and strength enough will be given to flavor the cookies.

HINTS ON IRONING. If starch sticks to flat irons it can be removed in a much better way than to scrape it off with a knife, as the particles are almost sure to fall upon the garment you are ironing, and so make trouble: tie a lump of beeswax in a clean bit of cloth, and rub the hot iron on this; it will remove the starch at once. Always wash flat-irons before using them, even when they look clean.

PANDOWDY. Wash a quart of dried apples, soak them over night in cold water, stew them soft in the same water with sugar and spice to make them palatable; put the apple sauce thus made into an earthen baking dish with a tablespoonful of butter, and cover it with a rich paste. Bake the dowdy until the crust is done; then remove it from the oven and break the crust down into the apple with a spoon. Use it hot or cold.

This and That.

☞ People pick their teeth, and yet they do not all get good ones.

☞ "What part," asked a Sunday School teacher, "of the burial of Sir John Moore, do you like best?" The boy was thoughtful for a moment and then replied, "Few and short were the prayers he said."

☞ Whenever unselfish love is the mainspring of men's actions; whenever happiness is placed not on what we can get for ourselves, but on what we can impart to others, we are sure to attain all the happiness which the world can bestow.

☞ The following delicate compliment was paid by a boy to his mother. The family were discussing at the supper-table the qualities which go to make up the good wife. Nobody thought the little fellow had been listening, or could understand the talk, until he leaned over the table and kissed his mother, and said: "Mamma, when I get big enough I'm going marry a lady just like you!"

☞ The poor at your doors, the destitute in the by-ways and alleys, cellars and attics of town and city, are your brothers and sisters. Beneath their rags and your broadcloth flow tides of kindred blood; currents of life from a kindred source; and neither time nor eternity can dissolve the ties that unite you to them and them to you. Such consanguinity of blood should be of the heart also. You should acknowledge them and love them; remembering that the results of your feelings and action will tremble on the wires of eternal destiny, and touch with magic fingers interests of two worlds.

Hall's Vegetable Sicilian Hair Renewer is no new preparation for the public to experiment with; its success is unparalleled for restoring gray hair to its natural color, promoting its growth, and producing new hair on bald heads.

The dyspeptic, nervous individual, who is vainly seeking rest and sleep, will get relief by using Wheat Bitters.

Presentiments.

AN INVESTIGATION OF THE CAUSES OF THOSE DARK FOREBODINGS WHICH MAKE POWERFUL MEN WEAK.

Golden Rule.

Much apprehension has been occasioned throughout America from the announcement made by Professor Proctor, that the return in nineteen years of the great comet of last summer will cause the destruction of the earth. But while people are becoming so strangely exercised over this announcement, an event of far more serious importance, which is taking place to-day, seems to be almost wholly overlooked. The nature of this most vital subject can be best explained by relating the following experiences:

Bishop E. O. Haven, known to the entire land, was unaccountably awakened one night out of a sound sleep, and lay awake until morning. His mind seemed unusually active, and he not only reviewed his past life, which had been an eventful one, but laid extensive plans for the future. He did not feel especially ill, but could not account for the unusual activity of his brain, nor for the restlessness which seemed to possess him. In the morning he had but little appetite, but was apparently well in other respects. In a few days, however, he began to feel restless and morbid, although he tried earnestly to overcome the feeling which had taken possession of him. But try as he would the shadow of some evil seemed to follow him, and he was conscious of a gradual sinking and wasting away of all his physical faculties. He had been an earnest and diligent worker, and in his zeal frequently over-taxed his strength, and being absorbed in his duties, failed to observe the common symptoms with which he was afflicted, thus permitting the work of destruction to go on unheeded. But the end finally came in a most peremptory manner. Shortly before his death he wrote a letter—the last one he ever indited—in which he speaks as follows: "A belief that death is near affects different minds differently, but probably all who are in a fair condition of physical and mental strength instinctively shrink from it with an indefinable dread and horror. A dying man is no more able of himself to foresee his own destiny or the destiny of those he leaves than he was before he began to die."

The recent sad and sudden death of Hon. Clarkson N. Potter is one of the most serious warnings ever given in the long list of innumerable cases of fatal neglect. It is not sufficient to say that many other brilliant men, including Everett, Sumner, Chase, Wood, Wilson and Carpenter were swept away by the same fatal trouble. The question is, were these men sufficiently careful of their health, and could they have been saved? The Albany Argus in speaking of Mr. Potter's sudden illness and death, says:

"One of the physicians who attended Mr. Potter here was interviewed last evening. He stated that Mr. Potter's inability to converse had for some time served to baffle the physicians in their efforts to determine the root of his illness. It seems, however, that Mr. Potter, some two years ago, suffered a slight attack of kidney disease. Unwise dependence upon a robust constitution and naturally perfect health, and neglect of proper clothing, doubtless sowed the seeds of a disease that needed but some such personal neglect as that of Tuesday morning to develop. From the symptoms at first shown, it was thought that his only trouble was nervous prostration; but his long continuance in a semi-unconscious state led to the belief that his illness was seated in a chronic difficulty more mysterious and dangerous."

Up to the latter part of last year Mr. Edward F. Rook, of the New York stock exchange, was doing business in Wall street, New York. He had everything to encourage him and make life happy, but was the victim of unaccountable uneasiness. His experience as described by one who knew, was as follows: "At unexpected times, and on occasions when he had the greatest reason to feel joyous, he was irritable and haunted with strange feelings of discontent. He endeavored to check these feelings and appear pleasant, but it required a great effort to do so; after which he would again relapse into his former morbid mood. This feeling continued for a number of months, when he became conscious of an added sensation of lassitude. He was tired even when resting, and although experiencing no acute pain, had dull aching sensations in his limbs and various parts of his body. Shortly afterward his head began to ache most frequently and his stomach failed to digest properly. Being told that he was suffering from malaria he consulted an eminent physician, who informed him that his kidneys were slightly affected, and gave him medicine to restore them. But he grew worse instead of better. He then consulted other eminent doctors of another school and was informed that he had a brain difficulty somewhat in the nature of a tumor, but in spite of all efforts to the contrary he continued to grow worse. At this time his condition was terrible. What were at first simple symptoms, had developed to terrible troubles. He was flushed and feverish, constantly uneasy, and yet always weary. He had an intense appetite one day and very little the next. His pulse was irregular, his breathing labored, and every moment of existence was a burden. These disastrous symptoms continued, his face and body became discolored, his heart was irregular in its action, and his breath came in short convulsive gasps. He grew constantly worse, notwithstanding the utmost precautions of his friends and finally died in the greatest agony. After his death an examination as to its actual cause was made, when his brain was found to be in a perfect condition, and the reason of his decease was of an entirely different nature."

The experiences which have been cited above, all had a common cause, and were each the result of one disease. That disease which so deceitfully yet so surely removed the people above mentioned was Bright's disease of the kidneys. In the case of Mr. Rook, the examination after death, while showing the brain to be in perfect condition, revealed the terrible fact that he was the victim of a slight kidney trouble, which had gone on unchecked, until it resulted in acute Bright's disease. The leading physicians and scientists of the world are fast learning that more than one-half the deaths which occur are caused by this monstrous scourge. It is one of the most deceitful maladies ever known to the human race. It manifests itself by symptoms so slight and common, as to seem unworthy of attention; and yet these very insignificant symptoms are the first stages of the worst complaint known in the history of the world. Thousands of people have died from troubles that are called heart disease, apoplexy, pneumonia, brain fever, and similar diseases, when it was, in fact, Bright's disease of the kidneys. The ravages of this disease have been greatly increased from the fact that until recent years no way was known to prevent its beginning nor check its increase when it had become once fixed upon the system. Within the past two years, however, we have learned of more than four hundred pronounced cases of Bright's disease, many of them much worse than those above described, and most of whom had been given up by prominent physicians, who have been completely cured. The means used to accomplish this end has been Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure, manufactured in Rochester, N. Y., a remedy that has won its way into the confidence of the public solely upon the remarkable merits it possesses. As a result, it is more widely used and thoroughly praised than any medicine which has ever been before the American public. Indeed there is not a drug store in the entire land where it cannot be found.

Although Bright's disease is so common in cities, it is still more prevalent in the country. When eminent physicians in the largest cities are not able to recognize Bright's disease, it is only natural that in the country, where there are few physicians of any kind, and those few so unacquainted with the disease as to call it by some other name, it should rage terribly and yet unknown to the ones who are suffering with it. Thousands of people can look back and recall the death of friends from what was supposed to be some common complaint, when it was really Bright's disease, and no one knew it. The terrible pleuro-pneumonia, which has been so dreaded, is usually the result of uremic or kidney poison. Lung fever can be traced to a similar source. Most cases of paralysis arise from the same difficulty, as well as innumerable fevers, lung, throat, head and bowel troubles. A vast number of ladies have suffered and died from complaints common to their sex called, perhaps, general debility, when, could the real cause have been known, it would have been found to be Bright's disease, masquerading under another name. In marked contrast to the sad cases which have been above described are the experiences of many prominent people who were as low as any of the persons mentioned, but who were remarkably restored to former health and vigor by this same remedy. Among this number are the following prominent names: Col. John G. Whitner, Atlanta, Ga.; B. F. Larrabee, Boston, Mass.; Gen. C. A. Heckman, Phillipsburg, N. J.; Rev. D. D. Buck, D. D., Geneva, N. Y.; Dr. F. A. McManus, Baltimore, Md.; Edwin Fay, Davenport, Iowa; Rev. A. C. Kendrick, LL. D., Rochester, N. Y.; J. S. Matthews, Portland, Mich.; C. W. Eastwood, New York; Dr. A. A. Ramsey, Albia, Iowa; Chancellor C. N. Sims, D. D., Syracuse, N. Y.; Dr. S. P. Jones, Marienette, Wis.; T. S. Ingraham, Cleveland, O.; Henry T. Champney, Boston, Mass.; Elder James S. Prescott, North Union, O., who is a prominent member of the Shaker community, and many others.

To all candid minds the force of the above facts must come with special power. They show the importance of promptness and attention to the first symptoms of disordered health before disease becomes fixed and hope departs. They show how this can successfully be done, and that the dangers which await neglect can only with difficulty be removed.

NORFOLK, SS. PROBATE COURT.

TO the Next-of-Kin, Creditors, and all other persons interested in the estate of

GEORGE W. WHITE,

late of Braintree in said County, deceased, intestate:

Whereas, application has been made to said Court to grant a letter of administration on the estate of said deceased, to Nancy White and William Walter Dennett both of Braintree, in the County of Norfolk,

You are hereby cited to appear at a Probate Court to be holden at Hyde Park, in said County of Norfolk, on the fourth Wednesday of April, current, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, to show cause if any you have, against granting the same.

And said petitioner is hereby directed to give public notice thereof, by publishing this Citation once a week, for three successive weeks, in the newspaper called the Quincy PATRIOT, printed at Quincy, the last publication to be two days at least, before said Court.

Witness, GEORGE WHITE, Esquire, Judge of said Court, this fifth day of April, in the year one thousand eight hundred and eighty-two.

By Universal Accord,

AYER'S CATHARTIC PILLS are the best of all purgatives for family use. They are the product of long, laborious, and successful chemical investigation, and their extensive use, by physicians in their practice, and by all civilized nations, proves them the best and most effectual purgative Pill that medical science can devise. Being purely vegetable no harm can arise from their use, and being sugar-coated, they are pleasant to take. In intrinsic value and curative powers no other Pills can be compared with them; and every person, knowing their virtues, will employ them, when needed. They keep the system in perfect order, and maintain in healthy action the whole machinery of life. Mild, searching and effectual, they are especially adapted to the needs of the digestive apparatus, derangements of which they prevent and cure, if timely taken. They are the best and safest physic to employ for children and weakened constitutions, where a mild but effectual cathartic is required.

For sale by all druggists.

The Tiller of the Soil.

Spring has come again, and now
Begins the farmer's round of toil,
The harrow, spade and the plow,
Leads the harvest from the fertile soil.

From the greenwood doth clearly ring
The wild bird's mellow lay,
And tiny leaves freshly bring
The welcome of the sunny day.

O'er the hills and extending plain,
Where the wild herd roamed in days of yore,
The sturdy yeoman sows the grain,
And the red man's tread is heard no more.

His arms more brawn than those of other men,
Co worker with nature in his might and skill,
More fruitful than works of tongue or pen,
His noble lot fulfil.

With the early morning ray,
His busy form doth appear,
The product of his labors broadly lay,
Before the millions through the year.

Ever bounteous may be the lot,
Peace, plenty from honest toil,
Around the fireside in the cheerful cot,
Of the tiller of the soil.

THE SQUIRE'S WOOING.

Squire Kimball was in his strawberry patch pulling up weeds when Lucy Keene came down the road that beautiful July morning, and he was about to throw an armful of them over the fence as she came round the corner. The sunbonnet she wore was exactly like one he remembered to have seen her mother wear twenty-five years ago; and he remembered, too, as he looked at this one, and the fresh, rosy face under it, how that one had made his heart flutter the first time he saw it, and how he was so bewitched by it, or the face under it, that he had walked home with Hester and had hard work to keep from proposing to her.

He wondered now, and he had wondered many times in the twenty-five years that had gone by since then, why he never did propose to her. He had meant to marry her some time, and he was sure she liked him in the old days; but—and he had sighed to himself more than once when he thought of it—something had come between them, and she had married Robert Keene, and he had married his cousin Mary. Fate must have had something to do with it, he concluded.

As he looked at Hester's daughter this summer morning the old fire stirred under the dust and ashes of twenty-five years, and he felt a little flame spring up in his heart.

"Good morning, Lucy!" he said leaning over the fence.

"Oh!" exclaimed Lucy, with a little jump, "I didn't see you, and you came near scaring me. Isn't it pleasant?"

"Yes, it is pleasant," answered the squire, looking straight at her pretty face. "How's your mother?"

"Pretty well," answered Lucy. "Your strawberries are doing splendid, aren't they? We're so provoked about ours. The hens got into the garden, and mother says she don't think we'll have a pailful of berries in all."

"I want to know!" exclaimed the squire. "Now, you tell your mother that she's welcome to all she wants out of my patch. She can have 'em just as well as not. There's going to be a sight more'n we'll want, and I'd rather have 'em used than wasted."

"I will tell her," answered Lucy; "I know she'll be delighted at the chance. You know what a hand she is to make strawberry preserves."

"Yes, I do," answered the squire, thinking of old times. "I remember she beat all the old housekeepers at that. They used to say that she had a knack of making strawberry jam that nobody else could get hold of."

"She hasn't lost it yet," said Lucy. She'll be pleased to have you come to tea some time, and try some she made last year. She had unusually good luck."

"I'll do it," said the squire. "Let me see—to-day's Wednesday. Tell her I'll come over Saturday, if it's agreeable, and I guess the berries'll be ripe so I can pick a pailful by that time. If they be, I'll bring some over."

"Thank you!" said Lucy. "If you do we'll have a short cake. I'll tell her to expect you to tea on Saturday, then."

"Yes," answered the squire; "I'll be round if nothing happens. Oh, I heard from Charley yesterday. He'll be home in a day or two to stay."

"That'll be pleasant for you, said Lucy, stopping to pick up a daisy.

The squire could not see how rosy the face under the bewitching sunbonnet grew all at once. If he had it might have set him thinking.

"Yes it will," said the squire. "Charley's a good boy."

"I guess I'll have to be going," said Lucy. "We shall expect you to tea on Saturday, remember.

"I won't disappoint you," said the squire; and then Lucy went on, and he went back to pulling weeds.

"I s'pose it's foolish to think of such a thing," he said to himself, "but I don't know as it's anybody's business but ours. If I see fit to marry Lucy and she's willin', I'm going to do it.

From which you will see that the squire's fancy for the mother had suddenly been transferred to the daughter.

Charley came home the next day.

"I s'pose I'll have to tell him what I've been thinking about," thought the squire. "I'd about as soon take a horse whipping, I declare. But there ain't no use in dreading it an' putting it off, as I know of.

Accordingly, when they were sitting on the piazza after supper, the squire began:

"I've been thinking some of getting a new housekeeper," he announced, feeling his face getting uncomfortably hot.

"Won't Aunt Sarah stop?" asked Charley.

"I—I mean a housekeeper of another kind," said the squire, wiping his face vigorously.

Charley gave a whistle of surprise, and stared hard at his father.

"Who is it to be?" if I may ask such a question?" he said.

"Down the road," said the squire, jerking his thumb over his shoulder, in the direction of the widow Keene's.

He couldn't muster up courage to say Lucy.

"Aha! that's the way the wind blows, is it?" laughed Charley. "I'm glad to hear it. You couldn't do better.

"I'm glad to hear you say so," said the squire, much relieved. "I felt sure you'd like to have Lucy a member of the family."

"I haven't any objections, if she hasn't," said Charley.

"So that's over," said the squire, much relieved, as Charley strolled down the road in the early evening. "I wonder he never took a fancy to her. I s'pose folk'll say I'm an old fool, but I don't care."

While he sat there Charley was telling Lucy that his father had keener eyes than he had given him credit for, for he seemed to understand how matter stood perfectly. And what he told her after that is none of your business or mine, though I will say that I feel sure it had something to do with Lucy's "becoming one of the family."

About four o'clock Saturday afternoon the squire, in his best coat and with a pail of strawberries on his arm, knocked at Mrs. Keene's door.

"Good afternoon," said the widow, as she let him in, with a charming suspicious blush in her face, which he had to admit, was almost as fair as it had been five and twenty years ago.

"Here's some berries," said the squire, awkwardly presenting his offering. "Lucy said the hens had played the mischief with yours."

"I'm a thousand times obliged to you!" said the widow.

By that time the squire had got to the sitting-room door. Whom should he see there but Charley, seemingly very much at home, as he held worsted for Lucy to wind.

"I managed to get invited to tea, too," said Charley. "You kept it pretty sly, but I wasn't to be cheated out of my share of strawberry preserves."

Then Charley and Lucy looked at each other and laughed; and the squire felt his face grow red.

"Just see what he has brought us!" said the widow, displaying the berries. "If you'll help hull 'em, Lucy, we'll have a short-cake for tea. I remember how fond you used to be of strawberry short-cake years ago," and the widow smiled at the squire till there was a dimple in each cheek.

"I remember, too," responded the squire.

Then Lucy and her mother went out.

"I've spoken to her about being one of the family, and she's willing," said Charley.

"I—I don't understand!" said the squire, in great bewilderment, growing hot then cold.

"Why you know what you said the other night when you told me you thought of getting her mother for housekeeper," explained Charlie. "I supposed you understood, from what you said, that Lucy and I intended to be married. It's all settled."

The squire sat speechless. What he thought of in the next five minutes could not be condensed into a column of this paper.

"I—I hope you'll be happy," he stammered at last, feeling that something was expected of him.

"I am sure we will," said Charlie. "I hope you will, too."

Pretty soon the widow came in.

"The short-cake's baking," she said. Lucy said she'd hull the berries and set the table, and sent me in to play lady and entertain the company."

Charley watched his opportunity, and slipped into the kitchen.

The squire had made up his mind again. If he couldn't have Lucy he'd have her mother, if he could get her.

"Come to think it all over," he told himself, "that was the best plan by all odds."

He wondered how he could have been foolish enough to think of marrying a girl of twenty-one or two. The idea was ridiculous. "What's the use of waiting?" thought he. "It might as well be settled now as any time."

"Hester," he began, getting red again, "Charley and Lucy are going to get married. Why shouldn't we?"

"Why, Squire Kimball!" cried the widow blushing so rosily that he thought she was prettier than her daughter.

"I came over on purpose to ask you," said the squire, telling a most outrageous fib. "I hope you haven't any objections."

When Lucy came in half an hour later to say tea was ready, the squire rose up blushing like a girl, and jerked his thumb towards the widow, and said in a voice that shook a little:—

"That's your mother, Lucy. I mean she's Mrs. Kimball, or going to be. It's all settled."

"I s'pose I may kiss my father then," said Lucy, and plumped a kiss on the squire's lips, who said she might give him another for her father-in-law, while she was about it, if she'd no objections.

"One'll answer for both," laughed Lucy.

Then the squire gave his arm to the woman he had meant to marry twenty years ago, and led her out to tea. He has never regretted that matters turned out as they did.

"Lucy can't be beat for a daughter," he tells himself; "but he don't want any better wife than her mother makes."

Perfect Bread.

The following extract from the Chicago Tribune, refers to a microscopic examination made by Ephraim Cutter, A. M., M. D., Harvard and University of Pennsylvania, of the cereal food used in this country.

The result of this examination and Dr. Cutter's report of the same, is not confined by any means to infant's food, but extends to the bread we eat, and shows conclusively that the bread-reform movement, now so widespread in Great Britain, is soon to take place in this country.

Dr. M. C. Bragdon, of Evanston, Ill., who is the writer of this article says: "A few statements made by Dr. Cutter tend to show that the beautiful white bread, now so popular in this country, is causing more sickness and ill-health than anything we eat, and that the bread we should eat is made from a fine flour of the entire wheat. What is known as Graham flour but few people can eat to any extent, it is so coarse and laxative, and contains the outer skin or woody husk of the kernel of wheat, which is not a food, is innutritious and indigestible. The flour recommended by Dr. Cutter and by the Bread Reform League of London, is known as the "entire wheat flour," and in his report Dr. Cutter speaks of it as follows: "Repeated examinations prove this (entire wheat flour) to be the best flour examined. So long as the makers maintain such a proportion of gluten cells they confer a blessing on mankind. It produces a light and spongy bread. It is a reliable infant's food."

This particular flour of which he speaks so highly is used in this community largely, and can be recommended by every physician of every school for infants and invalids, as well as being the best flour made for all people. For the first time in the history of milling this has been accomplished—viz: a fine flour of the entire wheat. The process of manufacture, as well as the product, is something new. No millstones being used, the product is manufactured cold; hence there is no chemical or other injury to the mineral food elements of the grain, and they are all preserved in the flour in the same purity and proportion that Nature stored them in the wheat.

"To me flour from which the gluten (in the bran) has been removed is almost criminal; that it is foolish and needless needs now no further demonstration."

When such well-known men as Dr. James S. Jewell of Chicago, Dr. J. Marion Sims of New York, Dr. T. T. Seeley of Cleveland, O.; Drs. G. B. Harriman and Le Roy Sunderland, of Boston; Dr. Howard Smith, Newark, N. J.; Prof. Eugene L. Richards of Yale College; Drs. Robert Hamilton and S. S. Strong, of Saratoga Springs, N. Y.; Drs. D. S. Clark and W. D. McAffee, of Rockford, Ill., and hundreds of others speak in the highest terms of entire wheat flour as a nutriment, which they do, it is evident that a movement, now so ably assisted by Dr. Cutter, should and will be encouraged by the press of this country, until it shall become here, as well as in Great Britain, one of the most popular reforms of this country.

Simpson's New Roof.

Down in Tuckahoe, N. J., there is a man named Simpson, who has a flat roof on his house covered with tin—so says Max Adeler. The roof got to leaking, and it happened to occur to Simpson that it would be a good thing to cover the whole surface with the material out of which concrete pavements are made, in order to make it perfectly tight. A man was accordingly engaged, and he covered the tin with concrete to the depth of four inches. The curse of Tuckahoe is cats. In warm weather millions of them assemble and hold ratification meetings and rehearsals and general synods out in the back yards and on the roofs. In Tuckahoe, the heat is unusually intense, and Mr. Simpson was unusually annoyed by the animated discussions of the cats in his neighborhood. The more he "shooed" them and flung old boots at them the more they yelled. Night after night it grew more terrific, and day by day Mr. Simpson observed that the mysterious caterwauling continued during all the hours of daylight. Simpson hadn't a bootjack or a blacking brush or a rolling pin or a cologne bottle to throw at them.

At last, one moonlight night, the uproar got to be so outrageous that Simpson arose from his bed, determined to ascertain what all this growling meant anyhow! It appeared to him that the noise came from the top of the house. He went up into the garret and put his head out of the trap door. There he found 196 cats stuck fast knee deep in the concrete, which had been softened by the heat. Some of them had been there four days. The minute they caught sight of Simpson the whole 196 doubled up their spines, ruffled up their back hair, snaked their tails, and gave one unearthly howl which shook Simpson's nerves so much that he dropped the trap door and fell down the step ladder on the head of Mrs. Simpson, who was standing below dressed in a thing with a frill on it, and armed with a palm leaf fan and a bed slat, determined to protect Simpson to the death. Simpson has since sold the house to a man who makes sausages and fur tippets, and it is whispered around Tuckahoe that his actual gains average forty dollars a night.

A bit of soap rubbed on the hinges of doors will prevent their creaking.

A Natural Curiosity.

MESSRS. EDITORS:—Some of your people may be aware of the fact, but I have not found any who knew that on the line between the towns of Quincy and Braintree there is one of the greatest natural curiosities to be found hereabouts. I have often inquired of the Selectmen, whose duty it is to perambulate the line between the towns, if they had noticed this curious tree, but, being in the woods they have never seen it. I have watched it for years with great curiosity. There is a large flat rock, say some ten feet high on the nearly perpendicular front side; the top slopes back from the front for a distance of twenty feet or more, where it is some three or four feet high. The top makes a surface of some ten or twelve by some twenty feet which is tolerable level. About midway on the top, and say some six or eight feet from the ground, there are one or two seams of one foot or more in width, extending to the ground. One of these seams, about the middle of the rock, some hundred or more years ago, filled with leaves, which decayed and formed a bed in which a hemlock seed took root and grew, sending its roots down through the seam to the earth below, where it found nourishment to make a large tree, which has continued to grow until it has become a very large tree. It is fifty or sixty feet high, and between six and seven feet in circumference, and is the largest tree with one exception that I know of in the woods. Where the tree sits on the rock the latter bulges out six or eight inches larger than it does one foot higher.

Whether the seam or crack was as large when the tree first started, or whether it has been enlarged by the growth of the tree, it is impossible to tell now. If I had thought to measure it when I first discovered it, it might have been ascertained, but it is too late now. I have been watching it for years, thinking that every gale would blow it over; but it is in reality founded on a rock, and the storms and tempests have not as yet prevailed against it. The last time I saw it, a year or more ago, I carried Mr. Hinckley, the artist, who took a sketch of it, but remarked: "If I were to paint this as it is, people would call it a fancy sketch; they would not believe that so large a tree could possible grow on such a rock." It was then fresh and vigorous, but having attained a good growth, must like all of us, soon be in the sere and yellow leaf, and some gentle breeze may soon do that which the hardest storms have been unable to do.

CHARLES BRECK.

Boston, Then and Now.

In Boston, a century ago, Samuel Adams, James Otis, and the Sons of Liberty, insisted with eloquent urgency that taxation without representation is tyranny. When the British Ministry replied that they were virtually represented, the Bostonians retorted that they would have actual representation and they shook off the British connection and had it.

There are to-day in Boston, according to the statement of a Massachusetts Senator, 8500 women who hold property valued at $75,000,000, upon which they pay an annual tax of more than $1,000,000. They are told by the sons of Adams and Otis that they are virtually represented. Yet there is not one of those sons who would submit in his own case to virtual representation any more than their fathers submitted. Now if it was right or expedient that the colonies should tax themselves, why is it not equally right and expedient that woman should have a voice in levying and expending the taxes upon their own property?—Harper's Weekly.

Of Course He Knew.

A primary teacher, not a thousand miles from Boston, is describing the banana, and the children are to name it. Finally she steps to the board and draws the outline of the fruit. Up comes Johnnie's hand.

"Well, Johnnie, what have I described?"

"Cucumber!"

"Oh, no; the cucumber grows here, and I told you this fruit grows in the South; besides, is not a cucumber a vegetable?"

Johnnie yields the point and relapses into a brown study. Soon an idea strikes him and up comes his hand again.

"Are you sure you are right this time, Johnnie?"

"Yes'm"—with self reliance.

"Well, what is it?"

"Sausage!" is the triumphant rejoinder.

Parted.

A reverend gentleman horrified a small company a few evenings ago by telling that he and his wife had separated.

"Not parted!" exclaimed three or four in a breath.

"Yes," said the gentleman, with a sigh; "we had some words, and parted."

A shudder went around the room, when some one inquired,—

"For good?"

"Oh, no!" said the divine. "She has only gone to the country, and will be back in a day or two."

"But," said one of the bolder ones, after a while, "but did you really have any words with her?

"Oh, yes! She said, 'Good-by, dear;' and so did I."

☞ In the ten years since its discovery the telephone has come into use in all civilized countries and some of the semi-civilized. In the United States there are 408 telephone exchanges and 132,692 instruments.

The Quincy Patriot.

SATURDAY, APRIL 22, 1882.

Telephone Facilities.

Mr. J. B. Gardiner, General Manager, and Mr. Choate, of the Suburban Telephone Company of Boston, met the Committee on Fire Alarm and also the Selectmen, at the office of the latter, on We nesday evening, and the proposal of the Telephone Company, mentioned in the PATRIOT last week, proved satisfactory to all and will probably be adopted. As it is rather early in the season to get poles it will be some weeks before we shall have connections; but Mr. Gardiner thinks it will be less than a month.

It was first proposed to connect Quincy with Boston by the way of Milton and West Quincy, using the poles of the Brockton Telephone Company as far as the latter place, but now it is the intention to run directly from Field's Corner, Dorchester, through Atlantic and Wollaston, thereby giving Quincy better accommodation.

The Suburban Telephone Company have divided the territory about Boston into districts, and Quincy is in the Sixth District, which also includes Milton and Dorchester. A subscriber in either of the above places will have the free use of the telephone in the district, and the yearly rate will be $36 for residences, and $48 for business purposes.

Last week we stated that the price of connection with Boston and elsewhere outside the district would be ten cents. This applies only to telephone subscribers, and the non-subscribers will be charged twenty-five cents.

The company expect to get their lines to Nantasket in time for the summer business.

DECEASED. One more of the aged has passed from among us. Under the usual death head will be found the name of a dearly beloved lady, Mrs. George Nightingale, who died on Monday morning, after a short illness. This venerable lady has left a host of friends to sympathize with her sorrowing relatives. She was one of those genial ladies, with a kind word and pleasant smile for every one, and derived great pleasure from entertaining her friends, which she could do in a very agreeable and ladylike manner. By the bedside of the sick and dying she was a ministering angel as long as she was able, and even many times when not feeling equal to the duties. Death had no terror for her; she only waited the summons of her Father, and these were her favorite lines, and she often repeated them:

> "It is not death, 'tis only rest,
> 'Tis glory opened to the blest."

Her funeral took place on Wednesday from the Congregational Church, and was largely attended. Her remains were conveyed to Mount Wollaston Cemetery for interment.

ANNIVERSARY. The fiftieth anniversary of the Congregational Sunday School was observed last Sunday evening. The exercises, which were very interesting, consisted of singing, readings and recitations by the school, and addresses by the pastor, superintendent and Mr. Theophilus King. The secretary, Mr. J. S. Baxter, reported the total membership to be 309, a gain over any previous year, and the amount contributed for benevolent objects, $125. The primary department, under the charge of Miss E. F. Merrill, numbers 62. Prof. Bush has charge of a large Bible Class in the audience room. An addition of new books has recently been made to the library, which now contains 460 volumes. The superintendent has served thirteen years, and the secretary twenty-nine years, and both of them have been elected for the ensuing year.

PLEASANT SURPRISE PARTY. On Thursday afternoon a pleasant gathering was held at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Nickerson, at Mattapan, to celebrate the birthday of that lady. About fifteen ladies and gentlemen from this town were among the party. Mrs. Nickerson is a daughter of the venerable Mrs. Thomas Pratt, of this town; she was more than surprised when some thirty or more friends suddenly appeared to her, but after a few moments she rallied and warmly welcomed the intruders. The occasion was one of pleasure and enjoyment, and the hours sped all too quickly. It is the wish of her many friends that the lady may pass many more birthdays as happily as this one.

HOUSE MOVING. Mr. John Cavanagh of Braintree, is moving a house belonging to Mr. Franklin Hardwick of Quincy, from near his residence on Spear street, to Newcomb street. It is an old house, one-and-a-half stories in height, with L's, and a long roof in the rear. It was built fifty-one years ago for Mr. Seth Spear, who occupied it until he moved to his present residence. Mr. Thayer and his family are now the occupants and are being moved with the building. It is a quiet and easy way to move household goods, for they do not get broken and mixed up as badly as when teamsters do the carting.

A PLEASANT VISIT. On Thursday evening some twenty members of the Granite Temple of Honor of this town, visited West Scituate. They carried with them a very handsome polished granite block, to place on the desk of the Temple of Honor of that place, to strike the gavel on. It bore the inscription of "Corner Stone Temple of Honor, No. 22," in beautiful gilt letters. It was a present from Granite Temple of this town, to their West Scituate friends.

SENTENCED. Michael Kiggie, alias John Kelly, of Boston, who was tried before the Superior Court, at Dedham, last week, for larceny at N. Porter Keen's shipyard, North Weymouth, was found guilty, and through facts furnished by Officer Furnald of Quincy, received a sentence of five years in the State Prison. He appeared, from evidence, to be an old offender, and it is fortunate for our yachtmen and others, that he has been sentenced for a good term of years.

FAIR. The ladies connected with the Universalist Society will give a fair at the Town Hall on Tuesday and Wednesday, May 2d and 3d. A fine entertainment will be given each evening, of which full notice will be given next week.

ROBBERY. The rooms of E. P. Gifford & Son, merchant tailors, South Abington, were broken into Monday night at a late hour, and everything of value was taken

Brief Locals.

☞ The summer term of the Greenleaf Street Private School begins May 1.

☞ A watch charm has been lost which the owner is desirous of recovering.

☞ The beautiful rain of Wednesday started the grass and it has a rich velvety look.

☞ Capt. Elijah S. Brown who has been quite sick we are pleased to learn is convalescing.

☞ Rev. Mr. Norton exchanges pulpits with Rev. L. H. Frary, of Weymouth, to-morrow.

☞ A gold ring, highly prized by the owner, has been lost; for which a liberal reward will be paid.

☞ Owing to the high price asked for butter, oleomargarine has been recently offered for sale in Quincy.

☞ On Sunday afternoon and evening a brush fire raged in the woods on Adams street, near the "Newcomb Lot."

☞ A new fruit store has been opened on Granite street, near the post-office, where choice fruit is sold cheap.

☞ Rev. Mr. Hill, a very able minister from Norwood, will occupy the desk at the Universalist Church on Sunday.

☞ The warm weather with rain has started vegetation forward quite rapidly this week, and the indications of spring are really before us.

☞ Joseph W. Lombard will sell on Monday next, valuable real estate at Atlantic and West Quincy, belonging to the late Dr. Wm. B. Duggan.

☞ The Road Commissioners have received a petition for laying out a new street from the junction of Adams and Common streets to Central avenue, Wollaston.

☞ A valuable collection of stock, farming tools, potatoes, etc., will be sold by E. F. E. Thayer, on Tuesday next, at the farm of Dr. J. L. Simonds in Braintree.

☞ The Committee appointed to purchase a steam fire engine, visited Bradford, Mass., Wednesday to witness the trial of a new Silsby engine just purchased by that town.

☞ E. Clapp is agent for Lewando's French dye house, where the best of work is guaranteed; as now is the time to have dress goods renovated, Mr. Clapp solicits orders for this reliable establishment.

☞ A horse and buggy, left hitched in front of the Robertson House on Thursday evening, was stolen. The team belonged to Mr. Burrell of Weymouth. Officer Furnald was in search of the team yesterday.

☞ All persons having demands against the estate of Lewis W. Richardson, late of Quincy, who have not presented their claims to the Commissioners for approval, are requested to do so this afternoon at 2 o'clock, at the office of James B. Chaffin, Esq.

☞ There is considerable sickness around town, arising principally from colds. Among those on the sick list is Mrs. Thomas Newcomb, Miss Sarah Palmer and Mrs. Lewis Newcomb. May these ladies soon be restored to health is the wish of their friends.

☞ Miss Sibylla Pfaffman, a graduate of the Quincy High School in the class of '77, and of the Thayer Academy, Braintree, in '81, has been assigned a position in the Adams school. She was teaching a grammar school in Sharon, but resigned to take a situation in her own town. Her departure from Sharon caused deep regret.

A NEW THING. An electric elevated road is to be built in Berlin, traversing the city from west to east. Instead of compelling passengers to climb stairs, the cars will be lowered at the stations to the street by means of an electric elevator.

☞ The Queen of England has now reigned about forty-four years. The salaries and perquisites paid to her and her family will average fully $5,000,000 a year, or, during the period of her reign, the enormous sum of $220,000,000.

☞ The body of a child that had been buried twenty years in the village graveyard of a town in Pennsylvania, was recently disinterred, and found to be perfectly preserved. It resembled a wax figure, and the hair, eyebrows and teeth were perfect.

☞ Twins born to a woman in Bowling Green, Ky., are registered as having different birthdays. They were born within four minutes of each other, yet one arrived on Sunday, Dec. 31, 1881, and the other on Monday, Jan. 1, 1882.

☞ Barnum's great elephant Jumbo arrived in New York on the 8th inst. He has cost his present owners, up to the time of his arrival, $30,000, only $10,000 of which was purchase money. He bids fair to be indeed a big elephant on their hands.

☞ Nicodemus is a negro colony of 367 families in Graham county, Kansas. There are two churches, two schools, and several stores; but the remarkable fact about Nicodemus is the entire absence of money. All the trading is done with the produce of the farms.

HALIBUT. Fresh halibut brought higher prices at Gloucester this week than was ever known in April. The market was short, and fishermen were paid nine cents for gray and fourteen cents per pound for white.

DEFEATED. The Senate on Wednesday defeated the Elevated Railway scheme of Mr. Meigs and his associates, by a vote of 16 to 12, which should give it its quietus for the present session at least.

Quincy Point Items.

The Vulture Engine Company held special meetings Monday and Tuesday evenings and meet again next Monday evening.

Wednesday evening the "United Six" gave their second sociable and dance at the Neck school-house and notwithstanding the heavy rain storm the room was well filled by young ladies and gentlemen who had "an elegant time" until twelve o'clock.

The Quincy Point Temperance Association did not hold its usual meeting Wednesday evening on account of the storm. We understand there will be no meeting next Wednesday evening on account of the exercises to be held in the Baptist Chapel.

Wednesday evening the cantata "Under the Palms" will be given in the Baptist Chapel by the choirs of the Baptist and Christian Union Churches assisted by other local talent. Rehearsals have been frequent during the past two months and it is safe to assert that the singing will be rendered in a manner that will reflect credit upon the participants.

There was no alarm given at the Point for the fire in West Quincy on Tuesday night.

The Road Commissioners have been improving Washington street during the week. For the last three or four weeks we have had a sample of what we may be obliged to endure the coming summer in the way of dust, unless some provision is made for watering the street. The people of the Point contributed liberally last year for this purpose and probably would again this year if they received some such help from the Road Commissioners as the Selectmen of last year granted. Every year the material which the wind blows off from the road has to be replaced, and we think the Commissioners would save a great deal of that expense by paying something toward having the street watered, and thereby keep the material where it is. The comfort of the citizens along the line and other people who drive over the road should also be taken into consideration.

A telephone line from Boston to Weymouth Landing is soon to be erected; it will probably be located through the Neck district.

Rev. G. H. Hastings attended the Methodist Conference held at Lawrence this week.

Rev. Daniel Chubbuck preached in the Christian Union Church last Sunday morning and evening.

The attention of those in authority is respectfully called to the draw of the Point bridge. This relic of by-gone times should be replaced by one of more modern construction and strength. It is a wonder some accident has not happened which would make the town liable for damages; that such may occur any day, is the opinion of many who know the state of the present structure.

Rev. L. W. King of Newton will preach in the Baptist Chapel to-morrow.

West Quincy Items.

The Old Folks Concert given Thursday evening at the M. E. Church was a decided success, and was appreciated by a good sized audience. Mrs. Westlake's solo, "The Trundle bed," was splendidly done, and her singing all through the evening was perfect. The Society feels greatly obliged to their friends from the centre of the town for their kindness in singing with them, and return many thanks.

Rev. C. M. Westlake will preach at the M. E. Church this coming year. An effort is being made to have his wife remain in the choir.

Mr. Alonzo Glines wants to sell his horse, carriage, etc.

The fire on Tuesday night was an old barn belonging to the widow of the late Reuben Ricker; loss, probably, $100 or more. Fortunately, the wind being in the right direction, the house was not even scorched; had it been otherwise nothing could have saved it, as there was no water. We see the need of more reservoirs, and a good fire alarm which can summon help immediately.

We notice on the street a very pretty express wagon, owned by E. H. Doble & Co., and built by Tirrell & Sons. It beats anything seen yet.

Shipping at Quincy Point.

Arrived, April 15th, Schooner Joseph Eaton, Jr., Capt. Chadfield, to load with granite for New York.

April 18th, Schooner Emma C. Rommell, Capt. Lore, from Philadelphia, with Franklin coal for Cyrus Patch.

Sailed, April 21st, Schooner Ellen H. Baxter, Capt. Floyd, for Philadelphia, with granite from Messrs. Henry Barker & Sons.

BUTTER. The Boston Journal of Wednesday, says: "There has been a steady decline in price of butter for over a week past, and to-day's selling rates are from 12 to 15 cents lower than the highest point about two weeks ago. Receivers were offering choice lots of New York and Vermont dairy on Tuesday, at 28 cents a pound, and in a jobbing way purchases could be made at 30 cents. Fine creamery could be bought at 33 cents, and good brands at about 30 cents. As liberal receipts are expected this week, still lower prices may rule.

☞ The Presidential Count bill, known as the Edmunds measure, passed the Senate, with practical unanimity, last week. The main point in the bill is that all disputes arising from the choice of electors, shall be settled by the states, leaving to Congress the mere formality of announcing the result. Both branches of Congress must agree in order to the throwing out of the vote of a state.

BUFFALOES. The buffalo yield on the upper Missouri, Yellowstone and Milk rivers this year will be about 100,000 hides and 60,000 robes. Last season, from the same sections, 15,000 hides and 60,000 robes were taken.

☞ A hotel, costing $500,000, is to be built on Huntington avenue in Boston, opposite Hotel Huntington. It will be six stories high in front by eight in the rear and contain 800 rooms.

A SEVENTEENTH CENTURY CHAP. There is a bachelor in Ipswich, Mass., eighty-five years of age, who has worn the same hat for over sixty years. He has never used anything but peat for fires and he burns tallow dips for light.

Citizens Temperance Committee.

It is a well established and recognized fact that liquor laws, whether "license" or "prohibitory," are systematically violated by the majority of those who are engaged in the traffic. The undersigned have therefore associated themselves together, and formed an organization with the above title, for the purpose of using every honorable and legitimate means of seeing that the "No" vote, cast at the last town meeting, is thoroughly enforced.

It will be the purpose of the committee to render all possible moral and financial support to town officers in the prosecution of their duties in connection with the enforcement of the laws concerning the sale of intoxicating liquors. The committee, realizing that one great difficulty in securing convictions for illegal liquor selling, arises from the fact that the liquor drinker often perjures himself in the interest of the liquor seller, hereby gives notice that in any cases which may arise during the ensuing year, where they can obtain proof of such perjury, they will cause the offender to be prosecuted for that crime.

After May 1st, 1882, no one in Quincy will have any legal right to sell liquor to be drank on the premises. Any and all citizens, who may at any time have knowledge of such illegal selling, or if any other violation of the liquor laws, are invited to notify any member of the Executive Committee, named below:

COMMITTEE.

Chairman, Theophilus King, Jr.
Secretary, Rev. George B. Lawton.
Treasurer, H. M. Federhen.

Executive Committee, Henry Barker, Quincy Centre; Geo. H. Locke, South Quincy; Jonas Shackley, West Quincy; C. F. Parker, Wollaston; T. B. Emery, Atlantic; Walton Hall, Quincy Point.

Revs. D. M. Wilson, Samuel Kelley, Mark Trafton, Geo. B. Lawton, Edward Norton, G. H. Hastings, Geo. B. Williams.

Messrs. Theophilus King, Jr., Franklin Hardwick, Horace Eaton, Henry Chubbuck, Geo. H. Locke, Edwin W. Marsh, Henry Barker, Edward Southworth, H. H. Faxon, C. A. Follett.

Messrs. Jonas Shackley, Harry Luce, J. G. Witham, Israel Waterhouse, Walton Hall, H. M. Federhen, W. T. Barry, John D. Nutting, Westley Fuller, C. F. Parker, Geo. F. Pinkham, W. E. Simmons, D. Howard Bills, T. B. Emery.

Mrs. Charles A. Spear, Mrs. Theophilus King, Jr., Mrs. Henry Barker, Mrs. C. A. Follett, Mrs. J. G. Witham, Mrs. James F. Harlow, Mrs. George B. Lawton, Miss L. A. Pierce, Miss Jane V. Doble, Miss E. M. Fletcher.

Dorchester.

The report in the Advertiser of the number of persons that attended church services in Boston on Sunday last, has called forth considerable notice and comment. By the report we find that at two of the largest Protestant churches in Dorchester District, the First Church, on Meeting-house Hill, (Unitarian), and the Second, or Codman Church, (Orthodox), the difference was only two, 483 in one, and 485 in the other. The lady preacher, Mrs. Beeby, at Lyceum Hall, had 75 hearers; others ranged from 69 upwards.

Mr. A. T. Stearns, of Neponset, who has been absent on an extensive tour at the South and West, for the past two months, visiting the large lumber districts in that region, has recently returned.

Persons that have occasion to travel much on the Old Colony, between Quincy and Neponset, will do well to purchase a card at Neponset, giving them ten rides for 85 cents; when Alexander Holmes was president of the road the fare between these two places was 20 cents. The fare between Neponset and Wollaston is six cents, which is very reasonable; we think it should be the same between Atlantic and Quincy.

Complaint.

As I was passing on Washington street recently, I noticed one or more of the young trees, that Mr. Vining had set out on his place, had been ruthlessly mutilated. For a moment I paused, and said to myself, what hand could have done that? I could scarcely persuade myself that any such a careless hand could be about to perpetrate a deed like that. And it was shortly after, I was in my own garden, not far off, showing a friend a solitary rock maple I had set out thirteen years ago, and noticing how slow its growth had been; and then I discovered that the same destructive hand had been at work upon that tree. It had been climbed, and one of its higher limbs cut off, and it was than bleeding profusely. The one who cut off that limb, designed to do for my tree what Guiteau did, when he fired those murderous shots at Garfield. And to me it is a greater grief to find, near, any one capable of committing such an act, than any I could feel for the loss of any tree in my garden. It has been said, that when thus annoyed, and no legal remedy is open to us, we have one privilege left, and that is of complaining; and thanks to the QUINCY PATRIOT, the columns of which are open to those who suffer in this regard.

L. R. S.

QUINCY, April 18th.

MORMONISM. The vote of the House of Representatives at Washington this week, in the Utah election case seals the doom of Mormonism as a political factor in this country. The fiery speech of Mr. Cannon, the polygamous contestant, may be regarded as the last that will ever be made in Congress in defence of a custom that is abhorred by the civilized world. The importance of this action upon the institution of polygamy cannot be overestimated in connection with the law which the present Congress has passed for the suppression of the "twin relic of barbarism." So long as the Government did not declare against polygamy and the leaders of the Mormon Church were admitted to Congress and permitted to control local legislation, they could defy the moral sentiment of this country. Deprived of political power and declared a crime by Federal laws, polygamy has received a check which will, we believe, be followed by its rapid decline.

☞ Rev. Mr. Wagor, Methodist pastor at Eagle Bridge, N. Y., has refused the proceeds of a ball which was given towards reducing the church debt. He says the church condemns the dancing, and he cannot use the money on the church.

Second Congressional District.

The attempt of a few designing politicians to force Gov. Long and his friends into a quarrel, in the Second District, is a trick on the part of the friends of some aspiring senatorial candidate, so palpable that "he who runs may read." But the true friends of Gov. Long and Hon. B. W. Harris, and the voters of the Second District, are to level-headed to be caught by any such a trap. They know Gov. Long and Mr. Harris well, and are equally proud of both, and fully satisfied with the result of their labors, and conscious of the honors that lay in the path of each. Mr. Harris, as chairman of the Naval Committee, after ten years of hard labor in that direction, is filling a position and performing a work second to none in importance, in the interest of our Government; and the thought of displacing him at this time, would be the height of madness, and can certainly receive little or no support from Gov. Long's best friends. And the attempt of Boston politicians to get him assassinated in the house of his friends, should receive that rebuke from the intelligent voters of the District, which it so justly merits.

Hon. B. W. Harris, in an interview with the Washington correspondent of the Boston Journal, of the 18th inst., says: "While he does not seek to put his wishes and purposes before the public, he cannot well refuse to respond to a proper desire to know how he feels on the subject. He regrets that he should be made the subject of discussion in newspapers, through no fault of his own, and that he should be made to appear as antagonizing Gov. Long, in his aspirations of Congressional honors, when there is not the least foundation for such a statement." The newspaper articles that have appeared thus far, he thinks, does Gov. Long and himself great injustice. He recognizes the right of the Governor or any other individual to announce himself as a candidate, and has never had any complaint to make on account of their so doing, but thinks the people of the district should be consulted as to their choice of a public servant, as, in his opinion, there are many men besides the Governor and himself that are worthy of their confidence.

At the expiration of Mr. Harris's second term, he declined a renomination, and desired to return to his profession, and to the care of his private affairs, but from causes over which he had no control, and which he had no agency in bringing about, he was tendered a unanimous renomination by acclamation. Such a nomination he could not decline, nor did he think he was at liberty to refuse a service thus required. Ten years, he thinks, is a long service, and if long service is a disqualification for re-election, then he is of the opinion that he is disqualified. He modestly refuses to speak of the arduous labors he has performed, but says he has endeavored to discharge his duties with honesty and fidelity and to the extent of his capacity.

Mr. Harris wishes it distinctly understood that he has no antagonisms with Gov. Long or any of his friends, and should the people of the Second District desire a change in their representative, and choose to nominate Gov. Long, or any other man, as his successor, he will have the hearty support of Mr. Harris and all his friends; but until after the bounds of the new districts have been settled, and he knows who and what his constituency are, Mr. Harris does not propose to decline a nomination or announce his candidacy.

A MONSTER. A whale was captured off Provincetown on Tuesday last, that measured sixty-two feet, and is estimated to weigh twenty-seven tons. His jaws have a spread of twenty-five feet. He has been towed to Boston where he is being embalmed. He belongs to the great northern rorqual species, which is said to be the largest of the whale tribe.

District Court, Quincy.

The following criminal cases have been before the Court the present week:

William Paterson, of Hanover, for an assault on Hosea T. Baker. The evidence was deemed sufficient to order him to give bonds for his appearance before the Grand Jury.

John S. Neagle, of Quincy, was arrested in Charlestown by Officer Furnald for larceny of money from his father's residence in Quincy. He was required to give bonds in $300 to appear before the Grand Jury in September. Being unable to give bonds he was carried to Dedham.

Julia Welch, of Weymouth, an old offender, was brought into Court for keeping a liquor nuisance. She was found guilty and fined $50 and costs. She appealed and a wholesale liquor dealer in Boston went bond for her.

Edward Fennell, of Weymouth, for keeping a liquor nuisance. Discharged.

QUICK WORK. The Ford boys who killed Jesse James were indicted, plead guilty, were sentenced to be hung and were pardoned, all in a few hours, in Missouri. No other result of the trial was anticipated. It remains for the men to get their pay and leave the State before the avengers can reach them. The man killed was treated like a wild beast, and really he deserved no better treatment than he received, but the case affords a precedent that may cause trouble.

Jesse James had been an outlaw for many years. Among his many crimes were the robbery of railroad trains, and of banks, accompanied by murders. He had a large number of sympathizers and accomplices, and many officers had been killed in futile attempts to arrest him.—Boston Traveller.

☞ A fruit grower at Orlando, Fla., employed a negro boy to eat 1000 oranges and save the seed. The boy ate ninety-three the first day, and then gave up the job in disgust.

A Spirited Meeting.

The Quincy Branch of the Irish National Land League had a sprited meeting in their hall on Water street, on Sunday evening of this week. Mr. John H. Dee, Vice President of the Branch, presided. After the transaction of some routine business, the chairman introduced Thomas F. Doherty, Esq., President of the Massachusetts Central Delegates Branch, who delivered an eloquent address on the land question. He spoke on the benefit of organization, and stated what benefit had been derived from the labors of the league. He said, we have met as Irishmen, but we are also American citizens, and having assumed all the duties, we are entitled to all the privileges of citizens, and the protection of our flag whenever we travel abroad. He spoke of our citizens imprisoned in Ireland, and censured Minister Lowell for his neglience in securing their trial or release. Mr. Doherty was warmly applauded during his address.

When Mr. Doherty had resumed his seat, Mr. Dee introduced John Burke, Esq., a member of the legislature from Boston. Mr. Burke gave an elaborate history of Irish agitation, commencing with that dark period of Ireland's history, the 18th century. He alluded to the penal laws, and said that they failed to destroy the Milesian race or the Christian faith of the Irish people. He spoke of the early agitation of Wise, Lucas, Molineaux and Swift, and sketched the history of the Irish volunteers; the course of the Irish Parliament from 1782 until the Union; calling attention to the wonderful prosperity of Ireland; its increase in population, commerce, and manufacture, up to 1800. He spoke of the agitation of O'Connell, the formation of the Catholic Association, the concession of Catholic emancipation, and the struggle for the repeal of the Union. The present agitation for land reform is only a continuation of the long struggle for freedom, which the Irish people maintained against terrible odds for centuries, and concluded by an eloquent appeal to his hearers to stand firm in the support of Parnell and his supporters in Ireland.

After some further remarks from Mr. William O'Conner, the meeting adjourned.

THE MONEY ORDER SYSTEM. The money order system of the United States postal service, which was established seventeen years ago as the safest, surest and promptest method of transmitting money, appears to have its weak points. The headquarters of the system is the New York post-office, where nearly $2,000,000, the accumulation of seventeen years, is now awaiting the call of its rightful owners. This accumulation has been gathered from the various post-offices of the country, whence all such unclaimed money is sent to New York at stated intervals, and is mainly the result of the missending of money orders or of their loss by the payer or payee. Duplicates may be obtained in case of loss, of the postmasters, but the trouble is there is no method in the system whereby a sender may know that the order has been received, or the one who should receive it may know that it has been sent.

PARKS. The town of Watertown has just voted to have a public library and a park.

The work of adornment of the new park at South Abington is soon to be commenced. Plats are to be laid out and trees and shubbery set in them. The town intends to appropriate each year a sum for improvements, so that when the avenues are laid out the park will be a very inviting spot.

WEST MEDWAY. The Third Annual Meeting of the Norfolk County Sunday School Association, will be held in the Congregational Church, West Medway, on Tuesday next, April 25. Trains leave Boston for West Medway, from the Albany Depot, at 8 A. M., and 12.15 P. M.; Return at 1.02 and 3.58 P. M.

☞ The long Black Cannon, in the Gunnison River, in Colorado, through which the Denver & Rio Grande Railroad is to pass, is so narrow and the walls so high that the stars can be seen from its depths in the brightest day. In some places the walls are a mile in height and scarcely more than forty or fifty feet apart.

☞ At Selma, Ala., the 31st of last March, two men were hanged for the murder of a planter. They both stoutly protested their entire innocence, and last week two negroes confessed themselves to be the murderers. They were taken from jail by forty masked men, and hung to the limbs of trees.

☞ The House of Representatives at Washington passed another anti-Chinese bill on Monday, by the very large vote of 201 yeas to 27 nays. The bill varies from the one vetoed by the President mainly in the substitution of ten years' prohibition for twenty years.

☞ A proclamation has been issued by Gov. Foster, of Ohio, setting apart April 27th as a day for the planting of forest trees in Ohio, by the roadsides, in groves and about homes. The governor recommends the formation of forestry societies.

☞ The bill restoring the franking privilege, which passed the Senate under the active leadership of Senator Edmunds, by a large vote, received a quietus in the House, where it was able to rally barely a baker's dozen of supporters.

☞ A bill has been introduced into the New York legislature which provides for a public park in the Adirondack region, to consist of 600,000 acres.

Washington Letter.

Contested Seats in the House. Commisioner Price and the Indian. Emancipation Day at the Capital.

WASHINGTON, April 18, 1882.

There is prospect of a lively resurrection in Congress of the supposed extinct southern question during the present month. Four or five Democrats hold contested seats. The Republican claimants are on the ground urging their claims to these seats, and legislative halls will soon ring with that fiery sectional oratory that has made so large a part of the congressional record during the last fifteen years. As soon as the Republican majority is reinforced by ousting four or five Democrats it is expected that the tariff commission bill will be passed.

The new Chinese bill, as reported from the Committee on Education and Labor, will probably pass the House today, under a suspension of the rules. If it receives favorable consideration in the Senate and goes to the President, the latter is very likely to pick a flaw in it. The Farley amendment to the old bill, forbidding Chinese naturalization, and the Grover amendment, which included both skilled and unskilled laborers in its provisions, are incorporated in the new bill, and are not supposed to be acceptable to President Arthur.

There is a widely prevalent impression that the new Secretary of the Interior, who takes charge of his portfolio to-day, will introduce a new policy in relation to the Indians; but it should be known that he cannot adopt an arbitrary, out and out, policy of his own. There are bills and treaties limiting his powers, which are ministerial or executive. But ministerial powers may be so exercised as to give very decided individuality to their administration, and it may be expected that Secretary Teller will be influenced by extreme Western ideas in all the dealings of his department with the Red Man.

About two weeks ago Bishop Andrews penned a letter to the Methodist clergy, asking each one of them to hold special services last night, in reference to the Indian question, in furtherance of the views of the society organization for "Indian Treaty Keeping and Protection." In accordance with this request, Hon. Hiram Price, Commissioner of Indian affairs, delivered, at the Wesley Chapel last evening, an address on "What the Government had done for the Indians, and what the citizens should do." "A large majority of the American people," said Mr. Price, "were totally ignorant of everything connected with the Indian question. They are just beginning to understand it. It was not a part of God's plan to create an independent man. What hurt the Indian, therefore, hurt the whites. While the Government has done its full duty to the Indians, it yet has done a great deal which should be known." Mr. Price thereupon gave a number of statistics, in which the Methodists made a poor showing. As a Methodist he was ashamed of this, and urged his hearers to do better. He advocated the giving up of the foreign missions until the Indians were civilized and christianized. Ernest efforts, he believed, would bring about such results in five years. The Indians were growing better, making rapid progress morally and materially. The Government cut off their rations of whisky last year, intending never to supply them again with it, and had reduced their supply of tobacco, both experiments meeting with marked success.

This is Emancipation Day — the day that the colored population of Washington celebrate. The streets are full of colored military companies, headed by colored brass-bands, marshaled by colored men on horseback, followed by colored women in carriages, and by myriads of colored youth and maidens on the sidewalks. Maryland and Virginia, Baltimore and Alexandria, have helped to swell the dusky tide on this gala day. No city of the "Dark Continent" can show as large a colored population as the Capital, to-day, and certainly no city can show so great a variety of facial characteristic art tints produced by generations of practical miscegenation. ADAMS.

☞ Wyoming with 12 years of successful experience of woman suffrage is a rebuke to Massachusetts. The same morning, too, that brought the intelligence of the defeat of the municipal suffrage bill at Boston, brought also the news that an amendment striking the word "male" out of the state constitution had passed both branches of the Iowa Legislature, and after passing another Legislature, will be submitted to the people.—Springfield Republican.

DURGIN'S

BEEF, IRON AND WINE.

—IS MADE OF—

Extract of Beef,

Citrate of Iron and

the Best Sherry Wine.

In this preparation are combined the stimulant properties of Wine, and the nutriment of Beef, with the tonic powers of Iron; the effect of which on the blood is so justly valued. The peculiar feature of this combination is that it

Combines Nutriment with Stimulus.

In a majority of cases, along with failure of strength, and indeed as one cause of that failure, there is an inability to digest nourishing food. Hence it is very desirable to furnish nourishment in a form acceptable to the stomach, and, at the same time, to excite this organ to do its duty. On the other hand, wine stimulus, although needed, is ill borne if given by itself, producing headache, excitement and other symptoms, which may be avoided by the addition of a nutritious substance, such as Extract of Beef.

Iron also can be taken in this way by the most delicate or sensitive woman or child, to whom it may be inadmissable as usually given. Prompt results will follow its use in cases of sudden exhaustion, arising either from acute or chronic diseases, and it will prove a Valuable Restorative for all convalescents.

As a nutrative tonic it would be indicated in impaired nutrition, impoverishment of the blood, and in all the forms of General Debility. Each tablespoonful contains one ounce of the Extract of Beef, with two grains of Citrate of Iron dissolved in Sherry Wine.

PERUVIAN AN IRON TONIC SYRUP

Cures Dyspepsia, Nervous Affections, General Debility, Fever and Ague, Paralysis, Chronic Diarrhœa, Boils, Dropsy, Humors, Female Complaints, Liver Complaint, Remittent Fever, and all diseases originating in a bad State of the Blood, or accompanied by Debility or a low State of the System.

PERRY DAVIS' VEGETABLE PAIN KILLER

A Never-Failing Cure for Burns, Scalds, Bruises, Cuts, Sores, etc.

After forty years of trial, PERRY DAVIS' PAIN KILLER stands unrivaled. It is safe! It acts immediately! It never fails!

Editor of the St. John (N. B.) News, says: [illegible]

From the Cincinnati Dispatch: [illegible]

From I. E. Foster, U. S. Consul at Crefeld, Rhenish Prussia: [illegible]

W. W. Sharper, Valdosta, Ga., says: It is a panacea for all bruises and burns.

From D. W. Adams, Saco, Me.: It gave me immediate relief.

S. Lewis says: In forty years' use it never has failed me.

W. W. Lum, Nicholville, N. Y., says: I use your PAIN KILLER frequently. It relieves pain and soreness, and heals wounds like magic.

J. W. Dee says: For scalds and burns it has no equal.

PERRY DAVIS' PAIN KILLER is not a new untried remedy. For forty years it has been in constant use; and those who have used it the longest are its best friends. Its success is entirely because of its merit. Every family should have a bottle ready for use. Much pain and heavy doctors' bills may often be saved by prompt application of the PAIN KILLER. Unlike most medicines, it is perfectly safe even in the hands of a child. Try it once thoroughly, and it will prove its value. Your druggist has it at 25c., 50c., and $1.00 per bottle.

Hen Tracks.

I sometimes watch a flock of hens,
Observe their ways, so much like men's,
Each hen ready her next to pick,
Each man ready his friends to "stick,"
Each with unblushing grab and greed,
How quick to come when there's a feed.
Here comes the rooster with lofty tread,
Which of them can make such a spread,
See! he lifts his head and crows,
How good he feels! how much he knows!
The hens look on with jealous eye
To speak with him upon the sly,
Or hang their heads with modest mien,
To do so they would not be seen,
Here, life shows a general law;
Let all beware of tooth and claw.
Success may only be gained in life,
By the most able in battle and strife.
But better far a way to man is known,
A higher life in truth and virtue shown;
And he who will, that higher life may win,
In actions just, show truth and right within;
In motives pure, in judgment candid, fair,
These to the world a better life declare.
Beyond hope we the higher life to gain,
But why not here this happiness attain?
So if beyond we reach a better sphere,
How much better ready by practice here?
I love at times of future men to dream,
To whom our times shall false and sordid seem
In whom no thought of wrong may find a place,
But fraud and crime have vanished from the race.
Helpers of each other in noble things,
Such lives to all, the deepest pleasure brings.

Farm and Garden.

Currant and Gooseberry Bushes.

Currant and gooseberry bushes should now receive attention. First, by trimming off all dead branches, and such of the live ones as are necessary to bring the bush into proper shape; then the land should receive a liberal dressing of manure and a liberal dressing of ground bone, say six pounds to the square rod.

Whatever implement is used to loosen up the soil and cover the fertilizers should not penetrate the soil very deep, as the roots of both the currant and gooseberry bush naturally grow very near the surface, and those that run the nearest to the surface are the most important feeding roots. It is important to stir the soil early in the season, and great care should be taken to clean out every tuft of grass, or other plants that have survived the winter, as success in growing these fruits is made much more sure by clean culture.

If the land is light and is inclined to be dry, a mulching of coarse hay, or any perishable vegetation that can be obtained at a low price can be used at a profit; for even a light mulching has a wonderful effect on the growth of both the currant and gooseberry, and at the same time very much lessens the labor of cultivation, and keeps the fruit clean, also makes it more comfortable for those who pick the fruit.

If new plants are to be set, an effort should be made to set them as early as possible. Many make a mistake by setting both currant and gooseberry bushes in May; it is true, most of them will live set late in the season, but if set in April, the result is much more satisfactory.—Massachusetts Ploughman.

GOOD CROPS. Mr. Geo. Walker, a successful cultivator of small fruits in Weston, Mass., tells how he managed to get good crops last year:—

"I used Bradley's Phosphate last year on my strawberry bed, putting it on early in the spring, and just before a rain. As a result, I had the best strawberries that I ever raised, and the plants were free from blast. I also used fifty pounds on one row of blackberries, for a trial: from that row I picked $5.88 worth of berries more than I did on either row by the side of it. The rows were of the same length and the soil the same; this paid for the Phosphate more than five times over. I also raised good potatoes on Bradley's Phosphate without any other manure. I find it the cheapest fertilizer I can buy, being much cheaper than stable manure."

Anecdotes.

"Well, wife you can't say I ever contracted bad habits."

"No, sir; you generally expanded them."

"O, Pat!"

"What, sor?"

"Did yez iver see a winter loike this?"

"Yis, sor."

"Whin?"

"Last summer, sor."

Dog seller—"That 'ere hanimal's the real stock, mum, and dog-cheap at $30."

Young widow—"It's a sweet, pretty darling, black and white; but in my present state of bereavement, you must procure me one entirely black. This will do very well in about six months, for half-mourning."

Not long ago an Irishman applied to an overseer in a Tyne shipyard to be put on a job. He was informed that his request could not be complied with; but as Pat continued to gaze at an anchor which was lying in the vicinity the foreman repeated his reply that there was no work for him and advised him to go away.

"Divil a bit will I stir, sor, till I see the man that's going to use that pick.

"Mamma, what must I say when I feel like being naughty?" said a little girl whose conscience had smitten her for some misdemeanor.

"Why, my child, you must say, 'Get thee behind me, Satan,' and you will not be tempted," replied the mother.

The little youngster paused a moment, and then said: "I did say that, and do you know, mamma, the old debil said: 'Ha! ha! I am behind you, and don't you forget it!'"

Pat—"Och, Bridget, did ye niver hear of my great spache afore the Hibernian Society?"

Bridget—"No, Pat, how should I, for sure I was not on the ground."

Pat—"Well, Bridget, you see I was called upon by the Hibernian Society for a spache; and, be jabers, I rose with the enthusiastic cheers of thousands; with me heart overflowing with gratitude, and me eyes filled with tears, and divil a word did I spake."

Appetite, flesh, color, strength and vigor—if you covet these, take Ayer's Sarsaparilla, which will confer them upon you in rapid succession.

Temperance.

[Furnished for publication by the W. C. T. Union.]

Crimes Caused by Alcohol.

At the courts, where men make it their business to find out the truth about the crimes which have been committed, you will be sure to find that liquor had something to do with most of them. Ask the judges, whose duty it is to listen to and decide such cases, and they will tell you that "Intemperance is the chief source of nearly all crimes." Go into the prisons and ask the prisoners one by one; you will find them nearly all drinkers. They will tell you, "I could never have done that if I had not been drinking; it was the drink that did it." Yet the drink would have done no harm if the man had not swallowed it; he was the one to blame.

Where they have no alcoholic liquors they have no crimes. Vineland, N. J., is a place of 10,000 inhabitants, it has no grog-shops, and only one policeman, with very little for him to do. Greeley, Col., is a place of 3,000 inhabitants, without drink; it has no policeman and no need of any. Batavia, Ill., is a place of 3,000 inhabitants, without a drunkard, without a pauper, and without a criminal.

In all such places the people are healthy, happy and industrious; none suffer from poverty, because they do not drink up their earnings; they are not tempted to steal, like those whom drink makes too lazy to work for what they want. All this country might be as happy and as prosperous as these places, if we should all learn to hate the drink and to banish it.

ALCOHOL WASTES PROPERTY.

Alcoholic drinks cause great waste of property. As we have seen, houses and barns are burned, ships and railway trains are wrecked, and injured and insane people and criminals must be cared for. All this uses up a large amount of property, and brings toil and poverty to many people. Yet, previous to all this, comes the cost of the drink itself. To make these drinks requires millions of bushels of grain, grapes and apples, with other material; the labor of many men, and the use of large and expensive buildings. Good authorities tell us that liquor to the amount of six hundred millions of dollars or more, is drank in this country every year. It is supposed that it costs to make and to sell it, at least, half that amount, or three hundred millions of dollars. All that is clear loss, because the liquor is worth nothing after it is made. Some say that it is not lost, because making it employes men and supports their families. But they would get paid for their work just the same if they raised grain to feed people, and the grain would be worth something. Besides this, men can earn more at making the same value of almost any other goods than in making liquor.

Household Receipts.

Milk, sour or sweet, is good to cleanse black walnut furniture. Rub in well, with an old soft flannel.

For ear-ache in children, take a bit of cotton, put upon it a pinch of black pepper, dip in sweet oil, and insert in the ear. Put a flannel bandage over the head to keep it warm.

The taste of ginger cookies can be improved by using half a cup of cold coffee instead of water. There is always at least so much left after breakfast; or, if not, put a little water in the pot and let it boil for a minute or two, and strength enough will be given to flavor the cookies.

Tin, if never put into greasy dish-water, but always washed in clean suds made of good soft soap, will remain bright a good long time; in fact, will keep very tolerable till it is about worn out. Whenever I scour tea-kettles, tea-pots, dippers, or anything which is tin, I prefer coal-ashes for brightening to anything else I have tried. The ashes must first be put through a fine sieve, so that bits of coal and all other hard substances may be removed. After scouring well with the ashes, wash in clean, hot soap-suds, wipe with a soft, damp cloth, and your tin will look nearly as well as new, and will not grow dull so quickly as when scoured with other things. Coal-ashes are nice also for scouring knives and forks of steel, if washed and wiped dry immediately after rubbing, otherwise it will incline them to rust.

Fashion Notes.

Tulips are worn with street costumes.

Voile is the term this season for nun's veiling.

Handsome black silk guipure lace is again in vogue.

India mull, with rosebuds, is used for trimming velvet bodices.

Lace is the most fashionable of all trimmings for evening dresses.

New parasols and umbrellas have handles of the wood of the natural stick, knobbed, crutched, and hooked.

Some of the new American prints imitate the new striped Scotch ginghams so well as to be undistinguishable from them.

Dressing-gowns and bath-robes, made of fine, soft blankets, are in the list of comforts and convenience for the bedroom. The bordering stripe serves for trimming, and they are girdled at the waist with a heavy tasseled cord.

The newest cashmeres imported are a selection of new colors taken from ancient Gobelin tapestries. Dull terra cotta shades, olive, sage greens, and sage brown and greenish grays are among the Gobelin colors, but they are different from any colors we now have. They are faded looking shades, but still retain all their beauty though the intensity of the color is gone. It is expected that fine cashmere will be one of the most elegant fabrics in wool during the coming season and that it will be more worn, especially in æsthetic colors, than for years.

☞ There is something radically wrong about our professions when a pious minister only gets forty cents for joining a couple, and a wicked lawyer gets $40 for untying the same.

☞ "Will you tell me," asked an old gentlemen of a lady, "what Mrs. ——'s maiden name was?"

"Why, her maiden aim was to get married, of course," exclaimed the lady.

☞ "There is nothing like settling down," said a retired merchant confidentially to his neighbor. "When I gave up business I settled down and found I had a comfortable fortune. If I had settled up I should not have had a cent."

☞ An Irish servant girl, a year over, was given maccaroni by her mistress to prepare for the table. Noticing her surprise, the lady said, "Didn't you cook maccaroni at your last place?" "Cook it! We used them things to light the gas with."

☞ A truly giant water-lily was found in Lake Nuna in Peru. The leaf had a circumference of nearly 25 feet and weighed between 13 and 14 pounds. A flower was 4 feet 2 inches round and weighed 3 1-2 pounds; its outer petals were 9 inches long.

☞ The Christian Advocate mentioning the case of an Irish girl who said she joined the Methodist Church "on suspicion" for six months, says: "We don't know about the propriety of taking people into church on suspicion, but we think a considerable number might be let out on that ground."

☞ Little Edith was sent to the drug store, the other day, for some goldthread, baby being sick with the canker. Returning, Edith said the apothecary's wife had recommended sage tea. "Oh, no," said her mother, "sage tea is only good to cure children of worms." "Well, mamma," replied Edith, "perhaps Mrs. Blank thought baby had canker worms."

☞ A lecturer asked, on a rainy day, why one of the audience had paid the admission fee, and come in and slept all the while. "I will tell you," said the old man, with a shrewd wink of his eye. "I was out in the rain, and as I had no umbrella to keep me from getting wet, and tickets are only twenty-five cents, and umbrellas are one dollar, I saved seventy-five cents by coming in."

☞ The German Imperial Crown is a foot high, of 21-karat gold, and heavily set with pearls. The sceptre is of silver gilt and two feet long. The globe carried in the hand is of the finest gold, 37-8 inches in diameter and encircled by two rings, one perpendicular and half covered with jewels, and the other horizontal and entirely crusted with gems. On top is a cross which fairly blazes with precious stones. The insignia have long been kept in the Hofbourg at Vienna, will be brought forth for Kaiser Wilhelm's coronation.

Walnut Leaf Hair Restorer.

It is entirely different from all others. It is as clear as water, and, as its name indicates, is a perfect Vegetable Hair Restorer. It will immediately free the head from all dandruff, restore grey hair to its natural color, and produce a new growth where it has fallen off. It does not in any manner affect the health, which Sulphur, Sugar of Lead, and Nitrate of Silver preparations have done. It will change light or faded hair in a few days to a beautiful glossy brown. Ask your druggist for it. Each bottle is warranted. Chas. N. Crittenton, New York, and Geo. C. Goodwin & Co., Boston, wholesale agts. S 24po

Well-Merited Success.

A gentleman once asked a distinguished dispensing druggist to explain the secret of the almost universal demand for Dr. Richmond's Samaritan Nervine. He said that it was in fact a genuine medicine—such a compound as every good physician would prescribe for the disease which it was advertised to cure. Of course it cost less than any druggist would charge for the same article supplied on a physician's prescription, and besides, there was a saving of the doctor's fee in addition. Moreover, by buying the drugs in such enormous quantities, and having a perfect apparatus for compounding the mixture, he was not only enabled to get better articles in the first place, but also to present the medicine in better form and at less price than the same preparation could be possibly obtained from any other source. Dr. Richmond has devoted all his energies to the alleviation of human suffering. With this end in view, and with his whole heart in his great labor for the benefit of the afflicted, he has achieved marked and merited success. There can be no real success without true merit. That his success is real is evidenced by the fact that his reputation as a man and physician does not deteriorate, and the fact that there is a steadily increasing demand for his Samaritan Nervine proves that it is no nostrum, but a reliable remedy. He has repeatedly informed the public that it is no patent medicine, and no patent has ever been asked for or obtained. Neither does he advertise it as a cure-all. There are hundreds of diseases that he acknowledges it will not cure. It may be urged that some of these diseases are so widely different that it seems absurd to prescribe the same remedy. They may differ in symptoms, yet in character be precisely similar; and then we must take into consideration the fact that remedies may possess various properties. Thus, some medicines are both tonic and alterative; others may be tonic and laxative, the properties differing according to the quantity administered and the time and circumstances which demand its employment.

In the manufacture of any pharmaceutical preparation the purity and strength of the materials used, and the requisite machinery to be employed, are among the chief essentials. The first is insured by purchasing the ingredients in large quantities, whereby the exercise of greater care in selecting the materials can be afforded; and the second can only be accomplished where the business is sufficiently extensive to warrant a large outlay of capital in procuring chemical apparatus. These facts apply with especial force to the manufacture of our medicines, their quality having been vastly improved since demand has become so great as to require their manufacture in very large quantities.

These ideas are not mere speculative remarks to mislead the reader, or to imbue him with false views of the superiority of our medicines. While inspecting Dr. Richmond's establishment you would be surprised to see the admirable facilities, both chemical and mechanical, which he employs in the prosecution of his business. Everything is arranged in the most perfectly systematic order, and while to the general observer there appears to be no room for improvement, yet new apparatus and mechanical appliances are constantly being procured for the establishment.

WHEAT BITTERS

THE Great LIQUID FOOD FOR BLOOD, BRAIN AND NERVES.

IT IS A SUPERIOR NUTRITIVE MEDICINE, RICH IN PHOSPHATES AND NOT A CHEAP, ALCOHOLIC DRINK. ☞ Highly recommended by Chemists and Physicians as A POSITIVE TONIC. ALWAYS ACCEPTABLE AND RELIABLE, as it does not stimulate the brain or irritate the system and leave deleterious effects. On the contrary, it furnishes just that which is necessary to the brain, strengthens and quiets the nerves, purifies the heart's blood, and thereby makes only the best flesh, bone and muscle. ☞ It works wonders, curing NERVOUS and GENERAL DEBILITY, MALARIA, DYSPEPSIA, INSOMNIA. Produces a healthy action of the Liver and Kidneys, fortifying the system against the miasmatic influences, and will be found invaluable in all pulmonary and bronchial difficulties. DELICATE FEMALES, NURSING MOTHERS and WEAKLY CHILDREN can find no remedy equal to this healthful blood and nerve food tonic. ☞ For sale by all Druggists. $1.00 per bottle. Prepared only by WHEAT BITTERS CO., Office 19 Park Place, New York City.

SAMARITAN

NERVINE

SAMARITAN NERVINE

Cures Epileptic Fits, Spasms, Convulsions, St. Vitus Dance, Vertigo, Hysterics, Insanity, Apoplexy, Paralysis, Rheumatism, Neuralgia and all Nervous Diseases. This infallible remedy will positively eradicate every species of Nervous Derangement, and drive them away from whence they came, never to return again. It utterly destroys the germs of disease, by neutralizing the hereditary taint or poison in the system, and thoroughly eradicates the disease, and utterly destroys the cause.

SAMARITAN NERVINE

Cures Female Weakness, General Debility, Leucorrhœa or Whites, Painful Menstruation, Ulceration of the Uterus, Internal Heat, Gravel Inflammation of the Bladder, Irritability of the Bladder. For Wakefulness at night there is no better remedy. During the change of life no female should be without it. It quiets the Nervous system and gives rest, comfort and nature's sweet sleep.

SAMARITAN NERVINE

Cures Alcoholism, Drunkenness and the habit of Opium Eating. These degrading habits are by far the worst evils that have ever befallen suffering humanity. Thousands die annually from these noxious drugs. The drunkard drinks liquor not because he likes it, but for the pleasure of drinking and treating his friends, little thinking that he is on his road to ruin. Like the Opium Eater, he first uses the drug in small quantities as a harmless antidote. The soothing influence of the drug takes strong hold upon its victim, leading him on to his own destruction. The habits of Opium Eating and Liquor Drinking are precisely what eating is to alimentiveness, as over eating first inflames the stomach, which redoubles its cravings until it paralyzes both the stomach and appetite. So every drink of liquor or dose of opium, instead of satisfying, only adds to its fierce fires until it consumes the vital forces and then itself. Like the gluttonous tape-worm, it cries, "Give, give, give!" but never enough until its own rapacity devours itself. Samaritan Nervine gives instant relief in all such cases. It produces sleep, quiets the nerves, builds up the nervous system, and restores body and mind to a healthy condition.

SAMARITAN NERVINE

Cures Nervous Dyspepsia, Palpitation of the Heart, Asthma, Bronchitis, Scrofula, Syphilis, diseases of the Kidneys, and all diseases of the urinary organs. Nervous debility, caused by the indiscretions of youth, permanently cured by this invaluable remedy. To you, young, middle-aged and old men, who are covering your sufferings as with a mantle, by silence, look up, you can be saved by timely efforts, and make ornaments to society, and jewels in the crown of your Maker, if you will. Do not keep this a secret longer, until it saps your vitals, and destroys both body and soul. If you are thus afflicted, take DR. RICHMOND'S Samaritan Nervine. It will restore your shattered nerves, arrest premature decay, impart tone and energy to the whole system.

SAMARITAN NERVINE

HALL'S VEGETABLE SICILIAN HAIR RENEWER is a scientific combination of some of the most powerful restorative agents in the vegetable kingdom. It restores gray hair to its original color. It makes the scalp white and clean. It cures dandruff and humors, and falling-out of the hair. It furnishes the nutritive principle by which the hair is nourished and supported. It makes the hair moist, soft and glossy, and is unsurpassed as a hair dressing. It is the most economical preparation ever offered to the public, as its effects remain a long time, making only an occasional application necessary. It is recommended and used by eminent medical men, and officially endorsed by the State Assayer of Massachusetts. The popularity of Hall's Hair Renewer has increased with the test of many years, both in this country and in foreign lands, and it is now known and used in all the civilized countries of the world.

Poetry.

For the Patriot.

Springtime.

The brooks are unfettered, the waters are free,
They sparkle in beauty, and dance in their glee;
I've heard their glad music, and thrilled with delight,
At the bright, rippling waters that greeted my sight;
Sweet token of springtime, they say as they go,
The winter has gone, and departed the snow.

And so with a chime, and a musical rhyme,
We sing the long summer through,
And when it is gone, with a laugh and a song,
We will bid this bright world adieu;
And be laid in our beds and cover our heads,
With a soft fleecy blanket of snow.

And so may our lives, if we try day by day,
Be like bright dancing sunbeams to gladden the way,
A life that is fragrant with kind loving deeds,
A life ever trying to sow the good seeds;
To lighten some burden that is heavy to bear,
The reward will be given in "the home over there."

And so with a chime, and a musical rhyme,
To the right will ever prove true;
And when life is done, with a prayer and a song,
We will bid this bright world adieu;
And be laid in our beds and cover our heads,
With a soft fleecy blanket of snow.

A DINNER CARD.

"Madame est servie."

As the low voice of the well-trained servant fell on her ear, Mrs. Atherton Huntley slightly turned her head and gave one swift glance toward her husband.

Mr. Huntley, whom long years of practice had rendered a perfect host, comprehended the almost imperceptible signal, offered his arm to Mrs. Ephinstone, with whom he was talking, and moved toward the door. The company followed in a softly-rustling procession, Mrs. Huntley bringing up the rear on the arm of Aleck Dent, her husband's junior partner, freshly returned from China, and the guest of the evening.

The faintly-tinted and heavily embroidered cloth was overlaid here and there with lengths of linen, transparently fine and edged with priceless old lace. A multitude of tapers, rose-red or green, each with its little lace-trimmed shade, cast their pale glows on the low bank of flowers which ran the table's length, on the alternate gleam and iridescence of many-hued glasses, and the jeweled gleam of Salviati decanter and salt-cellars. Beside each lady's plate stood an arrangement of choice roses in the form of a horse-shoe: for every gentleman was a boutonniere of lilies; and upon the napkins lay exquisite dinner-cards of white silk, hand-painted and scented with violets.

Such dinner-tables are too common in the luxurious life of to-day, to attract special attention from those to whom they are customary spectacles. But Aleck Dent had gone to China before the tide of modern luxury had risen to half-flood, and was too lately returned to have grown wonted to its exhibition. He admired, and spoke his admiration—admired the arrangements of the flowers, the beautiful glass, the perfect adaptation of detail to effect; and Mrs. Huntley listened to his eulogiums with pleasure. It was an old story to her, but women do not easily weary of hearing their household goods extolled.

"What a land of luxury this has grown to be," he went on. "What pains are lavished on the merest trifles! This card, even"—picking up the one beside his plate—"why, it is a little work of art, really charming."

"So it is," admitted Mrs. Huntley. "Those people at the Decorative Art society do have the loveliest things. A great many of their designs are made by real artists, you know."

"But I don't know. There was no Decorative Art Society when I went away," replied Aleck, still studying the silken painting intensely. As he looked, a sudden thought seemed to come to him. His eyes gave out a swift sparkle, then set as though seeing a visitor. For a brief moment he was oblivious of the very existence of his handsome hostess. This was the picture that Aleck Dent's mind was looking at: A room in a stately city house; a girl seated in a bay-window shaded with amber curtains, painting flowers at a little table; himself, a raw, sensitive boy, seated near her, his hat on his knees—watching the sheen cast by the amber light on her satin-smooth hair, watching the long lashes which shaded the eyes, the slender fingers which played rather nervously with the paint brush—struggling with words which he had resolved not to speak, wretched at the enforced silence, at the sense of coming separation. It was a picture which had frequently risen before his mind during the ten years of his absence; but what had revived it now? He studied the dinner-card to find out.

Cyclamen! Yes, it was a group of cyclamen that Evelyn Morris was painting that last morning. He remembered it perfectly now. There was something in the graceful little picture that recalled her style—the choiceness and charm which seemed inseparable from all she touched or did. And just at that moment two tiny letters caught his eye, traced in a shadow of a leaf—"E. M." Could that stand for E? Impossible! And yet—

Ten years had taught the raw boy worldly wisdom. His pause of retrospect took him much less time than I have occupied in the telling, and he recovered himself in time to betray nothing to his bright-eyed hostess. Soup and chablis had been followed by fish and entrees, before, with skilful inadvertence, he returned to the subject of the dinner-card.

"Who creates these dainty things do you suppose," he queried.

"All sorts of people, no doubt. They don't tell unless you ask, and perhaps not then; but I never thought to ask. I presume a great many of the things are the work of poor ladies who are glad to earn a little something under the rose."

"And are all these on the table by the same hand?"

"Oh, yes; they come in regular sets, ten or a dozen, or a dozen and a half in each. These silk ones are awfully dear—$18 the dozen—but then they are the prettiest I ever saw. Therese, please show your card to Mr. Dent. He has been so long in China that he isn't used to such vanities as the rest of us are."

"Don't you use dinner-cards in China," asked Therese, otherwise Mrs. Denham, a handsome, sleepy blonde, with a fringe of oddly colored hair falling above her eyes. She out did her commission, for she borrowed her neighbors' cards left and right, and placed half-a-dozen of the pretty things within Aleck's reach while she spoke.

"I suppose we must have something of the sort, but not like these, or surely I should have noticed them," he replied, as he studied the cards. The subjects were various—a spray of wild azalea; a woodbine tangle with an elf balanced therein as in a swing; a lily with a sleeping fay in its cup; a curve of jasmine, framing a reach of pale sea and one tiny sail. Each and all bore the impress of the same delicate taste, and in every one—in the darkest leaf of the lily, beneath the shadow of the woodbine swing, and the crest of the breaking wave — appeared the same faintly-traced E. M. Aleck Dent studied them with an interest which made his neighbors smile; then recollecting himself, he pushed them aside, and the conversation shifted to other matters.

It was not till the ices had come and gone, that he ventured on the question which, through all the progress of the dinner, had been uppermost in his mind.

"By the way what has become of the Edward Morrises? Miss Morris married long ago, I suppose?"

"The Edward Morrises. Let me think. It is so long a time since I heard anything about them."

"Are they not in the city, then?"

"Oh, no! Didn't you know Mr. Morris lost all his money, and they went away? Where did they go? I heard at the time, but it is so long since."

"Mr. Morris! Why, they called him a millionaire. How could he lose all his money?"

"Oh! It was a horrid business of the—some railroad. I never can recollect such things. Atherton will tell you all about it. It made an immense disturbance at the time. And Robert Morris—the other brother, you know—was found to have forged an immense quantity of stock or bonds, whichever it was, and ever so many were ruined by it, or would have been had not Edward Morris sacrificed everything to buy up the forgeries and save the family credit. But it took all he had to accomplish it. And after that they sold that lovely house of theirs, and went away to some little place—in Jersey, I think, or was it Connecticut?—some little cheap place, anyway, and there they have been living ever since. I met Evelyn once at dinner; it was about four years ago, I think. She was staying in town for a few days, but I forgot with whom. She was as handsome as ever. It does seem a thousand pities—doesn't it?—that such a pretty girl should be shut up in a poky country village where no one sees her."

"And are you sure she has never married?"

"Oh no; certainly not. What chance is there for a girl to marry in a place like that?"

"New Jersey, or was it Connecticut," thought Aleck; but he noted a certain gleam of amused interrogation in his hostess' bright eyes, and having no desire to arouse or sharpen any latent suspicion which might be in her mind, he dropped the subject. None the less was he mindful to slip into his pocket, when they arose from the table, the silken trifle which might prove a clew to lead him to the hope relinquished so long ago. Evelyn Morris unmarried! He could hardly credit the tidings.

What had he to offer the brilliant girl at whose feet all the treasures of earth seemed laid? A pair of strong hands, a heart that loved her, such good or evil fortune as might chance to be his portion—that was all. He was very much in love, this young Aleck Dent of ten years, and he had calmly reviewed the situation. Why should he trouble this exquisite creature with what must prove only vain complaint—an empty appeal? As well ask some bright particular planet to come to earth and serve for illumination in a mud hovel, as to ask her to share his uncertain fate. So he sailed away, no words spoken, and carrying with him the bitter conviction that good luck, if it came at all, would come too late for any hope of winning this one chief good which his heart craved.

Good luck came in its own time. He stood again in New York, at 31, a rich man, prospered beyond his wildest dreams and holding an assured position. He had liked many girls during the ten years of absence; he had even been half in love with one or two; but the memory of Evelyn Morris had been a spell potent enough to prevent him over-leaping the other half. He was free still—a freedom he had hardly rejoiced in till this day, when in his incredulous ears rang the news that his early love was still unmarried.

For two or three days after the Huntley dinner he went about like a man in a dream. He inquired here, he inquired there. Everybody was ready enough with the history of the great forgery but nobody could tell him anything about the Edward Morrisses or their whereabouts.

In despair, Aleck Dent at last betook himself to the rooms of the Decorative Art Society, and produced his dinner-card. Could they tell him the name and address of the person who painted that? He was anxious to—to order some others like it.

"I will take your order, sir," said the business-like young secretary—"you will please give me your name and address."

But this was by no means what Aleck wanted.

"Thanks; but I should prefer to communicate directly with the artist."

Then seeing a surprised displeasure in the face suddenly turned upon him, he made haste to add:

"The order will, of course, be given in the usual way, through the society, but it is indispensable that I should have a personal interview with the designer."

The young secretary look puzzled. She tapped her book with a pencil and was silent for a moment, evidently balancing the proprieties. Then, as the door opened, she exclaimed with sudden relief:

"Oh, there's Mrs. Curtis now; excuse me a moment and I'll ask her," and hurried across the room.

Presently the new comer walked straight up to Aleck Dent.

"Miss Dunn tells us that you are desirous of an interview with our correspondents on the subject of dinner-cards," she said. "Personal interviews are not usual in such commissions, nor are they at all needed—if the cards are really all you care to talk about," and the lady flashed a magnificent pair of Irish eyes, with blue flashes, and full of the peculiar fascination which sometimes accompanies the possession of short sight. "I can furnish you with a set of cards on silk, painted by the same person, exactly like these, but with different subjects, which we happen to have for sale at this moment. Will that answer your purpose?"

There was a mingled archness and soft sweetness in the manner, which were infinitely captivating, and which won Aleck to sudden confidence.

"No, that will not answer at all," he said. "I don't care especially about the cards, but I am anxious to see the artist, and verify a suspicion that she is an old friend of mine."

"I will be frank in my turn," she said, at last, her beautiful eyes full of the sympathy which a love-tale revealed or suspected, always excites in a true woman. "Evelyn Morris did paint those cards. She was a favorite of mine always, and when this society was started, I wrote to her urging her, to turn her talent of painting on account through us. They're greatly reduced in circumstances, as you may have heard, and she was glad to follow my advice. And I think I may tell you their retreat. It is at Neriton, a village in southern New Jersey. It is an out-of-the-way place. You have to take three railroads to get there, and there is a long drive besides. Good-bye, Mr. Dent; don't lose your way. Neriton, I have always heard, is a very hard place to reach, and an equally hard place to get away from."

So, indeed, Aleck found it. A long day of slow, jolting railway travel, with continual stops and frequent changes, ending with a drive of four miles over sandy roads, brought him to Neriton; and once there, he was in no hurry to get away. Evelyn Morris at 29 was no whit less charming in his eyes than the early bloom of 19. Nay, time had lent a further charm a soft courage, a ripened gentleness, and amid the simple refinement of her surroundings her beauty beamed with added lustre. Aleck gazed at her with wonderment he could hardly conceal. By what inconceivable good fortune had this lovely creature remained till 29 unmarried? It could not be for lack of suitors. Even if, like the poet's star, "confined in a tomb," some eye, he was sure, must detect and covet the treasure. What happy chance had saved her for him—and was it for him? That was a question which he longed to ask, but dared not yet.

In a single week all the friendly relations of old times seemed restored. He secured a lodging in the village, and spent as many hours a day as he dared to in the society of his love. Always the same gentle welcome met him as he sat by Evelyn's side, and she wrought at her dainty handicraft, their talk bridged the long interval of separation, and the old time sense of intimacy revived, blent with a new fascination as each recognized in the other qualities which ten years had matured and unfolded. Day by day, Aleck's hopes strengthened, but with the misgiving of a true lover he delayed, loth to break the blessed peace and certainty of the moment by a rash or premature word. At last he spoke, taking the dinner-card for his text.

"You see," he added, "this was my clew. It helped me to find you. And now that I have found you, I will not believe that I must lose you again. I have loved you for ten years, without daring to hope that I should ever have a chance to speak my love. Now, Evelyn, dearest, tell me my fate."

She did not answer in words, but she put her hand in his, and her eyes were full of happy tears. He drew his arm around the slender waist, and as he stooped for his first lover's kiss, she murmured, "At last!"

"At last," he said surprised.

"At last," she repeated. "Oh, dear Aleck, foolish Aleck, did you never guess that when you went away, so long ago, you carried my heart with you?" Then, as he stood amazed, "A woman can not speak," she continued, "although her heart break, she may not show what she feels. When we parted that day, I felt that I must wait till you came back to me, and I have waited, though I dared not hope you would come. I waited because I could do no less than wait—and you have come."

"Are you in earnest? Oh, what a blind fool I have been," groaned Aleck.

"I could have come back five years fore if I had dared to hope. Evel we have lost years of happiness."

"Dearest, why talk of that? Y are here now, and we are still young be happy for a long time, if God lets u live our lives out. I am not old or wrinkled yet, and I see no gray hairs in that beard of yours," rising her happy eyes to his face.

"Oh, blessed little scrap of silk," exclaimed Aleck, apostrophizing the dinner-cards as it lay on the table, "where should I be now except for your help? How much I have to thank you for! "No cards' indeed! Evelyn, when we have our wedding, we will have hundreds, thousands of cards. We will send them flying all over the land, and advertise our happiness by whole reams of pasteboard, in honor of the fact that it is a dinner-card to which we owe it that after ten years of mistake we have found each other out, and are the happiest people in the world."—Harper's Bazar.

Monster Oyster.

Prof. Ward, of Rochester, N. Y., arrived lately by the China steamer Rio Janeiro from Japan. In mentioning some of his Oriental experiences, he told of an immense bivalve shell weighing 528 pounds, which he had secured as a great prize at Singapore. The name of this monster shell is the tridacna gigas. In Cook's "Voyages" cockles are mentioned as being found in the Pacific, which two men were not able to carry. Captain Cooke also states that the animal of this species sometimes weighs twenty pounds and is good eating. Darwin also mentions gigantic bivalves seen in the lagoon at Keeling, or Cocos Island, but he classes the shell as the chama. A pair of the valves of the tridacna are used in the church of St. Surplice, Paris, as benitiers, or holy water fonts. They weigh upward of 500 pounds, and are two feet across.

☞ Always stand a wet umbrella with the handle down; one trial will convince you of the rapidity with which it will drain, and your umbrella will last longer if dried quickly.

The Quincy Patriot.

SATURDAY, APRIL 29, 1882.

Reinstated.

The Selectmen have appointed this week, Henry H. Faxon, Esq., as a special police for the enforcement of the law regulating the sale of intoxicating liquors in Quincy. His appointment was no surprise to many of our citizens, as it has been expected for some days. Several weeks ago a petition was presented to them asking that Mr. Faxon be appointed to that position. The petition was headed by Charles F. Adams, Jr., Esq., and followed by the names of Hon. Charles Marsh, Judge Pratt, Col. A. B. Packard, Deputy Sheriff French, John Fed-[illegible]en, William G. A. Pattee, Esq., Rev. [illegible]ward Norton, Henry Barker, J. G. [illegible]itham and others; containing the names of some sixty or more prominent citizens of this place.

There is little doubt but he will fearlessly and vigorously inforce the law; as he gave our citizens good evidence of his tact, skill and energy last season, during the few months he was in office. We learn that he has received numerous letters from citizens encouraging him on in the good work, and one letter contained a check for $200, to help meet the necessary expenses. The Boston Globe thus congratulates Mr. Faxon:—

> "The Selectmen of Quincy have 'vindicated' Mr. Faxon by restoring to him his badge of office as a policeman. The wig and telescope with the false whiskers and spectacles, and the diamond pin for a headlight, will be again brought to bear on the wicked sellers of spirits in the town of granite and the Adamses, and virtue will walk triumphantly through its streets. We congratulate you, Henry."

We predict that there will not be one-half the amount of intoxicating liquors sold in Quincy the coming year as in the past; although undoubtedly there will be some; as there is no law made but has its violators.

Sad Affair.

There was considerable excitement at West Quincy, on Sunday evening last, by the report that Miss Sarah J. Rodgers, a young lady of about 20 years, had been shot through the temple, at the residence of Mr. Otis Allen on Willard street. Miss Rodgers had been employed for several weeks at Dr. Sherman's, on Temple street, and on Sunday afternoon, the day of the accident, went to Mr. Allen's to get some things she had left there. After stopping several hours with the family she started to return, but before leaving the house, went upstairs to a closet. A few moments after a discharge of a pistol was heard, and she was found in the closet dead. As it was known that she kept a loaded revolver wrapped in her clothing in the chamber, it is supposed that it must have fallen to the floor and discharged.

As Mr. Allen's son Edward had been paying some attention to the young lady, and as he went upstairs with her, although it was claimed by him that he was in another chamber at the time of the accident, still some thought the case should be invested, and Medical Examiner Morison was immediately summoned. He took the body in charge, and we learn that on Wednesday an autopsy was held, and this afternoon there will be a public inquest at the District Court room at three o'clock.

GREENLEAF STREET SCHOOL. We have received a new circular of the Greenleaf Street School, which has been successfully managed for so many years. Beside the requisites of sunny windows, ventilators, large rooms, there are open fire places, plants, pictures, and much to please the eye. Imbued with the spirit of progress, a "new departure" has been made in the primary department, under Miss Wright's care. Two rooms have been thrown into one, giving even better ventilation and more space for the restless little ones, separated temporarily by a curtain, the exercises can be conducted without infringing upon the freedom of the youngest scholars. In forming a new class, this change will be found a welcome one. Miss French's "Poet's Mornings" have been a fine feature. We wish our friends success in the future as in the past, and cordially recommend the school to our patrons.

FIREMEN. To-morrow closes the firemen's year of service. On Monday evening the companies will be organized for the ensuing year. The town voted at the March meeting $2900 to pay the firemen, which is distributed as follows:

Chief Engineer,	$25
Four Assistant Engineers, $15 each.	60
Clerk of Engineers,	10
Six Stewards, $40 each,	240
Steward of Hose Company,	100
Engineer of Steam Pump,	100
Asst. Engineer of Steam Pump,	25
240 Members, $10 each,	2400
	$2900

APPOINTMENTS. The Selectmen have appointed the following gentlemen as Engineers of the Quincy Fire Department, for the year commencing May 1st:—John A. Duggan, P. F. Lacy, John W. Hall, Joseph W. Hayden, Charles N. Ditson, Joseph M. Glover.

Special Police.—John C. Lloyd, of Squantum.

ACCIDENT. Mr. C. Philip Tirrell had the misfortune to amputate part of his thumb on Wednesday of last week. Dr. Donovan, who happened to be passing at the time was called in and scientifically adjusted the severed member, and at last accounts the prospects were in favor of their growing together again.

GENEROUS. Charles F. Adams, Jr., gave last season many ornamental trees to those citizens who desired to improve their residences. He has kindly offered to do likewise this season. Those interested will do well to read his article in another column. These public acts are a blessing to the town.

MAY FAIR. The ladies of the Universalist Society will hold a fair at the Town Hall on Tuesday and Wednesday of next week. Fine entertainments will be given each evening. Season ticket twenty-five cents; admission fifteen cents.

☞ Rev. Mr. Snively, former rector of Christ Church, with his wife and baby, has been visiting with Mr. R. [illegible] Metcalf the present week. Mr. [illegible] will officiate at Christ Church [illegible] at morning and evening [illegible]

Brief Locals.

☞ The Assessors are getting ready for their annual tramp.

☞ Grass has greatly improved since the fine rain on Thursday.

☞ E. E. Hall has a young horse and two open wagons for sale.

☞ The Rural Lodge, F. & A. M., hold a special communication this evening.

☞ We would invite the readers attention to D. B. Stetson's new advertisement.

☞ Joseph S. Whall, and A. G. Durgin, apothecaries, have petitioned for sixth-class licenses.

☞ Joseph W. Lombard sells on Wednesday next two large house lots on Common street, West Quincy.

☞ Rev. Mr. Norton, it is expected, will hold services at the Quincy Home to-morrow afternoon, about 3 o'clock.

☞ A special meeting of Paul Revere Post, No. 88, will be held at their hall on Monday evening next, at 7.30 o'clock.

☞ Physicians will find a notice from the Town Clerk, in our columns relative to births, which is worthy their attention.

☞ The Town Clerk calls especial attention to the fact that all Dog Licenses expire April 30, and should be renewed at once.

☞ The public library will be open after this week from 1 to 6.30 P. M., and on Saturday in the morning, afternoon and evening.

☞ Ten house lots on Common street will be sold at auction on Monday next, by Joseph W. Lombard, if the weather is pleasant.

☞ On Monday, May 8th, Joseph T. French sells a fine collection of horses, wagons, harnesses, etc., belonging to H. P. Abbott.

☞ Margaret, wife of Oliver L. Jones, has sold to Charles S. Jones two parcels of land on Bowdoin street, Wollaston, for $2,500.

☞ The rain of Thursday prevented a proposed trip of the first-class of the High School to Plymouth, but we learn that they will go on Monday.

☞ Miss E. M. Carpenter of Wollaston, sister of Mrs. A. A. Walker, has arrived home after a pleasant sojourn of nine months in Europe.

☞ D. Howard Bills has sold his coal business to Mr. Joel F. Sheppard of Braintree, who will continue the same on and after Monday next.

☞ Winter still lingers. One would hardly know that Spring had come if it were not for the organ grinders, dancing bears, and circus advertisements.

☞ There will be a conference of visitors of the Associated Charities, Tuesday, May 2d, at 3 P. M., in the School Committee's Room, Town Hall building.

☞ It is rumored that there is to be a band concert in the Square this evening, but we have not been able to learn from a responsible source that such is the case.

☞ Spring is progressing and cleaning must be done if it is cold. Paint cleaned, carpets shakened and yards and cellar put in a healthy and inviting appearance.

☞ We learn from one of our exchanges that Mr. Edward Whicher has purchased the centre-board sloop Segochet, and is to be enrolled in the Hull Yacht Club this season.

☞ The prospects are not very encouraging, if the old adage is true, that the last Friday of one month governs the succeeding one. Cold and disagreeable weather may be expected.

☞ Some bedding in the house of Mr. P. S. McDonnell was accidently set on fire on Wednesday by some little children, but was fortunately discovered by Mrs. McDonnell in time to prevent serious consequences.

☞ The Selectmen have received the resignation of E. W. Underwood as keeper of the lockup. His resignation has been accepted to take place May 1st, and Deputy Sheriff French has been appointed to fill the vacancy.

☞ It will be seen by advertisement that Miss Elsie Russell of this town, who is a member of the Lyceum Dramatic Club of Boston, is to have a complimentary testimonial tendered her by that company.

☞ Two ladies, members of the Tucker family, died on Friday last. One of the ladies was the wife of Mr. John H. Tucker, the other was his mother. The funerals took place on Sunday last, two hearses leading the procession. The families were occupying separate houses.

☞ One day this week we had the pleasure of visiting Pleasant Point Farm, at Quincy Neck, Bryant N. Adams, proprietor. Mr. Adams kindly showed us over his grounds, which we found in a high state of cultivation. Our citizens will soon be able to enjoy the luxuriant vegetables his farm produces.

☞ Our advertising patrons know the value of the PATRIOT, and are pressing its columns heavily at this time. We are like the omnibus driver endeavoring to accommodate all; and as the rush of Spring advertising will not last but a few weeks we hope the readers of the PATRIOT will bear with us.

Friday evening, the 21st inst., the young people gave Miss Lizzie Kittredge a surprise party.

Monday evening the Vulture Engine Company held a special meeting to arrange its pay roll. Next Monday evening the annual meeting for the election of officers takes place and promises to be a lively one. We hear of a number of candidates for the position of foreman; the most prominent being Messrs. C. F. Lapham, and J. V. Packard. We hope the members will elect the men best fitted for the various positions, regardless of personal preferences, for this year with a quick alarm, a lively company well officered will be able to make a good record, if there are any fires.

Sympathy for wife and children, and not lack of information, is the reply to an item in the "It is rumored" column of your last issue.

We hear that the captain of the English steamer "Batavia" has this week purchased the estate of the late Eldad Worcester on Washington st., for the sum of $8000 cash. The gentleman is to sail shortly for England but is to return with his family and effects in August and establish a permanent home on his newly acquired estate.

The Cantata "Under the Palms" was given Wednesday evening in the Baptist Chapel, before a fair sized audience, but not as large an one as the entertainment deserved. The singing was excellent,—all by home talent.

We hear that Mrs. Leonard has purchased the land and buildings on the westerly corner of River and Washington streets.

Rev. C. D. R. Meacham, of Stoneham, will preach at the Baptist Chapel to-morrow, and will address the Sunday School at a Praise concert in the evening.

Atlantic.

Things in this part of the town never before appeared more hopeful.

Capt. P. P. Coombs is erecting a good-sized, two-story house on Billings street. He has just sold his present house on the same street, receiving for the same several hundred dollars more than he asked a short time ago, which shows that real estate is improving; in fact there can be found no better place for speculation than here. Every house is occupied, and if there should be a dozen ordinary tenements offered to let they would be engaged in a week's time.

Capt. James Burr has bought Mr. A. S. Sawtell's place on Walnut street, and is making very extensive improvements on the same.

Many of the houses here are being improved by new and rich colored dressing of paint. Mr. Drew, on Walker street, has really made a new place of the one he bought some time ago.

It is needless to say that Mr. Gurney is making sundry improvements, for it is seldom he is not doing something of the kind. He is also about to come out with a double team for his business. Mr. Gurney is a stirring business man, who intends to "live and let live," and is a blessing to the place.

It is expected that Mr. T. Frank Hinckley will soon erect a new house on Billings street, and if he does, we expect something that will be an ornament to the street. There is rumor of still more building soon, in the same vicinity.

Mr. W. A. Mosely has given up the hotel and has taken the William Baker estate on Atlantic street.

District Court, Quincy.

James Sproul, of Quincy, for larceny of a seine. Discharged on payment of cost.

Christopher Nolan, of Milton, for being a vagrant. Discharged for want of evidence.

Horace Edgar Bigelow, of Holbrook, for malicious mischief, by breaking three lights of window glass in the house of one Samuel C. Curtis. Plead not guilty, but upon examination he was found guilty and fined $5 and costs; from which sentence he appealed.

John F. Sheehan, of Braintree, for an assault on Margaret Sanderson. Found guilty and fined $5 and costs.

Philip J. McGee, of Weymouth, for being drunk, was fined $1 and costs. In default was committed.

Francis McGann, of Quincy, was brought before the bar of Justice for committing an assault on James Sullivan. He was found guilty and fined $20 and costs. In default was committed.

John Manix, of Randolph, for being drunk. Fined $1 and costs.

Theodore Olsen, of Quincy, for an assault. Fined $5 and costs. For nonpayment was committed.

Andrew Tracy, of Weymouth, for being drunk. It being the third offence, he received a sentence of three months.

William L. Salsby, of Weymouth, for being drunk. Fined $1 and costs.

Rev. Geo. P. Gilman delivered his new lecture, entitled "Rambles in Old Scotland and England, in the Orthodox Church, last Thursday evening, to a large and appreciative audience. With the aid of his stereopticon illustrations the speaker renders his travels almost real to his hearers thus greatly increasing the value of the lecture.

Mr. Isaac Shute after an in-doors confinement of four years, greatly surprised his many friends and acquaintances last Sunday morning by attending services in his wonted place of worship.

The friends of Nathaniel H. Beals will be glad to learn that he is steadily improving and is soon expected to return to his home.

Miss Emma D. Zeigler has accepted a position in a primary school at Sandwich, Mass.

"Farm Lodge," the home of Mr. John Dustan, on Adams street, has been leased for three years.

The new bell for the fire service has arrived and will soon be hung in the tower of the Milton Town Hall.

MAY DAY. Next Monday the Universalists of Plymouth give their annual May dinner at Lyceum Hall. Special rates are made on the railroad, and people wishing to attend the dinner and visit the places of interest or "go mayflowering" will have abundant opportunity to do so, a committee being in attendance at the station to receive the excursionists and show them around. Dinner is to be served from twelve to three, and those attending are also furnished with tickets to Pilgrim Hall.

Evergreen Trees.

To the Editors of the Patriot:

I last May gave notice through your columns that, having a large number of thrifty young evergreen trees in my nursery for which I have no room on my place, I would be happy to give them to any of my fellow residents in Quincy who would send for them under my direction. A large number of applications came to me, and I gave away several hundred trees. I now wish again to let it be known that I will supply persons in Quincy, who want them, with young evergreens during the first three weeks of May. Those who want them can apply to me by letter, and I will let them know when and where to send.

Though glad under the circumstances to give trees to any one who will help to beautify the town by planting and caring for them, I would like to suggest that, to thrive and come to anything, trees need some judgment in setting out, and a certain amount of care after they are set out. They can't be stuck in the ground any where, and left to look out for themselves. If they are, they die; or, at least, stop growing. I have seen thirty, vigorous young trees that I have taken out of my nursery planted directly under the shade of larger trees, or in places where they had no more chance of growing than if they had been stuck on a granite bowlder. I have seen others choked by weeds and dead for want of the simplest care.

The fact is the best of nursery trees, when first set out, need light and air and room and companionship and care just as much as children do. Weeds will smother a young transplanted tree just as much as they will smother potato vines. It is pure waste of time and labor and good material not to bear these facts in mind. There are a few simple rules for growing evergreen trees, and those who wish to set them out will save themselves much trouble and disappointment if they bear these rules in mind.

1st. The tree has the best chances if transplanted after growth has begun, but before it has proceeded too far. The first three weeks in May are best. When the tree is transplanted the roots should not be exposed to the wind or sun; and it should be kept out of the ground as short a time as possible.

2d. In exposed places trees should be planted close together, so as to protect each other, the finer varieties being interspersed among nurse trees (Scotch pines) which must be cut away as the others grow and require more room. Trees which are intended to grow and be permanent should be set out at least twenty feet apart, except in the case of hedges.

3d. It is no use whatever to set out trees under the branches of larger and older trees which overspread them. Trees must have light, air and room.

4th. For the first three years after being set out trees must be carefully dug around with a garden-fork, (a spade must on no account be used, as it cuts the roots), the ground must be kept open, and the weeds kept down. Ten minutes to a tree twice a year is ample. After three years they will take care of themselves, and never need any more labor. All they then want is room.

The use of sea-weed for mulching transplanted trees is bad. It contains salt. I have never found stones, leaves or straw of much use. The best course is to keep the ground about the roots open. If the young roots are packed in tight and hard, away from air and moisture, the tree will not thrive. There is, however, a great deal of luck in transplanting trees. Sun and drought are their great enemies. With a wet, cold May and a moist summer no carefully transplanted tree fairly tended will die. But if a tree is set out in a dry May, and there follows a droughty summer, even if it lives,—and the chances are against it,—it receives a shock from which it does not recover for years.

Weymouth.

The coal vessels have commenced their regular trips from Philadelphia to Weymouth and East Braintree. The most of them being large require from eleven to thirteen feet of water.

A. H. Hunt's boot factory, on Sterling street, was entered on Sunday night, and eighteen pair of fine boots taken away.

The evangelist, C. C. Luther, assisted by the pastor, Rev. P. A. Nordell, are drawing crowds of people nightly to the Baptist Church. On Sunday evening the ceremony of baptism will be performed.

The grand concert and dance, given under the auspices of Michael Devitt branch of the Land League of Weymouth, at Clapp's Hall, last Friday evening, was a success in every particular.

The Hon. John has been engaged and will make his third appearance at the Boylston Museum on Friday night with an entirely new costume.

Married April 17th, Mr. Henry Elmer Pratt of Audubon, Iowa, to Miss Ida F. Baker. After the nuptial knot had been tied by the Rev. L. H. Frary, at his residence in East Braintree, the couple returned to the bride's residence at the Landing, where supper had previously been partaken of by numerous relatives. The couple immediately left for the far West, where they intend to make their home, taking many costly presents with them. We wish them a pleasant journey—may joy and success attend them.

The PATRIOT says that owing to the high price asked for butter, olemargarine has been recently offered for sale in Quincy. The people at the Landing have been supplied with a species of that article called butter, all winter.

At the annual meeting of the Village Cemetery Association, Mr. J. R. H. Williams was appointed as Superintendant, and for the past few weeks he has fell the surplus trees, graded many of the walks, and gave the ground a thorough cleaning up, and now looks very respectable. Within the past year many handsome and costly monuments have been set. The highly polished one recently set on Mr. Granville F. Field's lot attracts much attention, and was made at McGrath Brothers' works at Quincy.

The sacred cantata of Esther was given at the lecture room of the Union Church, on Tuesday and Wednesday evening. The scenery was very fine and at times the large stage presented a splendid appearance. How changed the scene — within the past twenty years, when the old vestry at the Union Church was devoted almost entirely to prayer meetings. F.H.T

Washington Letter.

WASHINGTON, April 25, 1882.

In spite of the grim tragedy that hung like a pall over the opening of the fashionable season at the Capital, vanity fair has never shown with more brilliancy than during the past winter and present spring, and now that the six months of mourning, prescribed by our English imitating official etiquette is over, and the repressive days of Lent are passed, all semblance of restraint is laid aside, and Washington, from sage Senator to sweet sixteen, is nightly massed at a reception, a great dinner, a ball, or the opera. At the Presidential receptions during the last two weeks the dressing was unsurpassed by anything I have ever seen, except, perhaps, the toilettes of "Nana," and those of her class, at the grand prix de Paris in 1878. The gentlemen of the foreign legations wore court dress with great display of golden lace and buttons, and it was necessary for the ladies to throw the utmost possible splendor into their costumes in order to vie in brilliancy with the trinseled soldiers and diplomats. The display of diamonds was literally dazzling. No such display has been seen since Mrs. Astor appeared, during the last administration, loaded with precious stones.

Among successful dinner givers Senator Fair must be awarded the first place. He lives in a large house adjoining the Arlington Hotel. The building is superb in all its appointments. [illegible] practically unlimited wealth of the bachelor Senator enables him to dine everybody that is worth dining. It was impossible, of course for Congress, Officers of the Army, and of the Navy, to sit down to his table at one time, but he has followed the programme of the President's State Dinners, and by inviting en group, has gotten pretty well through the list. At a dinner given by him attended by the President, cabinet, and their families, there were sixteen courses and eight varieties of wine.

President Arthur has not upheld the banner of teetotalism with great enthusiasm, and has incurred the displeasure of those who lament the end of the administration of Mrs. Hayes. He has been accused of unseeming debauchery, and of making the White House a chapel of drunken saturnalia. On the other hand it is claimed that while not a total abstainer he has complete control of his appetite, and that neither he nor his companions ever go beyond the bounds of decorum. One of his defenders goes so far as to say that his cares and his devotion to the business of his exalted office have caused him to lose twenty pounds in weight. I do not believe this last story. He is certainly stouter looking, and has more color than he had when he presided over the Senate one year ago, or when he appeared at the Inaugural Ball at the National Museum, scarcely noticed among the greater celebrities there.

I went one day last week to attend the lectures of the Academy of Sciences now held in one of the rooms of the National Museum. Mr. Cushing was lecturing on the Mythology of the Zuni Indians, while half-a-dozen representatives of the tribe, in native costume, sat on the platform behind him, fast asleep. I could not help thinking of the last time I had been in the building, lighted and heated to suffocation, crowded with the wealth and talent and beauty and wickedness of the country. About ten o'clock there was a commotion in the crowd, and a rush to the western door through which entered the pale, care-worn, bored-looking President with Mrs. Garfield on his arm.

ADAMS.

For the Patriot.

A Kind Word.

I hope the Selectmen, or Street Commissioners of Quincy, will use their influence to put a stop to the boys or young men stripping the slats from the fences on the streets. I noticed recently a piece of fence by the stone school-house, that was build about two years ago, that has been badly used. I stopped and counted the slats that had been taken off, and found fifty missing from that piece of fence. Such things ought not to be allowed. Young men ought not to be allowed to travel in the streets evenings, unless they behave themselves. To such boys as are guilty of such things, I will say, you may think you are smart, prowling around evenings doing mischief, but you are cowards. If you do not change your course you will commit some greater crime that will close you up in prison. What I have said to you, young men, I have said with the best of feeling, and I hope you will think of these things well, before you are deprived of your liberty.

Get some good book and set down at your home evenings and read and make your parents happy. I often hear men in the streets and in other places curse, and use low and vulgar language; such persons ought to be ashamed. The example we set before the young has a great deal to do with making them good and honest men.

I often heard little boys curse and call each other all kinds of names but good names. If there are parents that curse before their little children, break it off at once, I beseech of you. It is a low calling, or practice. If we would see good young men and good young women, we must be good parents. I hope all the ministers of the gospel will preach to the people to keep the Sabbath day better in Quincy. Teach the boys not to play marbles. It looks well to see the Sabbath day respected. It was set apart for man and beast to rest. Be sure to keep the other six days just as holy. A guilty conscience is a continual hell. A clear conscience is a continual heaven. When we learn to live this life, as it is our privilege, we shall not think it all vanity and vexation. We shall rejoice that we were created.

Early Tuesday morning burglars entered the Braintree clothing store, in Holbrook Block, after removing one of the large panes of glass from a window in the front part of the store, and one hundred dollars worth of goods, consisting of underware, boots, slippers, etc., were taken. A bag containing some of the stolen goods carefully hidden among some bushes has been found.

A Remarkable Family.

The recent death of Mrs. George Nightingale, and the just tribute paid to her memory in the PATRIOT of last week, makes it an appropriate time to mention some facts with reference to that large family of nineteen children of Mr. Seth Spear, all born at Hough's Neck, and of which she was the only survivor. Nearly all of this family arrived at adult age, and several lived to be over eighty. Farming in Norfolk County was more profitable in the early part of the present century than at this time, and nearly all the sons of this family followed the occupation of their father.

Mr. Luther Spear for several years carried on the Adams farm at South Quincy, also Mount Wollaston farm, and subsequently the farm at Deer Island, Boston Harbor. Another son, the late John Spear, was the lessee and occupant of George's Island, now Fort Warren. Alpheus Spear was for some years on the Wollaston and also at the Brackett farm. George Spear was on a farm at Germantown. Elijah Spear, who died nearly fifty years ago, was a large land holder, and Mr. Lemuel Spear was for some years on the Greenleaf farm. He was a Representative from Quincy, and died while the Legislature was in session.

This large family appear to have been well brought up, although at the disadvantage of being in an isolated part of the town, three miles from churches and the principal schools; but Master Seaver said nearly sixty years ago, that the scholars late at school in the morning were not those from the outlaying districts,—Hough's Neck and Bents Point,—but from the centre of the town, near the school-house. Nearly all the daughters of this large family married men in Quincy who were persons of respectability and influence.

Assessors' Notice.

To the Inhabitants and all other Persons liable to pay taxes in the Town of Quincy.

THE ASSESSORS of the Town of Quincy hereby give notice to the inhabitants of said town, and all persons liable to pay taxes therein, that they will be at the office of the Selectmen, EVERY SATURDAY in May, from 2 to 4½ o'clock P. M., and from May 27th until June 3d every day from 8 to 10 o'clock A. M., to receive the valuation of Estates; and all persons liable to be taxed in said Town, are hereby required to bring in at said office, a true and correct schedule of the Real and Personal Estates, for which they are liable to pay taxes.

MORTGAGED REAL ESTATE.

"Any mortgagor or mortgagee of real estate may bring in to the assessors of the town or city where such real estate lies," within the time specified in this notice, "a statement, under oath, of the amount due on each separate lot or parcel of such real estate, and the name and residence of every holder of an interest therein as mortgagee or mortgagor. When such property is situated in two or more places, or when a recorded mortgage includes for one sum two or more estates or parts of an estate, an estimate of the amount of the mortgagee's interest in each estate or part of an estate shall be given in such statement."—[Chap. 175 of the Acts of 1882.] When a statement in conformity with the law above quoted is brought in, the real estate therein returned will be assessed under sections 14, 15 and 16, of chapter 11 of the Public Statutes. But in cases where the Mortgagor of the real estate has agreed in writing to pay all taxes assessed thereon, NO STATEMENT OR RETURN IS REQUIRED from either mortgagee or mortgagor, unless requested by the assessors in writing.

Persons holding estates in trust are requested to furnish the Assessors with statements in relation to such estates.

When estates of persons deceased have been divided during the past year, or have changed hands from some other causes, the executor or administrator is required to give notice of such change. In default of such notice he will be held responsible for the tax assessed.

Any person bringing in a list of his taxable property will be assessed upon the valuation thereof, and any one neglecting to furnish the assessors with such list, within the time above specified, will at a legal meeting of the Board of Assessors, be doomed according to the laws of the Commonwealth.

All persons will take notice that statements of personal property must be in writing and subscribed under oath before one of the Assessors, at their office, on or before the 3d day of June; and that the personal property of all taxable persons must be estimated by the Board of Assessors, notwithstanding a verbal statement or informal written communication to any one or more of the Assessors.

When a person has failed to bring in a list or schedule of all his taxable property, in conformity to this notice, no abatement of a tax assessed upon such person for such property can be granted, unless such tax exceeds by more than fifty per centum the amount which would have been assessed to that person on personal estate.

RETURN OF

Births to the Town Clerk,

BY PHYSICIANS AND MIDWIVES.

AN ACT to compel a more accurate Registration of Births.

BE IT ENACTED, ETC.:—

SECTION 1. It shall be the duty of every physician and midwife in the several cities and towns in this Commonwealth, excepting Boston, to report on or before the fifth day of each month to the clerk of each city and town a correct list of births of all children born therein during the month next preceding, at which such physician or midwife was present, stating therein the place, date of each birth, and parents' names.

SECTION 2. Town and city clerks shall give public notice that they are prepared to furnish the necessary blanks to all physicians and midwives applying therefor.

SECTION 3. Any physician or midwife neglecting to report such list for ten days after it is due, shall, for each offence forfeit a sum not exceeding twenty dollars.

SECTION 4. This Act shall take effect upon its passage.

Approved February 26, 1880.

I hereby give notice that I am prepared to furnish the blanks above mentioned.

GEORGE L. GILL,
Town Clerk of Quincy.

April 29, 1882. 3w

NOTICE

OWNERS OR

KEEPERS OF DOGS!

IN this town, are hereby reminded that said Dogs must be REGISTERED in the Town Clerk's office during the present month.

Dogs which were registered in 1881 can retain the same numbers, if their owners make early application.

GEO. L. GILL, Town Clerk.

Quincy, April, 1882.

EXTRACTS FROM THE STATUTES OF 1867, CHAPTER 130.

AN ACT CONCERNING DOGS, AND FOR PROTECTION OF SHEEP AND OTHER DOMESTIC ANIMALS.

Be it enacted as follows:

SEC. 1. Every owner or keeper of a dog shall annually, on or before the thirtieth day of April, cause it to be registered, numbered, described and licensed, for one year from the first day of the ensuing May, in the office of the Clerk of the city or town wherein said dog is kept, and shall cause it to wear around its neck a collar distinctly marked with its owner's name and its registered number, and shall pay for such license, for a male dog two dollars, and for a female dog five dollars.

SEC. 2. Any person becoming the owner or keeper of a dog, not duly licensed, on and after the first day of May, shall cause said dog to be registered, numbered, described and licensed until the first day of the ensuing May, in the manner, and subject to the terms and duties described in this act.

SEC. 5. Any person keeping a dog contrary to the provisions of this act shall forfeit fifteen dollars, to be recovered by complaint or indictment; and of said fine or forfeiture, five dollars shall be paid to the complainant, and ten dollars shall be paid to the Treasurer of the county in which the dog is kept. A license from the clerk of any city or town shall be valid in any part of the Commonwealth and may be transferred with the dog licensed; provided said license be recorded by the Clerk of the city or town where such dog is kept.

SEC. 6. The assessors of the cities and towns shall annually take a list of all dogs owned or kept in their respective cities or towns, on the first day of May, with the owners' or keepers' names, and return the same to the city or town Clerk, on or before the first day of July. Any owner or keeper of a dog who shall refuse to give just and true answers, or shall answer falsely to the assesors relative to the ownership thereof, shall be punished by a fine of not less than ten dollars, to be paid into the county treasury.

SEC. 7. Mayors of cities and the chairman of the Selectmen of towns, shall annually, within ten days from the first of July, issue a warrant to one or more police officers, or constables, directing them to proceed forthwith either to kill or cause to be killed all dogs within their respective cities or towns, not licensed and collared according to the provisions of this act, and to enter complaint against the owners or keepers thereof, and any person may, and every police officer shall kill or cause to be killed, all such dogs, whenever and wherever found.

☞ There are 287 Good Templar lodges in Maine, with 20,000 members. Over 50 lodges were begun during the past year.

ABOUT TIME. The grass in the State House yard has been cut for the first time this season, and the members are beginning to turn their thoughts homeward.

PATENT OFFICE. The gross receipts of the American Patent office for the year 1881 were $853,565.89; the gross expenditure was $605,173.28, leaving a net profit of $248,492.61.

☞ The area of ground covered by the city of St. Louis is 40,000 acres; New York covers 36,401; Cincinnati, 15,360; San Francisco, 26,880; Philadelphia, 82,803; Brooklyn, 13,338; Chicago, 22,797; Boston, 4416.

☞ Valentine R. Coombs, the oldest Deputy Sheriff of Norfolk county, died at his home in West Medway on Monday, aged 82 years. He was appointed by Sheriff Thomas, and for about 30 years had performed the duties of his office.

A LARGE ACCOUNT. Augustus Lowell, as trustee of the estate of Francis Amory, filed an account in the Probate Court at Dedham, this week, in which he charges himself with property and income to the amount of $391,545.37.

THE LICENSE VOTE. The Secretary of the Commonwealth has received the votes on the license question of 327 of the cities and towns of the Commonwealth. In two towns the vote was a tie; 252 cities and towns voted no, and 73 voted yes. The aggregate vote reached 165,889, of which number 83,245 were cast against, and 82,644 in favor of license. In several strong temperance towns no vote was taken. The counties wherein there was a majority for license were Suffolk, Bristol, Berkshire and Hampden.

TRESPASS. We have been asked by one of our subscribers who has been troubled by his neighbors' hens to publish the following act, approved April 20, 1878:—

"SECT. 1. Every owner or person having the charge or custody of any sheep, cattle, horses, swine or fowl, who wilfully suffers or permits the same to enter on, pass over, or remain on any orchard, garden, mowing land or other improved or enclosed land of another, after being forbidden in writing by the owner or occupant thereof, or by the authorized agent of such owner or occupant, shall be guilty of trespass and shall be punished by fine not exceeding ten dollars."

There are mushroom growths in medicine. The sensational style of advertising forces them, for a brief space, into public notice. Trust only such medicines as are of established reputation. You canmake no mistake in choosing AYER'S SARSAPARILLA, to cleanse the blood and put new life and energy into the system. It is the most powerful blood-purifier ever produced, and the best Spring medicine.

Sold by all druggists. Ask for AYER'S SARSAPARILLA, and do not be persuaded to take any other. Price, $1; six bottles for $5.

NOW IS THE TIME TO USE

Kingsley's Iron Tonic.

It builds up the system, gives health and strength to the frame, improves the appetite, and works wonder with feeble children or mothers. Be sure and get the genuine and try it. It is used by some of the best physicians and hospitals.

KINGSLEY'S IRON AND MANDRAKE PILLS are the best cathartic or Spring Medicine you can use. Has been tried for more than 15 years and proved. Druggists have both for sale.

ST. JOSEPH VOLKSBLATT, Aug. 22, 1881.

What a German Newspaper Says.

We Germans are in general not inclined to believe at once in great announcements and puffs; we are rather suspicious, and often with perfect right, of exaggerations and humbugs. Our motto is, "What the eye sees the heart believes," and we therefore desire to see and examine ourselves before we speak about things and praise them. This was our idea when we heard and read so much about Dr. S. A. Richmond's justly celebrated World's Epileptic Institute, and we therefore sent a reporter to the building. We are now able to give the best information on the subject, based on a personal review and examination of the premises.

Our reporter found Dr. Richmond in his office. The doctor kindly received him, and not only answered all his questions, but showed and explained everything about the place to him. His office is on the first floor of the building, and its walls are covered with thousands of photographs of gentlemen and ladies restored to health by the use of Samaritan Nervine, among whom our reporter recognized many of his own countrymen, and its glass cases contain innumerable certificate of cures and letters in praise of this world-famous remedy.

About ten years ago Dr. Richmond came to St. Joseph. He was then a poor young man, with but little money, and no friends to assist him. He rented a small office on Francis street, and commenced the struggle for success single-handed and alone. He has achieved a grand triumph, in the face of stubborn opposition on every hand, and is to-day one of the wealthiest men in our midst. This fact alone is amply sufficient to show the merits of this invaluable preparation, even though there were no other sources from which to procure valid and reliable testimony.

But besides the money which this great medicine has been the means of bringing to the inventor, the doctor receives daily the blessings of thousands of patients restored to health and happiness through his instrumentality. These letters are open for inspection at his office, and it requires two clerks to attend to this branch of the business.

Dr. Richmond is a living example to be imitated by all young men who have a disposition to reach eminence in the world by diligence in the use of their own exertions, and besides the enjoyment of the prosperity which surrounds him, he has the satisfaction to be regarded a human benefactor.

WHEAT BITTERS

THE BEST AND The Richest BLOOD, BRAIN and NERVE -F-O-O-D-

CAREFULLY PREPARED, THOROUGHLY TESTED, ACCEPTABLE AND RELIABLE.

The Phosphates of the Wheat are its most valuable food property, and are, when properly prepared, the most acceptable nutriment with which to build up the system.

The Blood, Brain and Nerves are the forces which bear the strain of every day work and life, and in order to save sickness it is wise to BUILD FOR HEALTH.

Wheat Bitters are prepared, not by fermentation but by solution and are richest in the Phosphates, while the starch and impure matter are eliminated. These make in themselves a basis, to which is added the best and choicest medicinal qualities, necessary to make it a tonic and bitter. It is at once healthful, pleasant to the taste and must not be confounded with the thousand and one cheap alcoholic bitters which are sold as cure-alls. Medicine is doubly effective when used with food, so as to nourish while it corrects.

Sold by druggists, $1.00 per bottle.

PERRY DAVIS' VEGETABLE PAIN KILLER

A Never-Failing Cure for Burns, Scalds, Bruises, Cuts, Sores, etc.

After forty years of trial, PERRY DAVIS' PAIN KILLER stands unrivaled. It is safe! It acts immediately! It never fails!

Editor of the St. John (N. B.) News, says:
In flesh wounds, aches, pains, sores etc., it is the most effectual remedy we know of. No family should be without a bottle of it for a single hour.

From the Cincinnati Dispatch:
We have seen its magic effects, and know it to be a good article.

From I. S. Potter, U. S. Consul at Crefeld, Rhenish Prussia:
After long years of use, I am satisfied it is positively efficient as a healing remedy for wounds, bruises, and sprains.

W. W. Sharper, Valdosta, Ga., says:
It is a panacea for all bruises and burns.

From R. W. Adams, Saco, Me.:
It gave me immediate relief.

R. Lewis says:
In forty years' use it never has failed me.

W. W. Lum, Nicholville, N. Y., says:
I use your PAIN KILLER frequently. It relieves pain and soreness, and heals wounds like magic.

J. W. Dee says:
For scalds and burns it has no equal.

PERRY DAVIS' PAIN KILLER is not a new untried remedy. For forty years it has been in constant use; and those who have used it the longest are its best friends.

Its success is entirely because of its merit. Every family should have a bottle ready for use. Much pain and heavy doctors' bills may often be saved by prompt application of the PAIN KILLER. Unlike most medicines, it is perfectly safe even in the hands of a child. Try it once thoroughly, and it will prove its value. Your druggist has it at 25c., 50c., and $1.00 per bottle.

For the Patriot.

A Selfish Man.

I like to see a selfish man,
Who takes care of himself,
And would not do a dirty thing,
For fashion, fame or wealth.

Who seeks to keep his conscience clear,
And tries with all his might
His bark with steady hand to steer,
To know and do the right.

Who holds mankind as brethren,
And selfishness will show,
By doing unto others as
To him he'd have them do.

All honor to the selfish man,
Too careful of himself,
To do a mean or dirty thing,
For fashion, fame or wealth.

Farm and Garden.

Compacting the Soil.

"How is it," once asked a young friend of us, "that every cutting you touch will grow, while only a small part of mine succeed?" We were both amateur gardners and as neighbors, indulged in a friendly rivalry. We gave him the secret of our "touch," which was to always press the soil firmly around the cuttings; after this he had no cause to complain of failure. This matter of bringing the soil in close contact, not only with cuttings, but with rooted plants and seeds, is of the greatest importance, and its neglect is a frequent source of failures. If the soil is left loosely around a cutting or around a seed, the minute root in either case, as it pushes, may fail to come in contact with the needed moist soil and perish for the want of it. When ripe wood cuttings, such as those of the currant are set out in the open ground, and one lot have the earth thoroughly pressed against their lower portion, even pounded down to make sure, every one will grow. If this is neglected more or less will fail. So in setting out plants, such as those of cabbage, celery, etc. The market gardners make sure that the soil shall be brought close to the roots, by going along the row and pressing it firmly to the plant with the feet. In an article we printed a few years ago, Mr. Peter Henderson showed that success with raising his crop of celery plants was due to the fact that, after sowing the seed he had the whole surface of the soil of the bed well patted down with the back of the spade. The end is accomplished on a large scale by the use of a roller, but in small beds the spade is an excellent subsitute. In setting out trees or shrubs, the more carefully the soil is filled in and worked in among the roots, and firmly pressed—not stamped down, with the foot, the greater the chances of success. Even in laying turf or sods, the roots of the grass should be brought in close contact with the soil by the use of a "beater," a piece of heavy plank with a handle, or by beating down with the spade back.—American Agriculturist for May.

Lasting in its Effects.

A farmer who has used it fifteen years writes us:—

"The results of fifteen years' trial of Bradley's Phosphate on various crops have satisfied me that it is the best fertilizer I have ever bought, though I have used several other kinds. It has never failed to increase the crops more than enough to pay its cost, and in some seasons it has paid for itself more than twice over. It has also proved very lasting in its effects, as I saw an increase in the grass where I used it upon corn three years before, while in the barley that followed the corn it doubled the crop, as it did the crop of corn. There was only a small strip left without Phosphate in the middle of the field.

"The corn, where it is put on, starts more vigorously and ripens two weeks earlier, and I got a third more last year (although not a good corn year where I used it) than where I did not. I also got 110 bushels of potatoes on seventy rods of land (237 bushels per acre), where I used it last year, though a bad season. Potatoes where I did not use it did not yield near as much. Last spring, I seeded down a piece of land with barley and grass seed and got a very good crop of barley, and the grass has caught finely."

Anecdotes.

"Has John obtained a situation yet?" asked an old gentleman of his daughter, John being her betrothed lover.

"Obtained a situation? Why, pa, how disgusting! No; but he has accepted a position."

"Johnny," said a mother to her little boy, "you must not interrupt me when I am talking with the ladies. You must wait till we stop, and then you can talk."

"But you never stop," replied the boy.

A very old lady on her death bed, in the penitential mood, said: "I have been a great sinner more than eighty years and didn't know it."

An old colored woman, who had lived for a long time with her, exclaimed, "Laws, I knowed it all the time."

A negro was suspected of surreptiously meddling with a neighbor's fruit, and being caught in a garden by moonlight, nonplussed his detectors by raising his eyes, clasping his hands and piously exclaiming:

"Good heavens! dis yere darkey can't go nowhere to pray any more without bein' 'sturbed."

"Ma," said a thoughtful boy, "I don't think Solomon was so rich as they say he was."

"Why, my dear, what could have put that into your head?"

"Why, the Bible says he slept with his fathers; and I think if he had been so rich he would have had a bed of his own."

Ayer's Sarsaparilla. Be wise in time. All baneful infections are promptly removed by this unequalled alterative. It is the most potent blood purifier, and a fountain of health and strength.

Household Receipts.

Cold rain water and soap will remove machine grease from fabrics.

To take fresh paint from a woolen garment, rub the spot with stale bread.

Wash straw matting with a cloth dipped in clean salt and water, and wipe dry at once.

Magnesia or fine chalk spread upon a grease spot on clothing will absorb the grease, leaving the garment clean.

Wash blue cambric in cold water, rinse in water with a little salt in it, and hang to dry where the sun will not strike it, but the wind will blow it dry.

An inexpensive and good desert is made of one quart of sweet milk, two-thirds of a cup of uncooked rice, and a little salt. Put this in tea or coffee cups, set them in a steamer over a kettle of boiling water. Let it cook until the rice is almost like jelly. When cold turn it out of the cup. Serve with sugar and cream or with pudding sauce.

Improve a few spare hours in picking up the waste that has accumulated about the premises during the winter. Clean out the cellar, the shed, the barn; in short, have a general cleaning up time. It will not only improve the looks of your surroundings, but it will make your home healthier and happier. Try it this spring, if you never did before, and you will be satisfied that this is a good plan to follow.

Fashion Notes.

The favorite millinery lace is the oriental or moresque.

Moire is the chief element in lately imported costumes.

Drab and violet are combinations of color for spring wear.

Pink hyacinths are worn with pink, white, or black dresses.

Spanish lace trims the handsomest parasols and coaching umbrellas.

Colored Spanish lace appears on many of the Paris trimmed hats for Spring wear.

The style of figures on the new sateens are in small flowers, leaves, and stems in mele or jardiniere effects.

Feathers are again worn in the hair with full evening dress—matrons wearing them to the exclusion of floral garniture.

White mull dresses made up over rose and pale blue silesia, and trimmed with a profusion of Moresque lace, will be the toilets for evening wear at watering places and summer resorts during the heated term, at the hight of the season.

This and That.

☞ Bachelor smokers admit that an amber mouth-piece isn't as tempting as a cherry-red one, temptingly puckered.

☞ On seeing a house being whitewashed a small boy of three wanted to know if the house was going to be shaved.

☞ "An' that's the pillar of Hercules?" she said, adjusting her spectacles. "Gracious, what's the rest of his bed-clothes like, I wonder?"

☞ A lady, when admiring the stars on a bright night in a tropical climate, was suddenly asked, in a most innocent way by her little son of five years old, if those were the nails that held up heaven.

☞ Latest market reports state "Iron bound whiskey is firm." This is a new departure. We have all read of the "iron bound bucket, the moss covered bucket," etc., but when it comes to "iron bound whiskey," our giant intellect fails to realize what is meant.

☞ Spending one's money in deeds of genuine charity, or in aid of worthy objects, if guided by moderation, gives more real pleasure than any miser ever experienced in hoarding up his wealth. Use your possessions to the good of others, and be not too selfish therewith.

☞ A person who does not read much is to be pitied. He is simply making an ignoramus of himself. Read, by all means, even if you have to borrow the papers and books of your neighbors. Reading is a constant spring of joy to him that understandeth how to drink in its lessons.

☞ A little girl in Reading, Pa., recently saw a drunken old man lying on a door-step, the perspiration pouring off his face, and a crowd of children preparing to make fun of him. She took her little apron and wiped his face and then looked up so pitifully to the rest and made this remark, "Oh, say, don't hurt him! He's somebody's grandpa."

☞ A boy who had always refused to eat oatmeal, in spite of his mother's urgings that it was a strengthening diet, suddenly surprised her, one morning, by eating a liberal plateful and calling for more. Upon his mother asking for an explanation he replied: "I am bound to eat oatmeal till I am strong enough to whip Johnny Scott!"

☞ Our uncle and Mrs. S. were having a discussion the other day upon rights and abilities of women.

"There is nothing," said Mrs. S., warmly, "that a man can do that a woman cannot do equally as well."

"How about this?" said my uncle, as he took a match from his pocket and lighted it on his pants. The discussion was not renewed.

Walnut Leaf Hair Restorer.

It is entirely different from all others. It is as clear as water, and, as its name indicates, is a perfect Vegetable Hair Restorer. It will immediately free the head from all dandruff, restore grey hair to its natural color, and produce a new growth where it has fallen off. It does not in any manner affect the health, which Sulphur, Sugar of Lead, and Nitrate of Silver preparations have done. It will change light or faded hair in a few days to a beautiful glossy brown. Ask your druggist for it. Each bottle is warranted. Chas. N. Crittenton, New York, and Geo. C. Goodwin & Co., Boston, wholesale agts. S 24po

SAMARITAN

NERVINE

SAMARITAN NERVINE

Cures Epileptic Fits, Spasms, Convulsions, St. Vitus Dance, Vertigo, Hysteries, Insanity, Apoplexy, Paralysis, Rheumatism, Neuralgia and all Nervous Diseases. This infallable remedy will positively eradicate every species of Nervous Derangement, and drive them away from whence they came, never to return again. It utterly destroys the germs of disease, by neutralizing the hereditary taint or poison in the system, and thoroughly eradicates the disease, and utterly destroys the cause.

SAMARITAN NERVINE

Cures Female Weakness, General Debility, Leucorrhea or Whites, Painful Menstruation, Ulceration of the Uterus, Internal Heat, Gravel Inflammation of the Bladder, Irritability of the Bladder. For Wakefulness at Night there is no better remedy. During the change of life no female should be without it. It quiets the Nervous system and gives rest, comfort and nature's sweet sleep.

SAMARITAN NERVINE

Cures Alcoholism, Drunkenness and the habit of Opium Eating. These degrading habits are by far the worst evils that have ever befallen suffering humanity. Thousands die annually from these noxious drugs. The drunkard drinks liquor not because he likes it, but for the pleasure of drinking and treating his friends, little thinking that he is on his road to ruin. Like the Opium Eater, he first uses the drug in small quantities as a harmless antidote. The soothing influence of the drug takes strong hold upon its victim, leading him on to his own destruction. The habits of Opium Eating and Liquor Drinking are precisely what eating is to alimentiveness, as over eating first inflames the stomach, which redoubles its cravings until it paralyzes both the stomach and appetite. So every drink of liquor or dose of opium, instead of satisfying, only adds to its fierce fires until it consumes the vital force and then itself. Like the gluttonous tape-worm, it cries, "Give, give, give!" but never enough until its own rapacity devours itself. Samaritan Nervine gives instant relief in all such cases. It produces sleep, quiets the nerves, builds up the nervous system, and restores body and mind to a healthy condition.

SAMARITAN NERVINE

Cures Nervous Dyspepsia, Palpitation of the Heart, Asthma, Bronchitis, Scrofula, Syphilis, diseases of the Kidneys, and all diseases of the urinary organs. Nervous debility, caused by the indiscretions of youth, permanently cured by this invaluable remedy. To you young, middle-aged and old men, who are covering your sufferings as with a mantle, by silence, look up, you can be saved by timely efforts, and make ornaments to society, and jewels in the crown of your Maker, if you will. Do not keep this a secret longer, until it saps your vitals, and destroys both body and soul. If you are thus afflicted, take DR. RICHMOND'S Samaritan Nervine. It will restore your shattered nerves, arrest premature decay, impart tone and energy to the whole system.

SAMARITAN NERVINE

Cured my little girl of fits. She was also deaf and dumb, but it cured her. She can now talk and hear as well as anybody.

In the Whole History of Medicine

No preparation has ever performed such marvellous cures, or maintained so wide a reputation, as AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, which is recognized as the world's remedy for all diseases of the throat and lungs. Its long-continued series of wonderful cures in all climates has made it universally known as a safe and reliable agent to employ. Against ordinary colds, which are the forerunners of more serious disorders, it acts speedily and surely, always relieving suffering, and often saving life. The protection it affords, by its timely use in throat and chest disorders, makes it an invaluable remedy to be kept always on hand in every home. No person can afford to be without it, and those who have once used it never will. From their knowledge of its composition and operation, physicians use the CHERRY PECTORAL extensively in their practice, and clergymen recommend it. It is absolutely certain in its healing effects, and will always cure where cures are possible.

For sale by all druggists.

Assessors' Notice.

To the Inhabitants and all other Persons liable to pay taxes in the Town of Quincy.

THE ASSESSORS of the Town of Quincy hereby give notice to the inhabitants of said town, and all persons liable to pay taxes therein, that they will be at the office of the Selectmen, EVERY SATURDAY in May, from 2 to 4½ o'clock P. M., and from May 27th until June 3d every day from 8 to 10 o'clock A. M., to receive the valuation of Estates; and all persons liable to be taxed in said Town, are hereby required to bring in at said office, a true and correct schedule of the Real and Personal Estates, for which they are liable to pay taxes.

MORTGAGED REAL ESTATE.

"Any mortgagor or mortgagee of real estate may bring in to the assessors of the town or city where such real estate lies," within the time specified in this notice, "a statement, under oath, of the amount due on each separate lot or parcel of such real estate, and the name and residence of every holder of an interest therein as mortgagee or mortgagor. When such property is situated in two or more places, or when a recorded mortgage includes for one sum two or more estates or parts of an estate, an estimate of the amount of the mortgagee's interest in each estate or part of an estate shall be given in such statement."—[Chap. 175 of the Acts of 1882.] When a statement in conformity with the law above quoted is brought in, the real estate therein returned will be assessed under sections 14, 15 and 16, of chapter 11 of the Public Statutes. But in cases where the Mortgagor of the real estate has agreed in writing to pay all taxes assessed thereon, NO STATEMENT OR RETURN IS REQUIRED from either mortgagee or mortgagor, unless requested by the assessors in writing.

Persons holding estates in trust are requested to furnish the Assessors with statements in relation to such estates.

When estates of persons deceased have been divided during the past year, or have changed hands from some other causes, the executor or administrator is required to give notice of such change. In default of such notice he will be held responsible for the tax assessed.

Any person bringing in a list of his taxable property will be assessed upon the valuation thereof, and any one neglecting to furnish the assessors with such list, within the time above specified, will at a legal meeting of the Board of Assessors, be doomed according to the laws of the Commonwealth.

All persons will take notice that statements of personal property must be in writing and subscribed under oath before one of the Assessors, at their office, on or before the 3d day of June; and that the personal property of all taxable persons must be estimated by the Board of Assessors, notwithstanding a verbal statement or informal written communication to any one or more of the Assessors.

When a person has failed to bring in a list or schedule of all his taxable property, in conformity to this notice, no abatement of a tax assessed upon such person for such property can be granted, unless such tax exceeds by more than fifty per centum the amount which would have been assessed to that person on personal estate.

AN ACT to compel a more accurate Registration of Births.

BE IT ENACTED, ETC.:—

SECTION 1. It shall be the duty of every physician and midwife in the several cities and towns in this Commonwealth, excepting Boston, to report on or before the fifth day of each month to the clerk of each city and town a correct list of births of all children born therein during the month next preceding, at which such physician or midwife was present, stating therein the place, date of each birth, and parents' names.

SECTION 2. Town and city clerks shall give public notice that they are prepared to furnish the necessary blanks to all physicians and midwives applying therefor.

SECTION 3. Any physician or midwife neglecting to report such list for ten days after it is due, shall, for each offence forfeit a sum not exceeding twenty dollars.

SECTION 4. This Act shall take effect upon its passage.

Approved February 26, 1880.

I hereby give notice that I am prepared to furnish the blanks above mentioned.

GEORGE L. GILL,
Town Clerk of Quincy.

NOTICE

OWNERS OR

KEEPERS OF DOGS!

IN this town, are hereby reminded that said Dogs must be REGISTERED in the Town Clerk's office during the present month.

Dogs which were registered in 1881 can retain the same numbers, if their owners make early application.

GEO. L. GILL, Town Clerk.
Quincy, April, 1882.

EXTRACTS FROM THE STATUTES OF 1867, CHAPTER 130.

AN ACT CONCERNING DOGS, AND FOR PROTECTION OF SHEEP AND OTHER DOMESTIC ANIMALS.

Be it enacted as follows:

SEC. 1. Every owner or keeper of a dog shall annually, on or before the thirtieth day of April, cause it to be registered, numbered, described and licensed, for one year from the first day of the ensuing May, in the office of the Clerk of the city or town wherein said dog is kept, and shall cause it to wear around its neck a collar distinctly marked with its owner's name and its registered number, and shall pay for such license, for a male dog two dollars, and for a female dog five dollars.

SEC. 2. Any person becoming the owner or keeper of a dog, not duly licensed, on and after the first day of May, shall cause said dog to be registered, numbered, described and licensed until the first day of the ensuing May, in the manner, and subject to the terms and duties described in this act.

SEC. 5. Any person keeping a dog contrary to the provisions of this act shall forfeit fifteen dollars, to be recovered by complaint or indictment; and of said fine or forfeiture, five dollars shall be paid to the complainant, and ten dollars shall be paid to the Treasurer of the county in which the dog is kept. A license from the clerk of any city or town shall be valid in any part of the Commonwealth and may be transferred with the dog licensed; provided said license be recorded by the Clerk of the city or town where such dog is kept.

SEC. 6. The assessors of the cities and towns shall annually take a list of all dogs owned or kept in their respective cities or towns, on the first day of May, with the owners' or keepers' names, and return the same to the city or town Clerk, on or before the first day of July. Any owner or keeper of a dog who shall refuse to give just and true answers, or shall answer falsely to the assessors relative to the ownership thereof, shall be punished by a fine of not less than ten dollars, to be paid into the county treasury.

SEC. 7. Mayors of cities and the chairman of the Selectmen of towns, shall annually, within ten days from the first of July, issue a warrant to one or more police officers, or constables, directing them to proceed forthwith either to kill or cause to be killed all dogs within their respective cities or towns, not licensed and collared according to the provisions of this act, and to enter complaint against the owners or keepers thereof, and any person may, and every police officer shall kill or cause to be killed, all such dogs, whenever and wherever found.

Poetry.

For the Patriot.

A Modern Novel.

Take a girl rich and handsome, a chap young and poor;
A man at least sixty, with thousands or more;
Then neighbor's stern father of whom she's afraid
And you have the points from which stories are made.

Young fellow proposes for the hand of this girl.
The father he listens, gives his lips a short curl;
"Young fellow," says he, "you have not got the cash,
My daughter can't live on boarding-house hash."

Old fellow laid up with the gout on his knee,
Thinks what a comfort a young wife would be;
He has met this young lady at opera and ball,
So he orders his carriage on her father to call.

He talks of his fortune, his bank stocks and gold,
The bargain is made, and the maiden is sold;
To her tears and entreaties no attention is paid,
The wedding is hurried, the trosseau is made.

She meets this young fellow, and sad to relate,
Like the most of us mortals, he kicks against fate;
They elope and are married, a small house they hire,
Then up comes the question, "Which one builds the fire?"

ALDEN H. DAY.

Miscellany.

"'Tain't to be wondered at," said Mrs. Timothy Crane, soothingly. "She's always meddlin' with other folks' business, and why shouldn't it be yours this time?"

"But it isn't true," said the young housekeeper, indignantly. "I never gave flour bread to the pigs in my life. I always put the stale pieces into the Saturday brown loaf, and as to making mother wear my old clothes—its untrue, and I shall speak to Mrs. Flint about it."

"Now you said you wouldn't," said Mrs. Crane, evidently alarmed. "If you hadn't promised before I began I shouldn't ha' told you. 'Twould get me into a dretful mess, because she'd deny it up hill an' down, an' then you see you'd think I made it up."

"I wonder if you did," thought Grace, giving the busy body a keen glance, which Mrs. Crane met with one of blank innocence, while she began to set the heel of the coarse, blue stocking that occupied her fingers while her neighbors' affairs dwelt on her tongue.

Grace was the young minister's wife, a small lady with a child's heart and a woman's common sense. She and her husband had gone to Barry with as enthusiastic a desire of helping the towns-people as need animate any two philanthropists, but unfortunately their idea of the wrongs to be righted in a country community was too poetic for hard and practical usage. They had mentally pledged themselves to watch with with the sick, close the eyes of the dying, and fight sternly against sin whereever it cropped out, but had made no provision for a warfare on the reptile brood of slander and idle gossip. They had both lived in an atmosphere of "culture," where vice was at least well clothed and grammatical.

Here in the little parish of Barry, where they promised to live on $600 a year for the privilege of elevating the people, the people themselves were in comfortable circumstances, and had no intention of being regarded in a charitable light. They were honest enough, no man cheated his neighbor; there were no prize fighters or gamblers. The minister's duties, according to precedent, consisted in preaching two sermons a week, going out to tea and praising the cake and preserves of his hostess. They had not been in Barry a week when Mrs. Crane called on Grace and warned her that already she had been "talked about." Grace unsuspiciously fell into the trap, and asked what had been said. Whereupon Mrs. Crane feigned virtuous and honest indignation. Tell, indeed! not she; other folks might make mischief if they liked, but she should name no names. Only folks said the minister's wife ought to know it. But in ten minutes chat at the weekly sewing-circle the explanation came out. As if by accident, Mrs. Crane, let fall Mrs. Flint's name, and then, on condition of revealing further iniquities of slander, extracted from Grace a promise not to tell. And poor Grace was unsuspicious enough to give it never dreaming the bundle of news for which she was bartering could be forgery, and too angry at the injustice of it all to be dignified and refuse to listen.

"Yes, she's talked dretfully ever sence you come," said Mrs. Crane, unrolling her yarn, and speaking as coolly as if the subject-matter were of the pleasantest nature. "Dretfully! And if you was to speak to her about it you'd make an enemy of her, and then there wouldn't be no rest fur your character. My! there's Sophrony Dawkins; I must go an' speak to her."

Grace was excited and hurt; it would be a relief to have a hearty cry, but that would never do for the new minister's wife at the sewing-circle. Perish the thought! for might not the gossips be saying next that her husband beat her? She gathered up her work and went across the room to talk with young and pretty Mrs. Fiske. That lady was rather cool and ceremonious, much to Grace's surprise. What could have happened since they had discussed books, pansy culture and bread-making over a cup of tea at the parsonage? Finally Mrs. Fiske, after rather an uncomfortable pause, said boldly:

"Mrs. True, what made you say I told you my husband wasn't kind to me?"

Grace opened her eyes wide and gasped. Was all the world going gossip mad?

"I never said so," she exclaimed, when she could get her breath. "I couldn't. Why, it would have been a lie!"

"Yes, so it would," said Mrs. Fiske, sternly. "That was why I wondered so at it."

"Who told you?"

"I promised not to tell," said Mrs. Fiske, "so you see I can't. But it's all right now you have denied it. I should believe you anywhere, and it would only make mischief for me to get the other person into trouble."

No persuasions availed; she would not tell, and Grace went home to cry on her husband's shoulder, and tell him she was sure their reputations would be riddled like sieves if they stayed in Barry. Whereupon they both laughed and agreed to let the matter rest until the tongue of slander wagged once more, then to take grave and deliberate measures for the suppression of the nuisance. They had not long to wait. No woman came to make a friendly call on Grace who did not either hint at something "Mis' Crane" had said, or wonder how "Mis' Crane got hold of so much news."

"I haven't any doubt that she's at the bottom of it all," said Grace to her husband, "but what can we do? If you went to talk over her delinquencies with her I'm afraid she'd scratch your ministerial eyes out."

What the minister would have done will never be known, for he was saved from the trial of deciding by one whom he was afterwards wont to name a special messenger of Providence, Miss Dorothy Doone moved into the great house on the hill. She was sixty, white-haired and charming. Every one loved her at sight; she was quite used to that, as angels were in the habit of receiving spontaneous admiration in the days of their earthly visitations. She was evidently a good church woman, and zealously interested in all the social events of the little place. In three months after she came there Grace wondered how Barry had ever been able to exist without her.

"My dear," she said, one day, looking up from the mending she was helping Grace do, "don't you think there is a good deal of gossip here for such a little town. To be sure, the size of a town is always in inverse ratio to its capacity for scandal, but I'm inclined to think Barry unusually gifted in that direction."

"Indeed it is," said Grace, earnestly, laying down her work. "And what can be done, Miss Dorothy?"

"Kill it at the source," said Miss Dorothy, firmly, "as soon as you know what the source is. Now, in the few months I have been here, I've been able to trace nine distinct lies to one woman. Isn't it time the public remonstrated with that woman?"

"Mrs. Crane?" ventured Grace.

"Yes, Mrs. Crane; she is constitutionally inclined to gossip. I believe she has quite lost the power of discriminating between truth and falsehood, so one might, I suppose, charitably consider her mentally diseased. But, nevertheless, somebody is bound to cure her. Will you go with me and help do it?"

"How, Miss Dorothy?" said Grace, surprised.

"By holding up a mirror before her. She is not an unreasonable woman. If you'd rather, I'll go alone, but I think a committee of two would be more imposing."

Grace yielded to duty, with many a failure of courage before the time arrived for facing the cannon's mouth. The interval of dread was short, however, for in two days Miss Dorothy proposed that the call should be made.

"Now, don't be afraid of speaking your mind," said the elder lady, smiling, as they rang Mrs. Crane's bell. "Remember our cause is just."

Mrs. Crane was effusively glad to see them. She hadn't set eyes on a neighbor for two days. The plowing seemed to keep the men busy, but there didn't seem to be any reason why the women folks should stay indoors till it was time for Spring cleaning. Miss Dorothy made herself very agreeable to the ogress, who was not in the least a formidable woman, setting aside the havoc she made with her tongue, if one living in the same neighborhood could forget that. Miss Dorothy took a gentle interest in the plants, the rag carpet Mrs. Crane was making, and admired the polish of the kitchen stove, visible through a half-open door. "But this is partly a business call," she said, smiling with so much sweetness that her hostess smiled too. "Mrs. Crane, you will forgive an old woman for speaking her mind to you? Then you must let me tell you how much harm you are doing your neighbors."

"Harm my neighbors?" ejaculated Mrs. Crane, helplessly.

Miss Dorothy went on with the utmost blandness and amiability. "Yes, even I, a stranger, have been able to see that. There are at least half-a-dozen unfounded stories of both men and women afloat in this parish, in the course of every week. Mrs. Crane, I have been able to trace many of them to you; it seemed to be my duty to ask your consideration of the question as to whether gossip is a good or an evil."

Had Miss Dorothy been a shade less pretty or ladylike, had her sweet voice been harder or raised one tone above its even pitch, Mrs. Crane would have burst into a torrent of denial. As it was, she only listened in a kind of dazed way. No one in Barry had ever spoken wholesome truth to her before.

"Would it not be better," said the visitor, persuasively, "to close our hearts against everything that would hurt another? And even if scandal is true, why should we soil our lips by repeating it?" She did not stop there; she carried on her argument gently, forcibly to the end, and then exclaimed suddenly: "Why, how brightly the sun has come out! Grace we must go or we shan't be able to make another call before tea. Mrs. Crane what we have said this afternoon is entirely in confidence. No one will ever know it from me." And they took their leave, without having been snubbed or scolded. In fact, Mrs. Crane had not been able to marshal her wits into fighting order; the surprise of the attack had been too complete.

"Why did you say 'we'?" asked Grace, when they were out of hearing distance. "I didn't speak a word. I found you were saying it beautifully, and, besides, I own to being frightened."

"Yes, I know it—the latter fact," said Miss Dorothy smiling, "but I wanted you to go for two reasons; one, that however young you may be, you have the official dignity of being the minister's wife, and beyond that if she knows you suspect her of being guilty of gossip she won't be as likely to attack you next time. Will it do any good, do you think?"

Time proved that conclusively. The remonstrance showing that her neighbors had marked her as a maker of mischief sincerely alarmed and troubled Mrs. Crane. Her self-respect was hurt, her vanity touched; she had thought every one regarded her as a "good neighbor," and that she should be dubbed the town gossip was a bitter blow. Like schoolmaster's floggings, however, it proved to be for her good. She was thoroughly cured and converted, and in the manner of most proselytes became most zealous in denunciations of the class of sinners to which she had belonged.—Sunday Budget.

Spring Clothing.

In years past, as spring approaches, we have cautioned our readers in regard to the too early adoption of spring or summer apparel. We might well set this down as a good subject for every writer in Spring. The appearance of green lawns, bright sunshine and singing birds is quite calculated to allure one to adopt light flannels and less protecting covering. Bear constantly in mind that air in motion is colder than air at rest. With March winds, the thermometer above the freezing point may entirely misrepresent the effective temperature. We have before illustrated this proposition by referring to the habit of using a fan in summer. When the thermometer is in the nineties and the face is bathed with perspiration one is able to keep comfortably cool by air set in motion by that little device we call a fan. It is questionable if in the New England and Middle States the clothing should not be thicker and warmer in March than in January. It certainly will not do to throw aside the winter overcoat nor the sealskin cloak, nor even the heavy underflannel. When finally the change is made and winter garments are put aside they cannot safely be laid away for the summer until all the chilly days and still more chilly nights have entirely passed away. Always bear in mind that when one experiences a chill, or when for a long time one feels an uncomfortable sensation of coldness a cold is being contracted.—Dr. Foote's Health Monthly.

Female Delicacy.

Above every other feature which adorns the female character, delicacy stands foremost within the province of good taste. Not that delicacy which is perpetually in quest of something to be ashamed of, which makes merit of a blush, and simpers at the false construction its own ingenuity has put upon an innocent remark; this spurious kind of delicacy is as far removed from good taste as from good breeding and good sense; but the high-minded delicacy which maintains its pure and undeviating walk alike amongst women as in the society of men, which shrinks from no necessary duty, and can speak, when required, with seriousness and kindness, of things at which it would be ashamed to smile or blush—that delicacy which knows how to confer a benefit without wounding the feelings of another, and which understands also how and when to receive one—that delicacy which can give alms without display, and advice without assumption; and which pains not the most humble, susceptible being in creation.

A Benevolent Princess.

Her Highness Kudsia Begum, an Indian princess of abnormally charitable disposition, lately died at Bhopal, so deeply regretted that all the shops in the city were closed and no business was transacted for three days. Many hundreds of persons were the recipients of monthly stipends from this kind woman, who did not confine her benefits to human beings only. She took the sparrows which roosted about her palace, and the ants and stray dogs also came in for a share of attention, the latter being fed regularly at the cook-house. A short time ago a number of swallows, finding that the doorway of her bath afforded a good place for the construction of their nests, speedily utilized the place for that purpose, and the princess, observing this, left off using the bath so as not to disturb the little creatures.—N. Y. Tribune.

A Witty Judge.

Lord Erskin, while on a circuit, was asked by the landlord of his hotel how he had slept. He replied dogmatically, "Union is strength, a fact of which some of your inmates appear to be unaware; for had they been unanimous last night, they could easily have pushed me out of bed." "Fleas!" exclaimed the landlord, affecting great astonishment, "I was not aware that I had a single flea in my house." "I don't believe you have," retorted his lordship; "they are all married, I think, and have uncommonly large families."

Jumbo.

NEW YORK, March 1882.

Jumbo is here. He is at the Madison Square Garden. There Jumbo holds his levees every afternoon and evening. He is a queer thing to have in a garden. He is so unlike a little delicate flower, a velvet violet, or a pretty pink, with its sweet perfume. And yet, after all, Jumbo is in the garden. He was taken from the Zoological Gardens in London, and transplanted, so to speak, in the Madison Square Garden in New York, where he is flourishing like a green bay tree. This is the way the wicked flourish. Well Jumbo must be wicked for he drinks whiskey. They gave him a glass on the steamer, just before he landed, to keep his courage up while they swung him on the dock in his cage, which weighed over six tons.

The bird in the cage, Jumbo I mean, with his long beak, commonly called a trunk, weighs about one ton more than his cage. They gave him a small glass—small for Jumbo, only one quart—which he held in his trunk so still to have it poured in and then he turned it into his mouth so carefully that he didn't lose a drop. Jumbo looked out for his whiskey and took it all in as some men do who drink more than Jumbo, though not quite so much at a drink. Jumbo is not a hard drinker. Like some drinkers with two legs, he is a very easy drinker. He quaffs or pours it down with no trouble whatever.

Jumbo is the biggest sensation in New York just now. Oscar Wilde is eclipsed by Jumbo. Oscar's sunflowers and lilies are hidden by the broad flapping ears of Jumbo, which measure full spread fifteen feet. With such fine ears he is sure to hear all that is worth hearing from the thousands and tens of thousands who flock around to look at him. I saw him at a matinee recently when he was gazed upon with wonder by twenty thousand spectators. Such a mountain of self moving flesh was never seen in Europe or in America before Jumbo put in an appearance. If he has any relations as great on the scales as he is, in Africa, where he came from, they are running wild in the jungles yet at their own sweet will, they have not been caught yet. Jumbo beats all that has been seen or heard of yet in his line, his trunk is the largest which has been packed yet with hay, jumbles, candy, beer and whiskey. As Jumbo is so large, you know, rather large, very large, extremely large, the largest out, so elephantine in size, literally as well as figuratively. He is such a colossus of his race that when he comes to the table to take his meals it must be bountifully spread; he cannot put up with genteel boarding house fare, he must be treated with Parker House and Delmonico style.

For breakfast Jumbo takes 100 pounds of hay, one half bushel of oats, ten pounds of carrots and potatoes, and twenty-four gallons of water. If you make it brandy and water he is better pleased. For dinner he calls for the same bill of fare, and for supper the same. As for desert he will take all the buns, peanuts, cakes, and candies which are brought to him. He doesn't consider it polite to refuse what is offered to him which can be eaten. I had half a dozen jumbles the other day and he held out his trunk for a treat, I gave him one but he saw the rest with his knowing eyes and he was not going to carry one to his mouth at a time, so he waited till as many were piled on his trunk as would stay, and then he took them in. This was sound philosophy. "Six journeys were not to be made when one journey would answer the purpose."

Mr. Barnum, the prince of showmen, as we all know, is a stanch temperance man, and an eloquent and impressive speaker upon temperance, so Jumbo will not be allowed to indulge quite so freely in wine drinking under his charge as he was on the other side of the Atlantic. Mr. Barnum went down the bay in a tug to meet Jumbo in the Assyrian Monarch, in company with several gentlemen, and when his keeper, "Elephant Bill," wanted to show Mr. Barnum what a lover of good whiskey Jumbo was, Mr. Barnum said he was sorry enough to know it, but he refused to allow Jumbo to indulge in his habit of dissipation. Mr. Barnum will doubtless make a teetotaler of Jumbo.

Though Jumbo is so vast in size, Mr. Barnum suggested that he would have been vaster if he had never drank anything but cold water. He now weighs fourteen thousand pounds, large enough we may say in all conscience, but perhaps if Jumbo had been a member of Francis Murphy's Total Abstinence Society he might have reached the very respectable figure of sixteen thousand pounds. Jumbo measures eleven feet and six inches in height, and he can reach up with his trunk twenty-six feet. This is the exact, not museum measure.

We have to thank Mr. Barnum for his enterprise in giving us the opportunity of seeing the elephant on the grandest and largest scale. There were a number of difficulties in the way of buying and bringing him here. There was a strong feeling against having Jumbo taken out of England. The Queen regretted that he should be removed from London where he had been so popular with the members of the royal family, and with all classes, from the highest to the lowest. He had been in the garden in London 17 years. He was brought thence from the garden in Paris when he was four years old. So we see Jumbo budded and blossomed in gardens in Paris and London, and now he is blooming in a garden in New York. There was an injunction suit in the London courts in respect to the removal of Jumbo, but Mr. Barnum defended with much expense his side of the question, and gained the case. Then there was great trouble and delay in inducing Jumbo to leave London and his wife Alice, and emigrate to this country. His passage was engaged in two steamers before the steamship in which he finally took passage after many devices. He utterly refused to go on the other steamers in time, and they were obliged to sail without the famous passenger. Finally he consented to come on the "Monarch." Perhaps he thought the name of this ship was the only appropriate one for a floating palace in which one of kingly dimensions and majestic bearing and royal stride to come in across the ocean.

The papers say that it has cost $30,000 to get Jumbo here and planted in the garden. This calculation may be made according to the museum arithmetic, but the expense, one may be sure, by the closest reckoning, must have been very large for such a large article. In addition to the price of Jumbo's passage the fares of 200 steerage passengers had to be paid also who could not be brought on account of the presence of Jumbo in that part of the ship. Jumbo was sea-sick on the passage for a few days and as there was so much of him to be sick, fourteen thousand pounds, he was for a while a good deal under the weather. But he came out all right and as fine as silk.

The Baroness Burdett Coutts ordered several large boxes of sweet meats to be sent on board for Jumbo, and came to see him and shook his trunk, good by, with kind wishes for a safe voyage.

Jumbo is sociable. He does not like to be left alone. If he were left for a very few moments by his keeper he would utter a shrill cry and shake his cage with his head and show his displeasure in many ways; when his keeper returned he would be quiet at once, and put out his trunk and take his arm in a gentle manner, as much as to say I am glad you came back for though I am so large I am lonesome in this strange place, rocking on the billows; so a keeper staid with him continually and so kept him in a mild mood and good natured.

Last Saturday Jumbo was brought into the great central ring of the garden and introduced to the members of the elephant family. He shook trunks politely with each one and surveyed with special tenderness the baby elephant, which gambolled around him. Jumbo touched him gently with his trunk, and looked down upon him thoughtfully, as much as to say, "well you are a small pattern of our folks and I wonder if I were ever such a little shaver as you are." If Jumbo comes your way just take a look at him, for I am sure Mr. Barnum will say it will leave a big blank in anybody's life not to have seen Jumbo. RALEIGH.

The Apathy of our Churches.

The why it is, and the wherefore it should be, that our evangelical churches should occupy their present non-agonistic position, is the subject of remark with the more intelligent and observing among us. There has been a great change in this respect within the past few years. We know that our churches have had great obstacles both from "without" and from "within" to contend with. There has not only been avowed hostility on the part of those who do not believe in the doctrines of the church, but there has been a lamentable lack of consistent and enthusiastic effort on the part of those who profess to belong to its membership and own its authority. These instead of acting as they ought to have done, as an incentive and a stimulus to maintain the conflict, have acted like an opiate and our churches to-day have stacked arms. We don't believe that our churches should occupy an apologetic and mendicant position. Men, society and the world have been made better by the church, and there is no occasion for a minister who is called to a church feeling dependent and obliged to stand with hat in hand begging payment of his salary. The church has a mission, and a minister has a message, and both are necessary and indispensable to the comfort and security of society. We sometimes think that if the spirit of Jesuitism was developed in our churches without its secrecy and cunning, our churches would occupy a very different position than they do to-day.—Braintree Observer.

The Bluebirds.

When a pair of bluebirds succeed in rearing three broods in a season, in the autumn these broods unite and stay with the parents, making a little flock of about fourteen. All the autumn through they keep together, feeding from the same bushes, poke, amyelopsis, and other wild berries, and upon such stray insects as they may find.

The first cold days of December send them to the cedar swamps, where great numbers congregate. Here, too, large flocks of robins keep them company. But each mild day brings the bluebirds from their retreat back to their unforgotten home. And there is nothing more fascinating in bird life than to see the frolics of the young birds and the grave demeanor of the parents. The young visit the various houses in which they were reared, sometimes two or three at the same time, and all the while keeping up their low, sweet twittering, as if conversing.

But in the spring all is changed. The parents tell the young in a very peremptory manner that they most now seek new homes. Sometimes the young are quite persistent about remaining, when the parents at last seem to become exasperated, and drive them fiercely from the premises.—Atlantic.

SATURDAY, MAY 6, 1882.

Building in Quincy.

There appears to be considerable activity shown in the way of building this season, and there is a good demand for houses.

Mr. Henry G. Pratt has nearly completed a large house for Mr. Benjamin F. Curtis; he has also commenced this week a new house on Baxter street for Mr. John E. Drake.

Mr. A. L. Litchfield is building a large two-story house, on Adams place, South Quincy, for Mr. Timothy Deasy.

Mr. Ira Litchfield is erecting a good house on Quincy avenue, near the Wendell estate, for Mr. Alvin Rogers.

Mr. Elias A. Perkins is completing a nice house on Gay street, for the Catholic parsonage.

Mr. Warren D. Higgins has been busy enlarging the residences of Mrs. Lydia Averill, Mrs. M. E. Green and also building a new cottage on the town's land, on Adams street, for Mr. Haley.

Messrs. Bailey & Baxter are busily engaged in erecting a nice house at West Quincy.

Mr. Eliab Ramsdell is remodeling and improving the residence of Capt. James Burr, at Atlantic.

Mr. William Parker has a contract to enlarge and remodel the residence of Mr. James Baxter, on Adams street, at a cost of several thousand dollars.

May Day. Some forty or more ladies and gentlemen of this town, availed themselves of the opportunity of visiting Plymouth on Monday, on an invitation extended by the Universalist Society of that place, to enjoy with them the pleasures of a May-day festival. The day was delightful and the party greatly enjoyed the trip. Everything was done for the happiness of the visitors. Plymouth Rock, Burying Hill and Memorial Hall, where are deposited many relics of the "May Flower," and other ancient memorials, were visited. A gentleman kindly conducted the party to the old burying ground and pointed out all that was attractive. The pure, bracing air gave us a keen appetite, and on repairing to Lyceum Hall, at the noon hour, a dinner was found, and we must truly say that the ladies of Plymouth certainly understand how to feast a hungry crowd. Everything was in abundance and of an excellent quality; and the ladies themselves attended to the wants of the party, and were polite and attentive in every particular.

Sudden Death. Miss Jane M. Pope died very suddenly on Friday night of last week. She had recently recovered from a serious illness and had seemed quite smart for her age. Friday evening she enjoyed very pleasantly with some friends, and retired about ten. After retiring she felt unwell and called to Mrs. Brackett, in whose house she resided, and about twelve o'clock she breathed her last. The cause of her death was heart disease. Miss Pope has left a large circle of friends who sincerely mourn her loss, and great sympathy is felt for her invalid nephew, Mr. Samuel Bass, to whom she has been a devoted and loving aunt, ministering to all his needs in a gentle and affectionate manner.

Deceased. The announcement of the death of Mr. Perez Chubbuck on Wednesday, came rather suddenly to his friends. He had not been in very good health for some time, but was not considered seriously sick until a few days before his death. Mr. Chubbuck was one of the brave volunteer boys in the late rebellion. He enlisted in the first company, the three months' men, from this town and was near Mr. Francis L. Souther the first man killed in the war from Quincy and helped carry him from the field. Mr. Chubbuck came home with the company and reenlisted and served through the entire war. He leaves a widow, also a brother and sister, to mourn his loss.

Hough's Neck. The Linden House at Hough's Neck is to be repaired and arranged for the convenience of summer boarders, and will be opened on Decoration Day. The pleasant and agreeable landlady, Mrs. J. D. Taber, has been improving her time this winter in perfecting herself in the art of cooking, and the result of her training will be seen on her tables the coming season. Mr. Taber has purchased the Albion House estate; he also has a new and handsome beach carriage for the conveyance of passengers, and he intends to make his place attractive to summer visitors.

Gone into Business. We were pleased to read in the Danvers Mirror, the advertisement of Miss Anna W. Goodridge, who has been one of the agreeable and courteous clerks in Miss Hubbard's store for a long time. We take pleasure in recommending this young lady to the patronage of the people of Danvers, and think she has started in the right direction to gain business by patronizing the spicy home journal. We can see that she is prophecting by the experience of her late employer, who always has believed in printer's ink.

Good Time Coming. Mr. Walker's exhibition is one of the things that always delights all Quincy people. Over eighty of our brightest and best children are to give an exhibition of what they have accomplished in the last three months, and from 10 to 12 "all hands" will participate in a social dance. We intend to be there.

Shipping. The following schooners have arrived at the Point this week:—

May 1st, John Stroup, Capt. Sturgis from Philadelphia, with coal to Cyrus Patch.

May 4th, Lucy D., Capt. Handy, from Baltimore; same day Emma C. Rommell, Capt. Lore from Philadelphia; both with coal to Joel F. Sheppard.

A Musical Tournament.

At Milan, Italy, they have recently had a Musical Industrial Exhibition and Competition, under royal patronage, at which were collected and compared, during a period of several months, the largest number and greatest variety of musical instruments, old and new, ever brought together. America was honored in the award to the Mason & Hamlin Organ Company of the highest medal, and the only one in this department. Considering that 250 awards were given, altogether, this distinction was very marked. It is a continuation of the triumphs of these famous organ makers at every one of the World's Fairs for fourteen years; to which there has been no exception.— The

Quincy Point Items.

There was a strike Thursday among some of the workmen employed on the Point road, for a very unique reason. It seems they were spending too much time in filling, lighting and smoking their pipes and commissioner Faxon issued orders that there be no more smoking during work hours, except at noon time, thereupon four men quit work, but one of them resumed Friday morning.

Rev. C. D. R. Meacham of Stoneham who was announced to preach in the Baptist Chapel last Sunday, was prevented from so doing by the death of his mother. Rev. Daniel Jones of the same town supplied in his stead. Rev. G. B. Lawton will preach to-morrow.

Communion services will be held in the Christian Union Church to-morrow afternoon.

Next Wednesday evening at the meeting of the Quincy Point Temperance Association, Rev. G. B. Lawton will give a talk upon geology with illustrations on the blackboard; there will also be readings and a paper upon the Chinese question.

The "old boys" of the Point were on a kind of a rampage Wednesday night and among other things tried to raise an alarm of fire for a tar barrel burning on Germantown point. Go easy, boys.

Officer Faxon's attention is hereby called to the fact that intoxicating liquor is to be had somewhere in the Neck district. Its effects were visible here Tuesday.

The Vulture passed the hose carriage on the way to the West Quincy fire.

Mr. E. W. Baxter is having his champion yacht "Amy" placed in first class condition for the coming season at Maybury's shop.

The action of the Quincy Yacht Club in declining to arrange a single race to start from the Point, will be regretted by many.

The Gamewell Company with which a contract has been made to establish a fire alarm system, has distributed the poles along the line and will erect them next week. The telephone route his also been staked out and the poles will arrive next week and be immediately set.

The Road Commissioners are doing a substantial piece of work on Washington street. The road is being dug out to the depth of fifteen inches and a width of twenty feet and filled in with large stone carefully packed, the whole covered with smaller stone well raked over. While we wish the width had been greater, still what is being done is a great improvement on the old road, and will be of lasting benefit. We notice that Mr. Ewell who has charge of the men, does as much work as any of them and Dr. Faxon drops around frequently to oversee the whole. By the way Doctor ! are you in favor of the street watering arrangement suggested last week? If so bring it before the Board.

There was a Sabbath school concert given in the Baptist Chapel Sunday evening; the attendance was large and the exercises interesting.

Monday evening the Vulture Engine Company held its regular meeting and after settling all bills and dividing what money there was in the treasury among the members, disbanded. A new roll was opened and about twenty-six men and boys signed it and proceeded to elect officers for the ensuing year. We understand some of those who signed the roll will not be approved of by the Engineers on account of their disorderly conduct last year.

A number of the ladies of the Point visited Plymouth Monday and had a fine time.

The Vulture went to the West Quincy fire Tuesday but its services were not needed. Mr. Cashman kindly hauled it home.

One hundred and thirty-four vessels passed through the Point draw during the month of April. H.

West Quincy Items.

On Tuesday morning last, about 4 o'clock, fire was discovered in a dwelling house on Cross street, West Quincy, occupied by Mr. John Cashman. An alarm was immediately given and the Granite Engine was quickly on the spot and soon had a stream on the burning building. The "boys" withthe assistance of the citizens worked with a will and soon had the fire under control, which was very fortunate as a large barn in which Mr. Cashman kept 15 horses stood but about 10 feet from the burning structure. In a short time after the alarm sounded all the fire apparatus of Quincy, and the Hydrant and Hook and Ladder of East Milton were on the spot. The cause of the fire is unknown.

The Granite Engine Company elected their officers on Monday evening. The company is made up of good citizens and we do not hesitate to say, one of the best for miles around; and under the leadership of Captain Barry and his assistants will sustain that reputation the coming year. J.

More Houses Wanted.

For two years the Point District has been full. Any vacant tenement has been quickly taken, and other parties have been constantly watching for other vacancies. The writer now knows of two or three families who are desirous of finding houses at the Point, but none are to be had, and it is hardly supposable that these two or three are all. In other towns, and in other sections of our own town, such a state of things would, and does, stimulate building. What is the reason no houses are being built at the Point? There is abundance of land affording excellent building sites, and at the present low rates of interest, no permanent investment will pay better than money invested in "houses to let." Fifteen or twenty tenements and houses, of from four to ten rooms, and with from 5000 feet to an acre of land, situated any where east of North street, would readily let at rents which would net the owner from 8 to 9 per cent. on his investment. If that number of tenements should be added this year to the present accommodations at the Point, every one would undoubtedly be engaged before they were finished. There is certainly an opportunity for owners of land, (with some ready money for building), to make immediate paying investments. Q. P.

☞ The Governor renominated at a meeting of the Executive Council on Wednesday, J. White Belcher, Esq., Clerk of the Eastern Norfolk District Court, held at Quincy, for a term of five years.

The Park Question.—No. 1.

To the Editors of the Patriot:

As the season of the year has again come when people want to enjoy themselves in the open air the discussion of the park question is in order. In spite of the notice forbidding trespassers,—(a notice, by the way, formerly never seen, but which now confronts you in Quincy whenever you undertake to leave the highway;—a notice which is in itself the best standing argument in favor of a park;)—in spite of this notice great numbers of people now visit the proposed park grounds on the old Greenleaf farm every week, and are so learning to judge for themselves how well adapted those grounds are for the purpose.

As the project has now been under active discussion for a whole year, it may be presumed that all the arguments which can be urged against it have been presented. I propose, therefore, if the Patriot will give me the necessary space, to discuss these arguments, so far as they have reached me, in this and one or two other articles which will follow it. And the first and great argument I have heard advanced relates to the expense involved in the scheme. What I have heard on this subject, especially of late, would be laughable if it were not provoking. It would cost more, some assert, then the town is worth. More then the roads and schools combined. As Col. Sellers would say, "there's millions in it,"—only the wrong way.

Perhaps it was a mistake starting the thing in the first place as a "park" project, instead of as a plan to buy the town a common. There's a great deal with many people in a name. A "common" sounds cheap. New England towns have always had commons. They have never ruined themselves by spending money on them; on the contrary they have found them both useful and profitable as cow-pastures. Then at the proper time these commons, as naturally as possible, turn themselves into parks. This was the way it was in Boston. In such cases the parks never cost any millions, and people escape much anxiety. The Greenleaf farm, therefore, might perhaps more easily have been secured to the future inhabitants of the town as a common. The name park sounds costly. It frightens people.

Possibly all this is true; and yet the actual expense would be just the same whatever the thing was called. It would not only be the same, but, taking twenty-five years together, it would, as near as I can find out, be absolutely nothing at all. On this point, being myself something of a tax-payer in the town, I have been at a good deal of pains to inform myself. I have consulted persons of large experience; submitted the plans to them, and taken their judgment. It has been very uniform.

If the land were once bought and dedicated, so as to be secure for the future,—a mere country-town common,—it would cost the town less than nothing. In return for the interest on the outlay the town would at once get the Woodward Academy, instead of being obliged to wait indefinitely for it. This would be in value far more than the interest on the purchase money would amount to. It would relieve the High School in a way which would be felt at once; obviating all necessity of increased accommodations or teaching-force in that school. So long, therefore, as the land, if once purchased, was kept as it is, the town would be a direct and immediate gainer by its purchase.

For myself, as a friend of the project, I should be perfectly willing to see the land, once it was thus secured, kept as it is for the next ten years. It might be leased for that period as a pasture, and so put beyond the reach of the town to spend anything on it. It would be safe; the necessity is not immediate, and, if the rest of the people of the town can wait for their pleasure ground, the active friends of the project certainly can. For one, therefore, if the land was only made secure for that future need which is now certain to make itself felt, I should be not only willing but glad to see the town put it out of its own power, through a lease, to spend anything in developing a park for ten years to come. Let Quincy, however, at least secure a common while it yet can.

Beyond all this, however, the whole talk of the immense cost of a park such as is proposed, is contrary to all experience. Those most acquainted with the subject scout at it. Why should a public pleasure ground cost so much more than a private one? We have had in Quincy, and are now more and more having, some experience of private grounds. They do not cost such immense sums. The owners somehow are not ruined. But a public ground, we are solemnly told, would bankrupt the town. On the contrary I insist, after the most careful examination I can make, that, as I have before said, taking twenty-five years together a park would, through increased valuations, more than pay for itself. And in this I am fully borne out by both experience and authority.

Why, as every one in Quincy knows, the land along the turnpike and about the proposed park grounds, has actually gone begging for buyers for thirty-five years. It is begging now. Houses built in that vicinity ten years ago have never been let. Once let drives be laid out and park improvements begin there, and a revolution in values would follow. That neighborhood would become the best residence part of the town,—what Adams street, beyond the Beal's house, is now. It does not take many modern residences and their improvements to foot up to half a million dollars; and the tax on that sum, at the present rate, is $6000 a year, or $150,000 in twenty-five years.

The way to make the burden of taxation light is to invite wealth to the town. To do this the town must be made attractive as a place of residence. Small cheapness is often very bad economy; and public spirit is sometimes a good investment. So far as being a barren expense and pure additional burden, a park, such as the Merry-Mount Association described and recommended in their recent report, would, if entered upon actively this very month, prove the best advertisement and the greatest inducement to residence the town of Quincy ever put forth. It would be money in the treasury of the town, instead of money out of it. And any one, I am convinced, who examines into the matter with an unprejudiced mind, will be forced to come to this conclusion.

East Milton Items.

Last Saturday morning death entered our village and took from our midst Mrs. Martin, wife of Mr. J. Wesley Martin. She leaves a large circle of relatives and friends who will greatly miss her, and to whom we extend our most heartfelt sympathy in this their time of bereavement.

It is rumored that the Orthodox Church is to be remodeled and renovated.

The Ladies' Sewing Circle met last Tuesday evening with Mrs. Isadore Baxter. As usual all enjoyed a pleasant time.

The town has resolved to extend the the advantages of the fire alarm system through its limits. From ten to fifteen boxes are to be put in place, a fire bell provided, and the system thoroughly organized. The material is already on the ground and the work in progress.

Notwithstanding the inclement weather of Thursday evening, April 29th, the fair and apron sale, given under the auspices of the Ladies' Sewing Circle, proved a perfect success; the snug little sum of fifty dollars being cleared. The farce given by the young ladies of the circle reflected great credit on them, and we hope that they will not let it be long before treating us to another of the same kind.

Our little village has now had every sign of Spring excepting the organ grinder's annual announcement, which we hope will be omitted this year.

Every resident of East Milton was presented last Saturday with a copy of the first edi[illegible] of the Milton News, a weekly sheet which we hope will be generously patronized.

Our Sunday School has met with a loss in the death of little Ned Eaton, one of East Milton's brightest and best little boys. Thistledown.

Boston Correspondence.

Mr. Al. Watts, dealer in birds and dogs, had a severe struggle with a year-old female leopard, last Saturday evening. He visited his store to tend the fires for the night, and on opening the door as he passed in, some large animal brushed by him; thinking that one of his dogs had broken his chain, he ordered him to lie down. By the light of the street lamp he preceived that the supposed dog was a leopard which had escaped from her cage. While Mr. Watts was thinking what course to pursue, the brute with a low growl, sprang upon him. Mr. Watt managed to free his arms from her claws and seized the brute by the throat; after a contest of fifteen minutes the leopard showed signs of weakening, and he dragged her to her cage, and keeping a tight hold of her throat succeeded in thursting her inside. Mr. Watts was badly cut by the brute, but hastily righting things he repaired to his home, where with assistance his painful wounds were dressed.

Mr. John Stetson will run three theatres next season; two in New York and one in Boston.

Up to May 2d, the subscription list of the Boston Young Men's Christian Union building fund amounted to over $67,000 of the $70,000 called for.

Surprise Birthday Party.

On Monday evening last a large number of the friends of John Cavanagh, of Braintree, took possession of his residence, it being the anniversary of his birth. During the evening Mr. Cavanagh was made the recipient of an elegant reclining chair, the presentation being made by Rev. D. O'Callaghan of South Boston. Addresses were also made by Rev. T. J. Danahy, of Quincy, Hon. A. C. Drinkwater, of Braintree, and Mr. John Dee, of Quincy; each of whom paid well-merited tribute to his high standing as an Irishman, a Catholic, a father, and an American citizen. After the presentation the evening was spent in dancing, singing, and games usual on such occasions. The singing of the Misses McDonnell of Quincy, was an important feature of the evening, and was rapturously applauded. As the clock warned the party that the anniversary was over and another day begun, the party separated, after wishing Mr. Cavanagh many happy returns of the day.

FINE
SPRING CLOTHING.

Reference is made herein to a few leading articles in our spring stock. Gentlemen looking for fine goods for present use can be supplied forthwith with suits or single garments of a quality entirely different from ordinary Ready-made Clothing, at fair prices for first-class work.

SPRING SUITS from genuine Scotch and other choice material of our own importation. Also, from many novelties and fresh standard light-weight woolens from leading American mills. The assortment is large, and comprises Business and Walking Suits of the latest styles made for the season in our own work shops, and designed specially for parties who require the best possible substitute for custom work.

DRESS SUITS from imported broadcloths and doeskins, made with the greatest care in the dull business season, averaging better than the general run of dress garments made to measure, and at 25 per cent. less cost.

WORSTED GOODS. We have in stock also Morning and Walking Suits, in black French Worsteds, in diagonal and basket weaves, that are very neat and useful for wear upon nearly all occasions, without being too expensive.

SPRING OVERCOATS, of fine selected fabrics, with silk linings throughout, together with a graded assortment at less cost—all well made and handsomely trimmed and calculated for excellent service.

Our experience of over thirty years in Boston in manufacturing exclusively first-class clothing, enables us to offer peculiar advantages to our customers in many respects.

TWO HOUSE LOTS AT AUCTION,
— ON —
COPELAND STREET, - WEST QUINCY.

WILL be sold at Public Auction, on MONDAY, May 8th, 1882, at 4 o'clock P. M., two House Lots on Copeland street, West Quincy, belonging to Patrick Sullivan, 2d. The one adjoining his new residence has a measurement of about fifty feet on the street. The other lot adjoins the residence of Mr. Linton, and measures about fifty feet front and one hundred and fifty feet deep. One lot is under cultivation. The situation is on the main thoroughfare, within five minutes' walk of the West Quincy depot, and near Schools, Stores and Churches.

This sale offers great inducements to parties about seeking a lot of land for building purposes, as these are the last that can be had in and around this vicinity.

Terms liberal and sale positive.

P. S. The auctioneer has a large 2 1-2 story house containing 16 rooms, with three acres of land and a new stable, which he will sell for less than its value if disposed of within two weeks. Enquire of him at his office in Boston, or at Quincy, Mass.

Real Estate Sales.

There appears to be more demand for real estate, and prices are upward. Quincy Point, West Quincy, Atlantic and Wollaston are all showing favorable signs of growth. Twenty to thirty thousand dollars worth of property have changed hands within a few weeks:—

John R. Graham has purchased nine acres of excellent land nearly opposite his residence on Washington street, and adjoining Jonathan Baxter's. The land belonged to the heirs of Thompson Baxter, and about $2200 was the price paid.

The residence of the late Dea. Geo. Baxter on Washington street, corner of River, has been sold to Mrs. Sarah J. (Worcester) Leonard, for about $2000.

Daniel F. Arnold has sold to Matthew H. Oliver, eight acres on Arnold place, adjoining land of the late Thompson Baxter, for about $3500.

Matthew H. Oliver has sold his residence, corner of Mill and Pond streets, to Charles Loring, for about $3300.

The beautiful place, owned in former years by the late Eldad Worcester, has been purchased by Capt. Mouland, for about $8000. It will not be many years before Quincy Point will be the prettiest part of the town. It has the best deep water privileges of anywhere along the shores of Norfolk County, and now only wants some easy, cheap and handy conveyance, such as steam or horse cars.

Joseph W. Lombard has sold a number of house lots on Copeland street, West Quincy, by auction, within a few days to the following persons:—

To Margaret F. Farrell, about one-eighth of acre for $120.

To Mary Rollou, a similar lot for $130.

To Charles Herbert, another lot for $135.

To Simon Dell, a lot for $135.

To Thomas Matthews, a nice lot for $380.

To Ellen M. Denneen, about one-quarter of an acre on Common street, for $250.

To Telles Stone, a lot on Common street for $87.50.

To Barnard O'Neill, a fine lot on the same street, $235.

Mr. J. D. Taber has purchased the Albion House at Hough's Neck, which was run last season by Dailey Brothers.

For the Patriot.

At Last.

Quincy, at its last annual meeting, committed itself to support at least two very important acts, noteworthy each in itself, but combined cannot fail to exert an influence in the minds of all classes of citizens, who favor progress, even in the smallest degree.

First, the "No License Act," setting aside for a period, at least, the wholesale traffic in the rum interest, with a gentle reminder to all persistent law breakers that they had better look for other and more inviting fields to carry on their cursed traffic.

The other and quite as important act, was the creating of the road commission. While the three gentlemen who represent this new but important branch are on trial, it is to be hoped that their acts will prove commendable to all who believe that good streets are very proper adjuncts in way of creating a favorable impression as to the interest manifested and the progress desired by the town. The manner of labor on the streets as heretofore conducted presented not one noteworthy feature that would have a tendency to create favorably, impressions upon the minds of citizens practically inclined.

The method of placing such important work in the hands of incompetent persons and then subjecting them to less efficient help, whose sole aim seemed to indicate that the least amount of work performed in a given time was the principal object of such labor. For the most part, under the present management, the "tip cart brigade" and those who indulge in a "quiet smoke by the way," got suddenly left, as well they should.

There are no sufficient reasons why men who work for the town, under proper foremen, should not be subjected to the same requirements and expect to perform the same amount of labor as when doing service for any private citizen. That we have live, earnest and practical men at the head of this department is very evident from the manner in which the work is being carried on in different sections of the town, the results of which are potent to all observers. And, in as much as they consider time and pay subordinate to the interest they manifest in the general welfare of the town, the citizens cannot act less generous than by word or deed give them the support the cause demands.

By all means let us have suitable and inviting approaches to our town, and as the streets are improved upon throughout, they cannot but impress favorably all who have occasion to pass over them. Let the good work go on.

May 3d, 1882. H.

THIRTY YEARS IN TRADE. Messrs. Macullar, Parker & Company, the clothiers, completed their thirtieth year as a business firm last February. The Transcript, and other dailies, have printed interesting reviews of the changes, by removal and otherwise, that have marked the career of this Boston house. The old concern has made a good record in all these years since 1852. It fills a certain place in the clothing trade in a way that inspires confidence in its productions and in its statements. It makes a certain grade of goods, and it has no other kind to sell at any price. In this way people know just what they are buying, and customers who are not judges of cloth and workmanship have something to rely upon besides their own discernment.

Washington Letter.

A Little Color in Congress. The Public Printing. A Big Whiskey Lobby.

WASHINGTON, May 2, 1882.

The Republican majority in the House has been increased by two votes. Mr. Lynch, colored, has been given the seat occupied by General Chalmers, of Mississippi, thus reducing the Democratic vote by one, and adding one to the Republican vote. Mr. Lynch is now the only representative of the colored race in Congress—the only one that has been in Congress since Senator Bruce, of Mississippi, left the Senate, more than a year ago. The newly seated congressman is a mulatto of very light color, with a face that is decidedly more Caucasian than African in its features. He argued his own case with great ability, and received the entire vote of the Republican majority, and one Democratic vote, that of Mr. Ellis, of Louisiana, and was sworn in with great demonstration of applause from the Republican side of the House. The Democrats lose one of their readiest and most brilliant debaters in General Chalmers.

POST-OFFICE APPROPRIATION BILL.

The House, on Saturday, adopted the report of the Conference Committee on the post-office appropriation bill. A number of members were very decided in the expression that, unless the great cities were to share with New York the benefit of this service, the appropriation should be struck out altogether. Mr. Robeson, in the course of his remarks, said very distinctly, that he voted for the conference report with the understanding that the other great cities beside New York were not to be deprived of their share of the appropriation, and if the Postmaster-General should do this he would violate the spirit and intent of the law making the appropriation. Mr. Springer favored appropriation for the great railroads, but he did not add that two of the great railroads only have, up to this time, had any appreciable share of the appropriation. Mr. Robeson's remarks were drawn out by a statement of Mr. Caswell that the Postmaster-General did not intend to make any new starting points, but to hold on to New York as the great centre of the universe.

THE PUBLIC PRINTING.

A new public printer has been appointed, and this is a local event in Washington that is considered of quite as much importance, by fifteen hundred employes and thrice that number that are dependent upon them, as the appointment of a cabinet officer. Important changes are expected in the management and personnel of the office. Since the war, the public printing has cost the Government not less than $50,000,000. The Government printing office is by far the largest establishment of the kind in the world, and a more careful management of it would save more than a million annually to the Government. The main reason of the immense outlay lies in the fact of the practice of Congress ordering the printing of voluminous and utterly worthless documents, that find their way, by the cart load, to the pulp mills.

THE WHISKEY LOBBY.

The whiskey merchant princes from all the large cities have been hovering about Congress for weeks, urging the passage of a bill to extend indefinitely the time that whiskey can remain in bond. By means and methods best known to wealthy lobbyists, they have made such headway that they claim a majority in the Senate in favor of their bill. The effect of this measure will be to reduce very seriously the revenue of the Government. It is believed that the President will veto the bill if it shall be passed in the shape desired by the Whiskey Lobby. ADAMS.

District Court, Quincy.

Only a few criminal cases have been before the court this week:

John Kiley of Randolph for breaking and disturbing the peace. Found guilty and sent to the House of Correction for two months.

Mr. Kiley was also fined $3 and costs for an assault. He appealed and in default of bail was committed.

Clinton Pope, of Weymouth, for an assault on his wife. Discharged on payment of costs.

Farmers' Wives.

It is an evident fact that farmers' wives are afflicted with many diseases which are the result of overwork. They are constantly on one ceaseless routine of toil from daylight at morning until late at night. No change, no relaxation, no rest! Farmers should note this fact, and be forewarned before it is too late. It is astonishing what an amount of labor the wives of farmers perform. Many of them get up and have breakfast ready before their husbands are out of bed. Then it is work, work, work, until near midnight, their minds during the time being constantly occupied with their duties, and with thinking of how the food is to be supplied, when the washing and ironing is to be done, when time can be spared to scrub the floor, how the children are to be clothed and kept tidy, and innumerable other things not necessary to mention, all of which combine to overwork and break down the strongest woman in the land. In no case is it safe to be continuously thinking upon any one thing, and in cases where the brain has been weakened by too great a strain upon it, thereby producing insanity, epilepsy, vertigo, hysterics, female weakness, general debility, and a multitude of other diseases, the remedy is Rest and a few bottles of Dr. S. A. Richmond & Co.'s Samaritan Nervine. It acts directly upon the nervous centres and invigorates and strengthens the whole system. Many ladies have refrained from using Samaritan Nervine on account of an existing prejudice against advertised medicines. Let us ask a question: Are you prejudiced against sewing machines because you saw them advertised, or can you doubt the ingenuity and skill required in their invention? Again, would you refuse to insure your house because the company advertised that it had paid millions of dollars in losses and had yet a capital of several millions left? Do such advertisements shake your confidence and create prejudice? Then why refuse to credit the testimony of those who have found Samaritan Nervine to be all that is claimed for it in overcoming those ailments peculiar to your sex? The following statement speaks for itself:

Fairfield, Lenawee Co., Mich., }
April 25, 1881. }

Dr. Richmond—Dear Sir: This is to certify that my wife had fits for thirty-five years. They would last her for about one hour and sometimes longer. I happened to hear of your medicine, and sent for some of it. She had no more fits after she took the first dose. She is now permanently cured, and her health is a great deal better than it has been for twenty years or more. You are entirely at liberty to use her picture and this testimonial in any manner which you please, and may sign my name to it. We owe you this much at least for what you have done for her.

Yours truly, HENRY CLARK.

A Run-down Farm Restored.

Mr. Welcome Thayer, a successful farmer of East Blackstone, Mass., reported last fall the results of twenty years' experience with phosphate:—

"I have used Bradley's Phosphate this year upon my corn and potatoes, using it only in the hill, with a light coat of manure. My corn is the best in town, being very heavy; and most of it has two or three ears on a stalk. The potatoes also have proved a good crop, in spite of the blight which has afflicted the potatoes in this section. I consider this Phosphate to be the best that is made. I have used it for twenty years, and it has been equally good, and given me perfect satisfaction every year. I took a run-down farm in 1866, on which I could only keep three cows and a horse that year. Now, I keep on the same farm sixteen cows and three horses, and I have not bought much manure of any kind excepting Bradley's Phosphate."

Springtime and Harvest.

BY ETHELYN.

When spring is here with its verdant green,
When the winter snows are no longer seen,
And the bluebirds warbling from tree to tree,
Ever reminds me I'm faithful to thee.
The lilac's blossom is welcome now,
And the farmer is busy with harrow and plough,
No doubts of the promise of sure return,
For the seed he sows an abundance will earn.
I watch the sun rise o'er the hill,
And I know when to look for the sunset's gleam,
So the season will pass with its care and joy,
And the end will bring peace without alloy.
When winter's carpet of dullest brown
Or the clearer or colder of snow's purest tint,
Is changed to one of such brilliant green,
We look, nor can wonder at things unseen.
When the heart released from its barriers here,
Is free to feel and to know what is near:
The joys and the promise of the future is known,
And only the good and the faithful we own.

Farm and Garden.

Strawberries.—When to Plant.

The above question is often asked, and its answer must depend upon circumstances. One fact about the strawberry plant should be known, and this will enable each one to decide for himself. The plants that are sent out by nurserymen are those that were formed last year by the runners from old plants taking root in the soil of the bed. If these are taken up in the usual way and planted in a new bed—it may be after the lapse of several days—they require a whole season to get established and become sufficiently strong to bear a crop. If these plants are set this spring they will bear a crop next spring; if such plants are set next autumn, they will require all of next season to grow in, and while they may produce a few berries, they will give no real crop until the following year. Such plants are more expensive than others, and if a crop of fruit is wanted next spring, it is better to set out the plants now. Making the rows two feet apart, and setting the plants one foot apart in the row, as a general rule, is best, but there may be reasons for putting them further apart, as where land is plenty, and the horse cultivator is to be used.—American Agriculturist for May.

Grafting Stone Fruit.

To be successful in grafting trees that bear stone fruit, the work should be done quite early in the season. A scion in an apple or pear tree, may be set with success after the buds on the tree are broken open, if the scions be cut in March; but to set scions in a cherry tree, after the buds have commenced to break open, would in very rare instances be followed with success. A cherry tree should be grafted in March or early in April, if the tree be large, or even medium size; very small trees that are grafted just below the surface of the ground, may be grafted later, if the scions be cut in March, and packed in moist earth, and kept in a cool place.

A large peach tree is more difficult to graft with success than a cherry tree; but small peach trees may be grafted, and the grafts made to live with considerable certainty, if grafted low enough to permit covering the lower part of the scion with earth.

The plum is less difficult to graft, the scions are usually in a thrifty condition, and the stocks are more hardy, and the wounds heal over with more readiness if the black knots are kept cut off.—Ploughman.

Anecdotes.

"How is it, my dear, that you have never kindled a flame in the bosom of any man?" said an old lady to her niece.

To which the young lady replied: "The reason, dear aunt, is, as you well know, that I am not a good match."

"Well, Andrew," a gentleman remarked to a Scotchman who, with his brother, was the only remnant of a narrow sect, "I suppose you and Sandy are the only bodies who will get to heaven, now?"

"Deed, sir," replied Andrew, shaking his head, "an' I'm no' so sure about Sandy."

An Oil City child was observed to be occupied an unusual length of time in saying her evening prayer. In reply to questions she told her father that she had been saying the Lord's prayer over twice.

"You see," she exclaimed, "in the morning I have to hurry to get to school in time, and don't have time to pray, and so I just say it over twice at night."

It was a green countryman who wandered up the State House stairs the other day, and inquired of some loungers near the doorways of the House,

"Is this the insane asylum?"

"Oh, yes," was the reply.

"Can I see the inmates?"

"Certainly."

"Where are they?"

"Right in there," pointing within the doors where the house was in session.

"Well, I wanted to see them, and they told me down street I could find them here."

A gentleman, accompanied by a favorite dog, visited the studio of a rising artist. There was a picture on the easel, and the dog began to bark furiously at it.

"Nature may be relied upon, after all," said the gentleman. "The best evidence of the faithfulness with which you have painted that dog in the background is the earnestness with which my dog barks at him."

"But that isn't a dog," said the artist, flushing; "it's a cow."

The gentleman was nonplussed for a moment, but he quickly replied.

"Well, the dog's eyes are better than mine; he never did like cows."

PERRY DAVIS' VEGETABLE PAIN KILLER

A Never-Failing Cure for Burns, Scalds, Bruises, Cuts, Sores, etc.

After forty years of trial, PERRY DAVIS' PAIN KILLER stands unrivaled. It is safe! It acts immediately! It never fails!

Editor of the St. John (N.B.) News, says: In flesh wounds, aches, pains, sores, etc., it is the most effectual remedy we know of. No family should be without a bottle of it for a single hour.

From the Cincinnati Dispatch: We have seen its magic effects, and know it to be a good article.

From I. S. Potter, U. S. Consul at Crefeld, Rhenish Prussia: After long years of use, I am satisfied it is positively efficient as a healing remedy for wounds, bruises, and sprains.

W. W. Sharper, Valdosta, Ga., says: It is a panacea for all bruises and burns.

From R. W. Adams, Saco, Me.: It gave me immediate relief.

S. Lewis says: In forty years' use it never has failed me.

W. W. Lum, Nicholville, N. Y., says: I use your PAIN KILLER frequently. It relieves pain and soreness, and heals wounds like magic.

J. W. Dee says: For scalds and burns it has no equal.

PERRY DAVIS' PAIN KILLER is not a new untried remedy. For forty years it has been in constant use; and those who have used it the longest are its best friends. Its success is entirely because of its merit. Every family should have a bottle ready for use. Much pain and heavy doctors' bills may often be saved by prompt application of the PAIN KILLER. Unlike most medicines, it is perfectly safe even in the hands of a child. Try it once thoroughly, and it will prove its value. Your druggist has it at 25c., 50c., and $1.00 per bottle.

Waste.

CONTINUED.

If this grain were thrown into the ocean, everybody would cry out at the terrible waste. Made into liquor, it is worse than wasted; for while it does no one any good, it brings many people much harm. To say that the whole of this six hundred millions of money is lost would not be true. The rumsellers keep half this money, and pay about fifty millions of dollars to the government in taxes, which returns but a small part of the great sum which the rumselling business costs the government. The man who last buys the liquor loses its whole cost, since he has nothing to show for his money. But notice, it is not the mere money that is lost,—there is as much money in the country as before the liquor was made—it is the grain and fruit and labor that are lost, to the value of three hundred millions of dollars every year. There remains nothing to show for them only the liquor, and that is worth nothing.

Some people talk of better markets for grain, and farmers sometimes ask, "What shall we do with all the grain, without the distilleries to use it up?" A very good reply was once given, "feed the drunkard's wife and children with it; they have gone hungry long enough."

If the drinker stopped drinking he would soon be able to buy it for them. People sometimes fail to understand this matter, because they do not stop to think that in making bargains there are two values, and if these are equal, there is no loss on either side. A man who pays two bushels of wheat for a pair of shoes has them to wear, while some one else has the grain to eat, and both are satisfied. If he pays money it is all the same; the money will buy wheat. So one has the shoes to wear and the other grain to eat, while each goes to work to earn more. But, if he pays either his grain or his two dollars for the drink, he gets nothing to wear nor to eat; nothing that will help him earn more money. When the drink is gone, he has nothing good to show for it. It is a total loss to him. His money has gone to the rumseller, who pays one-half of it for more drink to sell, and keeps the other half to help him grow rich. We will put it in this form: First case, shoemaker gets $2; customer gets one pair of shoes. Second case, saloon-keeper gets $2; customer gets one headache. Here we see in each case two values. In the first both values are good, and the bargain is fair. In the second the headache is worthless, the customer is cheated. To say that his two dollars are lost is exactly what we would say in the other case if the shoes were worth nothing. When we say that three hundred millions of dollars are lost every year, we mean that so much grain and fruit and labor are lost.

We express the value in money. If sold they would have brought so much money; or, they cost so much money when the drink-maker bought them. The fruits and grains have stood and decayed till they are spoiled. They are worth nothing, because they can do no one any good. The drinkers also lose more than the cost of the drink. They loose time in drinking and its effects in sickness, and in indolence. The value of the time so lost is about equal to what they pay for the drink, or about six hundred millions of dollars every year. Try the experiment of calculating the time lost by some men of your acquaintance in that way, with perhaps the time of teams waiting while they drink and are unfitted for usefulness, or business kindred in some other way. This added to the three hundred millions of dollars, makes nine-hundred millions of dollars probably lost to this country every year. Now add to this three hundred millions of dollars more as the cost of accidents, the trials and punishment of criminals, the shortening of human life, and many other things we have not room to mention, it makes the sum of twelve hundred millions of dollars lost throughout the country every year on account of the drink. Put it thus:

First cost of the drink,	$300,000,000
Cost of time to drinker,	600,000,000
Cost of accidents, etc.,	300,000,000
Total,	$1,200,000,000

An Impending Fate.

An Interesting Chapter from the Life of a Prominent Bostonian.

[Boston Globe.]

The readers of this paper were more or less amazed at a most remarkable statement of one of our leading citizens which appeared in yesterday's issue. So unusual were the circumstances connected with it, and so much comment did it occasion on the street and in social circles, that a representative of this paper was commissioned to investigate its details and verify its facts. The article referred to was a statement made by Mr. B. F. Larrabee, of the New York and Boston Dispatch Express Company, whose office is on Arch street. Mr. Larrabee was found by the newspaper man in his private office, and on being questioned said:

"Well, sir, logically I have been dead, but really I am as you can see me. A little over a year ago I was taken sick. My trouble was not severe at first and I thought it was the result of a slight cold. Somehow I felt unaccountably tired at times although I took abundance of sleep. Then, again, I had dull and strange pains in various parts of my body. My appetite was good one day and I had none whatever the next, and my head pained me more or less much of the time. A while afterward I noticed much that was peculiar about the fluids I was passing, and that a sediment, scum and a strange accumulation appeared in it. Still I did not realize that these things meant anything serious, and I allowed the illness to run along until on the 28th day of October I fell prostrate while walking along Tremont street. I was carried home and did not go out of the house until the middle of December. I then went down town and attempted to attend to my business until the 13th of last January, when I was taken with a very severe relapse. My symptoms were terrible. I was fearfully bloated; I suffered severe pains in all parts of my body and it was almost impossible to get my breath. For six days I never laid down and never slept. I was constantly attended by my regular physician, Doctor Johnson, and Doctor Bowditch also came to see me nearly every day. There was no doubt that I was suffering from Bright's disease of the kidneys in its worst form and last stages, accompanied by other troubles in my liver and heart. In spite, however, of the skill of the physicians, I kept growing worse and finally they tapped my side in the vicinity of the heart, taking away forty-six ounces of water. This relieved me for the time, but I soon became as bad as before. Then the doctor gave me up entirely, declared I could not live more than twenty-four hours and my daughter, who was residing in Paris, was telegraphed for. Still I lingered along for several weeks, far more dead than alive, but never giving up hope. One night—it was on the 20th of April, I very well remember—my attendant, who was reading the paper to me, began an article which described my disease and sufferings exactly. It told how some severe cases of Bright's disease had been cured, and so clearly and sensibly did it state the case that I determined to try the means of cure which it described. So I sent my man to the drug store, procured a bottle of the medicine, unknown to my physicians and friends, and took the first dose at 10 o'clock. At that time I was suffering intensely. I could not sleep; I had the short breaths and could scarcely get any air into my lungs. I was terribly bloated from head to foot, and the motion of my heart was irregular and painful. The next morning I was able to breathe freely; the pain began to leave me and the bloating decreased. I continued to take the medicine, and to-day, sir, I am as well as I ever was in my life, and wholly owing to the wonderful, almost miraculous power of Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure. I do not know what this medicine is made of, or anything else about it, but I know it saved my life when I was given up by the doctors and had really been dead for weeks; that it has kept me in perfect health ever since and has cured many of my friends to whom I have recommended it. There are a number of very remarkable cases in Lynn and Salem, as well as in this city, that it has cured. My recovery is so remarkable that it has excited much attention, and physicians as well as others have investigated it thoroughly. I am glad they have, for I feel that the results of such a wonderful cure should be known to the thousands in all parts of the land who are suffering from troubles of the kidneys, liver or heart, in some of their many dangerous forms."

The representative of the press thanked Mr. Larrabee for his very frank and clear statement, and was about to leave the office when a gentleman stepped up to him and inquired if he were seeking information about Mr. Larrabee's sickness and recovery. The scribe replied that he was, whereupon the gentleman said:

"And so am I, and I have come all the way from Chicago for that very purpose. Kidney troubles seem to be alarmingly increasing all over the country, and I have a very near relative who is afflicted much as Mr. Larrabee was. I have been to see the physicians of whom Mr. Larrabee speaks, and I tell you, sir, it is simply wonderful."

"What did they say?" asked the man of news.

"Say! why, sir, they fully confirm everything Mr. Larrabee has stated. I went to see Dr. D. A. Johnson, at 20 Worcester street. He was absent when I called, and so I stepped into the Commonwealth hotel, where Mr. Larrabee was living at the time of his sickness. Messrs. Brugh & Carter are the proprietors, and I asked them about Mr. Larrabee's case. Mr. Brugh pointed to the electric annunciator and said, 'why for weeks and weeks every time that bell rang I said: That means the death of Mr. Larrabee. No one around the hotel ever dreamed that he would recover and when the doctors would come down from his room they would shake their heads and say there was no hope. The arrangements for the funeral were made and his recovery was simply a miracle.

I then called on Dr. Johnson who said that Mr. Larrabee's case was a very remarkable one. He was his family physician and expected his death every hour for a number of weeks and never called to see him during that time, but he was prepared for it. The doctor said the recovery was due to Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure, and if he had friends, male or female, troubled with Albumen or any kidney troubles he should certainly advise them to use this remedy. Dr. Johnson said kidney difficulties are more common than most people think and that many symptoms which are supposed to be other diseases arise from the kidneys. He said that ladies after gestation are specially subject to albuminous troubles which require prompt attention.

Well, I then came down and called on Dr. H. Ingersoll Bowditch on Boylston street. The old doctor was inclined to be reticent but fully confirmed all I had previously learned. He had attended Mr. Larrabee, and supposed him beyond all hope, and he was afterwards restored, as he said, by Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure.

I next went to see Dr. Melville E. Webb, at the Hotel Cluny, for you see I was determined to be thorough in the matter. I found Dr. Webb a most clear-headed and well-informed gentleman, and he said:

"I know of Mr. Larrabee's case from having thoroughly investigated it as a medical director of a Life Insurance company, and it is one of the most remarkable cases I have ever met. Mr. Larrabee had all the manifestations of a complication of diseases, and in their worst forms. He had albumen and casts in the urine, and a terribly diseased liver and spleen. Indeed, he was so bad that he threw himself upon the floor, and with his head upon a hassock, struggled for breath. It was on the night when he was so bad and when all his medical advisers had long given him up that he began using Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure. The next morning at 10 o'clock he was able to breathe freely, and has been ever since. I subjected him to the most thorough examination possible, after his recovery, and 'I can't find out about him.' His kidneys, liver, lungs and heart are perfectly well and sound. I can only add that, from what I have seen, I would unhesitatingly recommend this remedy.

The conclusions from the statements above made which come to the newspaper man as well as the general public, must be two-fold. First that a modern miracle of healing has been performed in our midst, and that, too, by the simplest means and one which is within the reach of every one. It should be remembered that Bright's disease is not usually a sudden complaint. Its beginnings are slight and its growth slow. The symptoms by which it may be detected are different with different persons, no two people usually having the same. This fact was manifest in the case of Mr. Larrabee, and he had no idea of the terrible complaint which had attacked him until it became fixed upon him. Secondly, testimonials of such high character and so out-spoken in tone, conclusively prove the value of the remedy and its superior nature to the proprietary articles with which the public have been flooded. "The greater includes the less," and the remedy which has been proven so valuable and has saved a life after it was brought down to death's door, must unquestionably be certain in all minor troubles which are so disastrous unless taken in time.

SAMARITAN

NERVINE

SAMARITAN NERVINE

Cures Epileptic Fits, Spasms, Convulsions, St. Vitus Dance, Vertigo, Hysterics, Insanity, Apoplexy, Paralysis, Rheumatism, Neuralgia and all Nervous Diseases. This infallable remedy will positively eradicate every species of Nervous Derangement, and drive them away from whence they came, never to return again. It utterly destroys the germs of disease, by neutralizing the hereditary taint or poison in the system, and thoroughly eradicates the disease, and utterly destroys the cause.

SAMARITAN NERVINE

Cures Female Weakness, General Debility, Leucorrhea or Whites, Painful Menstruation, Ulceration of the Uterus, Internal Heat, Gravel, Inflammation of the Bladder, Irritability of the Bladder. For Wakefulness at Night there is no better remedy. During the change of life no female should be without it. It quiets the Nervous system and gives rest, comfort and nature's sweet sleep.

SAMARITAN NERVINE

Cures Alcoholism, Drunkenness and the habit of Opium Eating. These degrading habits are by far the worst evils that have ever befallen suffering humanity. Thousands die annually from these noxious drugs. The drunkard drinks liquor not because he likes it, but for the pleasure of drinking and treating his friends, little thinking that he is on his road to ruin. Like the Opium Eater, he first uses the drug in small quantities as a harmless antidote. The soothing influence of the drug takes strong hold upon its victim, leading him on to his own destruction. The habits of Opium Eating and Liquor Drinking are precisely what eating is to alimentiveness, as over eating first inflames the stomach, which redoubles its cravings until it paralyzes both the stomach and appetite. So every drink of liquor or dose of opium, instead of satisfying, only adds to its fierce fires, until it consumes the vital force and then itself. Like the gluttonous tape-worm, it cries, "Give, give, give!" but never enough until its own rapacity devours itself. Samaritan Nervine gives instant relief in all such cases. It produces sleep, quiets the nerves, builds up the nervous system, and restores body and mind to a healthy condition.

SAMARITAN NERVINE

Cures Nervous Dyspepsia, Palpitation of the Heart, Asthma, Bronchitis, Scrofula, Syphilis, diseases of the Kidneys, and all diseases of the urinary organs. Nervous debility, caused by the indiscretions of youth, permanently cured by this invaluable remedy. To you young, middle-aged and old men, who are covering your sufferings as with a mantle, by silence, look up, you can be saved by timely efforts, and make ornaments to society, and jewels in the crown of your Maker, if you will. Do not keep this a secret longer, until it saps your vitals, and destroys both body and soul. If you are thus afflicted, take DR. RICHMOND'S Samaritan Nervine. It will restore your shattered nerves, arrest premature decay, impart tone and energy to the whole system.

Nothing Short of Unmistakable Benefits

Conferred upon tens of thousands of sufferers could originate and maintain the reputation which AYER'S SARSAPARILLA enjoys. It is a compound of the best vegetable alteratives, with the Iodides of Potassium and Iron,—all powerful, blood-making, blood-cleansing and life-sustaining—and is the most effectual of all remedies for scrofulous, mercurial, or blood disorders. Uniformly successful and certain, it produces rapid and complete cures of Scrofula, Sores, Boils, Humors, Pimples, Eruptions, Skin Diseases and all disorders arising from impurity of the blood. By its invigorating effects it always relieves and often cures Liver Complaints, Female Weaknesses and Irregularities, and is a potent renewer of waning vitality. For purifying the blood it has no equal. It tones up the system, restores and preserves the health, and imparts vigor and energy. For forty years it has been in extensive use, and is to-day the most available medicine for the suffering sick.

For sale by all druggists.

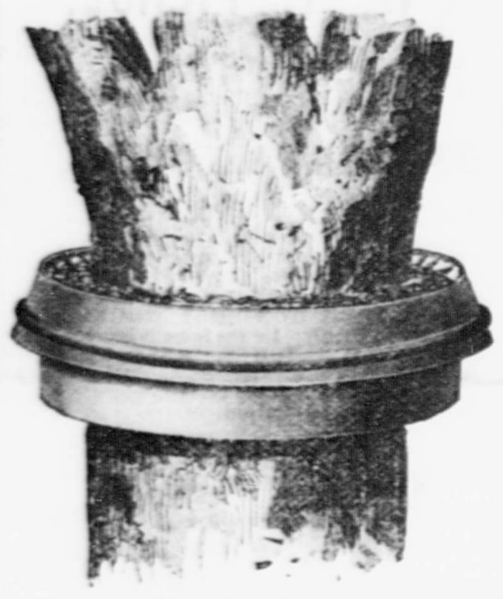
THOMAS' OIL TROUGH TREE PROTECTORS.

(Patented August 9, 1881.)

This Improved Protector effectually protects the trees against the

Canker Worms.



PLEASE Examine our new Protector. Below are some of the reasons why every one owning trees should use this Protector.

1. It is a first-class tree Protector, with a perpendicular front to the oil-pan, which prevents the oil from blowing out.
2. It has a pan large enough to contain oil for the season.
3. It is manufactured from heavy zinc, and will last for years.
4. Being corrugated prevents it sagging when on the trees.
5. The protectors are smaller in the centre, which prevents the packing from falling through.
6. We use tow for packing, so there is no danger of girdling or injuring the tree.
7. By using our protectors, you will get more and finer fruit.
8. It is so constructed as to be a perfect barrier against canker worms; it will prevent codling moths, tussock moths, bark lice, curculio, caterpillars, etc., from ascending the trees.
9. This Protector is so cheap that every one owning trees can apply it. It is simply insuring your trees against insects for a few cents a year.

My experience of several years in selling protectors has taught me what is required by the public is a cheap Oil Trough Protector, easily taken care of and something that cannot injure the trees, and will stop the grub from ascending. I am convinced that nothing can be fastened solid to a tree without doing more or less injury. We have applied our Protectors to hundreds of trees, where other protections have failed. Parties ordering, will please give their orders early to insure their being filled on time. Now is the time to put them on and prevent the codling moths, curculio, bark lice and tussock moth from ascending the trees.

The Price of our Protectors is

10 cts. per Inch in diameter, which includes applying to the tree and filling with oil.

Neatest, cheapest and most durable Protector in the market.

We are prepared to execute with promptness all orders. Address all orders to

NOTICE

OWNERS OR

KEEPERS OF DOGS!

IN this town, are hereby reminded that said Dogs must be REGISTERED in the Town Clerk's office during the present month.

Dogs which were registered in 1881 can retain the same numbers, if their owners make early application.

GEO. L. GILL, Town Clerk.
Quincy, April, 1882.

EXTRACTS FROM THE STATUTES OF 1867, CHAPTER 130.

AN ACT CONCERNING DOGS, AND FOR PROTECTION OF SHEEP AND OTHER DOMESTIC ANIMALS.

Be it enacted as follows:

SEC. 1. Every owner or keeper of a dog shall annually, on or before the thirtieth day of April, cause it to be registered, numbered, described and licensed, for one year from the first day of the ensuing May, in the office of the Clerk of the city or town wherein said dog is kept, and shall cause it to wear around its neck a collar distinctly marked with its owner's name and its registered number, and shall pay for such license, for a male dog two dollars, and for a female dog five dollars.

SEC. 2. Any person becoming the owner or keeper of a dog, not duly licensed, on and after the first day of May, shall cause said dog to be registered, numbered, described and licensed until the first day of the ensuing May, in the manner, and subject to the terms and duties described in this act.

SEC. 5. Any person keeping a dog contrary to the provisions of this act shall forfeit fifteen dollars, to be recovered by complaint or indictment; and of said fine or forfeiture, five dollars shall be paid to the complainant, and ten dollars shall be paid to the Treasurer of the county in which the dog is kept. A license from the clerk of any city or town shall be valid in any part of the Commonwealth and may be transferred with the dog licensed; provided said license be recorded by the Clerk of the city or town where such dog is kept.

SEC. 6. The assessors of the cities and towns shall annually take a list of all dogs owned or kept in their respective cities or towns, on the first day of May, with the owners' or keepers' names, and return the same to the city or town Clerk, on or before the first day of July. Any owner or keeper of a dog who shall refuse to give just and true answers, or shall answer falsely to the assessors relative to the ownership thereof, shall be punished by a fine of not less than ten dollars, to be paid into the county treasury.

SEC. 7. Mayors of cities and the chairman of the Selectmen of towns, shall annually, within ten days from the first of July, issue a warrant to one or more police officers, or constables, directing them to proceed forthwith either to kill or cause to be killed all dogs within their respective cities or towns, not licensed and collared according to the provisions of this act, and to enter complaint against the owners or keepers thereof, and any person ma, and every police officer shall kill or cause to be killed, all such dogs, whenever and wherever found.

Assessors' Notice.

To the Inhabitants and all other Persons liable to pay taxes in the Town of Quincy.

THE ASSESSORS of the Town of Quincy hereby give notice to the inhabitants of said town, and all persons liable to pay taxes therein, that they will be at the office of the Selectmen, EVERY SATURDAY in May, from 2 to 4½ o'clock P. M., and from May 27th until June 3d every day from 8 to 10 o'clock A. M., to receive the valuation of Estates; and all persons liable to be taxed in said Town, are hereby required to bring in at said office, a true and correct schedule of the Real and Personal Estates, for which they are liable to pay taxes.

MORTGAGED REAL ESTATE.

"Any mortgagor or mortgagee of real estate may bring in to the assessors of the town or city where such real estate lies," within the time specified in this notice, "a statement, under oath, of the amount due on each separate lot or parcel of such real estate, and the name and residence of every holder of an interest therein as mortgagee or mortgagor. When such property is situated in two or more places, or when a recorded mortgage includes for one sum two or more estates or parts of an estate, an estimate of the amount of the mortgagee's interest in each estate or part of an estate shall be given in such statement."—[Chap. 175 of the Acts of 1882.] When a statement in conformity with the law above quoted is brought in, the real estate therein returned will be assessed under sections 14, 15 and 16, of chapter 11 of the Public Statutes. But in cases where the Mortgagor of the real estate has agreed in writing to pay all taxes assessed thereon, NO STATEMENT OR RETURN IS REQUIRED from either mortgagee or mortgagor, unless requested by the assessors in writing.

Persons holding estates in trust are requested to furnish the Assessors with statements in relation to such estates.

When estates of persons deceased have been divided during the past year, or have changed hands from some other causes, the executor or administrator is required to give notice of such change. In default of such notice he will be held responsible for the tax assessed.

Any person bringing in a list of his taxable property will be assessed upon the valuation thereof, and any one neglecting to furnish the assessors with such list, within the time above specified, will at a legal meeting of the Board of Assessors, be doomed according to the laws of the Commonwealth.

All persons will take notice that statements of personal property must be in writing and subscribed under oath before one of the Assessors, at their office, on or before the 3d day of June; and that the personal property of all taxable persons must be estimated by the Board of Assessors, notwithstanding a verbal statement or informal written communication to any one or more of the Assessors.

When a person has failed to bring in a list or schedule of all his taxable property, in conformity to this notice, no abatement of a tax assessed upon such person for such property can be granted unless such tax exceeds by more than fifty per centum the amount which would have been assessed to that person on personal estate.

RETURN OF

Births to the Town Clerk,

BY PHYSICIANS AND MIDWIVES.

AN ACT to compel a more accurate Registration of Births.

BE IT ENACTED, ETC.:—

SECTION 1. It shall be the duty of every physician and midwife in the several cities and towns in this Commonwealth, excepting Boston, to report on or before the fifth day of each month to the clerk of each city and town a correct list of births of all children born therein during the month next preceding, at which such physician or midwife was present, stating therein the place, date of each birth, and parents' names.

SECTION 2. Town and city clerks shall give public notice that they are prepared to furnish the necessary blanks to all physicians and midwives applying therefor.

SECTION 3. Any physician or midwife neglecting to report such list for ten days after it is due, shall, for each offence forfeit a sum not exceeding twenty dollars.

SECTION 4. This Act shall take effect upon its passage.

Approved February 26, 1880.

I hereby give notice that I am prepared to furnish the blanks above mentioned.

Mount Wollaston Farm.

A long low line of meadows,
With a sweep on either hand
Of wide and level marshes,
Which sea breezes sweep and span;
Beyond, a belt of woodland,
Where the birds in early spring,
Wake joyously a chorus,
Of sweet melody they bring.

There are aged trees, so hoary
That the eye can scarcely see
Their upward waving branches,
Whisp'ring in the summer breeze;
High hills, and dales, low valleys,
Just beyond the seashore found,
Where murmuring pine and hemlock,
Whisper in the waving wind.

The grand old barn so spacious,
With its wealth of sweet mown hay,
And drove of meek-eyed cattle,
While at closing of the day
The swallows from their wanderings,
Now returning to their rest,
Fill the old barn with their flutter,
As they seek each downy nest.

Fertile be thy fields forever,
Bountiful thy lavish store,
Which mother earth in season,
Flings from her hidden lore;
Grain is waving on the hillside,
In the valleys wide and deep,
Bright green corn, with tasselled silk,
High stands, our sight to meet.

Good-by, O, dear old farm lands,
To broad fields and meadows wide,
Shining beach below the oaks,
Where the low, soft rippling tide
Beats out and in the land-locked bay,
And across the distant main,
We'll come when summer's blooming,
To thy meadows back again.

OUR HIRED GIRL.

It was when we were living at the Virginia Three Forks, and good help was as scarce as hens' teeth, that father came walking in one day, with a small, neat, gray eyed woman, and large bundle in tow.

"Where did you find her?" asked mother, dropping the ladle with which she was basting a savory goose, and preparing to abandon that branch of the household work instanter.

"Providence sent her," answered father, with a sigh of relief— he had been girl-hunting for a month. "She looks strong and tidy, and has an honest expression.

"Humph," said mother, shortly, "where's her certificate, or don't the girls from celestial intelligence offices need any? Have you a character?" she asked turning to the girl.

"I had one, ma'am," she answered respectfully, "but the mice ate it; I'll soon have another—try me, ma'am, do try me."

"What is your name?" asked mother in a catechismal voice, after the girl had laid aside her shawl and hood.

"Ellinora," was the answer, with a pleasant smile.

"Well, we'll call you Nellie for short, and you can go right to work at the vegetables for dinner," and mother proceeded to show her what duties were expected of her.

She proved to be an excellent servant, though a little queer and obstinate, but she never went out; had no associates, and though we knew nothing more about her than if she had dropped from the skies she seemed faithful and honest.

She had been with us about a month when one night we heard loud talking in her room; it was still early in the evening, and as ours was a country home it was a habit we had fallen into of retiring soon after supper, if not to bed to our own rooms. We all heard the loud talking at the same time, and met in the hall.

"It's in Nellie's room," said mother, and we crept to the door and listened, and we heard as plain as if spoken in our presence these words in a man's gruff voice:

"I'll burn ye all in your beds yet, as sure as ye have souls to be saved!"

This was followed by the pleading tones of a woman—not Nellie's voice, however!

"Oh! don't, don't, don't. We are innocent! Indeed we are!"

The indescribable pathos of the sobbing voice terrified us so that we went after father, who had remained skeptically in his room; he was angry and thumped vigorously on Nellie's door, but it was some time before it opened. Then we discovered that every article of furniture in the room was arranged to form a pyramidal barricade in front of the entrance. Nellie herself, sleepy and rubbing her eyes, thrust out a head tied up in an old white apron.

"What is it?" she asked hastily with a frightened look: "thieves—murder?"

"Let us in," said father, applying his shoulder to the door, which was only opened a crack; but Nellie had no idea of letting us in, and resisted with such ferocity that mother undertook to soothe her, and gained by strategy what we could not effect by force.

There was not a soul in the room and the window was nailed down. There was no possible hiding-place or means of egress, and there was nothing for us to do but to quietly retire, leaving Nellie to resume her slumbers, which we had so rudely broken. Understand it we could not, and it was all the more mysterious when the next day the whole thing had to be repeated and explained to the girl, she declaring that she had no memory of seeing us in her room or knowledge of our being there. She looked as serene and indifferent as usual, and said she barricaded the door and barred her window down through fear of burglars!

We had no reason to suspect that the were so conscious of a mystery about the whole affair that it made us nervous and uncomfortable, and we began to notice strange ways about our new girl—things that had been of no account before now told against her; yet, when all was summed up, we could only say that she was romantic, and had perhaps been educated above her station, and so gave herself airs, and she really did accomplish her work in a most satisfactory manner.

"Just a little cracked," father would say of her, "but a good girl in the main; I'd like to know what you women folks would do without her?"

"It does seem as if Providence had sent her," said mother, meekly; she likes to make believe she is an echo of father sometimes.

Several times Nellie did treat us to what father called a "circus performance" in her room, but as no harm came of it we concluded that she was merely enjoying herself in her own way, and let her alone. She was such a quiet little woman, with soft gray eyes that seemed to implore your forbearance, and her breakfast rolls of a Sunday morning were the best we had ever tasted; then as to fried chicken, and "angels on horseback," the Virginia name for fricaseed oysters, well, she could have taught Delmonico to cook those dishes!

One day a carriage containing two gentlemen, one of them evidently a physician, stopped a moment at our house to inquire which of the three roads led to a ferry near, and while father was telling them they were halted directly in front of the kitchen window where I stood with Nellie, watching her make a fancy dressing for some baked pork. I was noticing how long and slim her fingers were, as she worked up the mass of spiced bread, when, as suddenly as if shot from a bow, she darted from the kitchen, and fled up stairs. Thinking she had been taken suddenly ill. I finished her work for her, but an hour later when mother went to her room, it was empty! Nellie was gone. She had taken nothing of ours, her wages had never been drawn, and she had vanished as completely as if she had never existed, so that it seemed as if Providence had indeed recalled her in the same mysterious way that she came.

Was this the end? Yes, it was the end of Nellie's service with us, but one day, a couple of weeks after, the same carriage that had stopped at our gate, with the same two men that had been in it before—and one of them a physician—came crawling slowly back again, mud-bespattered and road-worn, and between the two men, shackled, mangled, the clothes torn from her poor bruised limbs, sat our Nellie, a raving lunatic, snarling at all who approached her. She did not know us, and the doctor would not allow us to go near her.

"She is the most dangerous lunatic in the asylum at Alexandria," he said, "and the worst criminal. Why, that woman burned five persons to death in their beds, and strangled her own child! I had no idea she was here, or I would have inquired for her that day. We were on another trail altogether, and if she had stayed quietly here it is doubtful if we had ever known of it until you had all been murdered in your sleep!"

But he could not persuade us that this wild-eyed creature, rending at her own flesh, and filling the air with her shrieks and curses, was our gentle, quiet Nellie until we heard her simulate a man's voice in the very tones she had used that night, when probably she was struggling with her mania to murder and burn. We did our work for a long time after that, and took good care to have a well attested certificate of character from the next girl that Providence sent us, as we had no desire to entertain any more escaped lunatics.

Left Them to Settle It.

On a Paris boulevard a crowd gathered round a lady and a cocher who were engaged in a lively discussion over the question of the fare. Suddenly a gentleman of rigid countenance and official bearing cleaved his passage through the mass, and said sternly:

"Here! here! What's all this row about? What's the matter?"

"The matter is that this woman owes me for driving her about for two hours, and won't pay me for more than an hour and a half."

"Ha! Well, madame, what have you to say to this? Let us hear your side of the question."

"I took this man's carriage just an hour and a half ago, and I'm willing to pay him for that, but not a centime more."

"Hum! Well, driver, you are sure that there's no mistake—that it is two hours?"

"Quite sure, monsieur."

"Well, and you won't pay him for more than an hour and a half, madame?"

"Not one single solitary moment more than an hour and a half."

The stranger reflected a moment, and then said, severely, "Well, settle it between yourselves; it is none of my business," and walked rapidly away.

☞ "Thrashing by steam," murmured a fond mother, as she glanced at an article in an agricultural paper. "What git ups they have nowadays. If I had one of them steam thrashers for my four boys, my arms wouldn't have been as rheumaticy as they are today," and she dreamily thought of the past as it might have been.

☞ Frequently, yes, very frequently, the woman who will stand on her piazza and smile like a heavenly blessing in disguise, will go inside and wallop her young ones with a terrible dis-

Moral and Religious.

Avoid all expressions which tend to irritate, embarrass, mortify or pain any member of the family. Never allude to any fault or failing, unless with the purpose to benefit, and then in private. Avoid sarcasms, bitter words, "sore" subjects, and reference to any personal deformity. Do not ridicule, nor hold the opinion of others in contempt. Give attention when addressed, and do not interrupt nor speak when another is speaking. Never contradict. Never scold. Keep your temper. Never speak in loud or querulous tones, nor order, in arbitrary or arrogant manner, child or servant. Use no slang phrases nor rude, disrespectful, profane, or inaccurate language. Never omit the "please" and "thank you," nor "good night" and "good morning," nor fail to gratefully acknowledge by some word or look every act of kindness and attention. These little words oil the harsh machinery of life wonderfully. Do not enter even your nearest relation's room without knocking. Never slam the door, sit in the window, hum, whistle in the halls or passages; nor scream to persons out of windows, and up stairways. Teach children to offer precedence to each other, and to their superiors, to avoid awkward positions and movements, and not to indulge in disagreeable or filthy personal habits, such as yawning, scratching the head, picking the nose, hawking, spitting on the floor, cleaning the nails in company, etc., etc. Hold the person and personal possessions of another sacred. He who observes this rule will not tickle, nor pinch, nor punch, nor poke his friend or brother, will not, unless he has special permission, open his letter, rummage his drawers, mark his books, finger his clothes, nor use his private property.

The Bridal Package.

Nearly every bridal couple that comes to Washington—and Washington is the national bridal Mecca—writes a correspondent, visits the treasury vaults. The young and invariable interesting couple want to closely inspect Uncle Sam's shekels. When they enter the vault the man in charge of it, after a few preliminary words of explanation, hands down a package of notes from a shelf and tells the bride to take it in her hands. He then explains that this package contains $20,000,000 in United States treasury notes. The young lady is delighted to be able to go away and say that she has held so much money in her own hands. She is just too utterly pleased. The groom also wants to handle the package. They are further told that the notes are all of the denomination of $10,000. They constitute what is known as the "Bridal Package." Young married tourists, having heard of this package, often ask to handle it just as soon as they enter the vaults. This is all very pretty; but it is a fraud on the young people. The treasury here does not hold that amount of money. The bulk of the money is in the sub-treasury at New York. That "Bridal Package" is a gay deceiver. It does contain, however, notes of the denomination of $10,000, which would, in the aggregate, represent $20,000,000 if they were only signed; but they are worth no more in reality than the paper on which they are printed, being minus the necessary signatures.

He Pulled the Tooth.

A Hartford, (Conn.) dentist discovered that one of his patients, a six footer, was a mad man. As he approached with his forceps the lunatic raised up in his chair, and with a ferocious glare in his savage eyes, looking straight at the doctor, said. "Be quick and if you don't pull it the first time I'll throw you out of the window." The young dentist quickly made up his mind to risk it. The tooth must come, and come the first time. Among the stock of forceps was one big strong pair which had been discarded on account of their clumsy shape. The doctor selected this pair, and thinking of the unpleasant nature of a certain promised fall, he reached for the tooth, and with a grip that desperation made sure, he snaked out that molar in a jiffy. The lunatic sprang from the chair, and with the blood dripping from his mouth, began a musical march up and down the room striking the old familiar song: "Oh it will be joyful, oh it will be joyful, when we meet to part no more." He kept up that march for about five minutes, and then dashed out of the door, and down stairs, still singing his joyful song.

A Slight Difference.

A story is told of a graceless scamp who gained access to the Clarendon printing office, in Oxford, when the forms of a new edition of the Episcopal Prayer Book had just been made up and ready for the press. In that part of the forms containing the marriage service he substituted the letter k for the letter v in the word live; and thus the vow to "love, honor, comfort, &c., so long as ye both shall live," was made to read "so long as ye both shall like." The change was not discovered until the whole edition was printed off. The World thinks if the sheets thus rendered useless in England be still preserved, it would be a good speculation to have them neatly bound and forwarded to Indiana and Connecticut.

☞ A New England pastor called upon one of his deacons, with whom he was at variance, and with an air of great solemnity said: "Brother, it is a shame that this quarrel of ours should bring scandal upon the church. I have prayed earnestly for guidance in the matter;

New York Fashions.

DOTS AND SPOTS; GLOVES AND SHOES; SHORT DRESSES; HOW TO MAKE ACCESSORIES.

A controversy arises as to where dots should end and be replaced by spots. Great spots an inch in diameter are fashionable on dress goods, ribbons, kerchiefs, etc., but because circular in form have been called dots. Such name is indignantly repudiated by persons of "exact thought," but they fail to draw a line and tell us just where we stand, if, perchance, we should have invested in a dotted or spotted dress. I leave you, therefore, dear readers, to decide for yourselves, remarking only that dots begin from the very small, set very close and run in gradations till swallowed up by very large spots set far apart. They are self-colored, or in contrasts, and what has been said regarding size, holds good in all classes of material; not excepting the white muslins which robe divinities in summer. Sprigged muslins too abound, and here also are sprigs and sprays both large and small.

BOARDING SCHOOL MISSES

are already sending in orders for supplies of black stockings, slippers and gloves to be worn with their white graduating dresses. There is just that flavor in this last eccentricity of fashion which captivates the average boarding school heart, but it is not confined to these young creatures. In truth they do but imitate their elders since by fashionists of all degrees, a rush is made not only for black, but dark colored stockings, with kid or satin slippers and gloves to match. Plain hosiery leads, although there are some few stripes and checks. Furthermore, too, the quite short summer costumes will afford ample opportunity for a display of these singularly clothed feet, and such circumstance while rejoicing the hearts of many a coquettish young beauty, strikes with dismay the portly dowagers who have lost their sympathy, while, perhaps, retaining a good share of by-gone coquetry. They must needs be somewhat unfashionable for the picture would, otherwise, prove too ludicrous. Fashion has, for the time, forgotten them, and they, in return, must forget or ignore the claims of fashion, for it grows more and more apparent that short costumes are in an overwhelming ascendency.

HOW TO MAKE

Summer costumes is so knotty a question that an endeavor to explain would be to confuse. So much is permitted and we have so great a variety. In this perplexity I refer you to the illustrations in Lord & Taylor's Spring Catalogue, where you will see everything desirable depicted to you. Besides, there is on all topics of interest, not only illustrations, but well written fashion articles telling you so much indeed, that in comparison my letters may seem but improfitable. Having rolled away this burden of care there is room to say a word or two as to accessories. It has been predicted that owing to the great popularity of jabots, fichus, etc., they would "go out" this summer. On the contrary, we find they have not the least idea of "going," unless it be that they are going to stay. But here, too, the shapings and twistings of lace and kindred materials by skilled hands defies description, so I will again refer you to the above mentioned illustrations; taking up, instead, the simpler topic of kerchiefs, which, in large sizes rise to the dignity of small shawls. Take a square of almost anything from twenty-four inches to a yard; finish with a hem, hem-stitch, embroidery, lace, etc., fold it about your neck in any way that pleases, and you are fashionable. Mull is much used and bobinet lace as well; then there are silken nets, white or black, plain or embroidered; Spanish net, white or black, while surah silk is in regular kerchiefs, bespread with dots or spots, (whichever name may please you), or you can buy the silk and make up a kerchief for yourself, trimming with lace if you like. All these materials can be made into scarfs or bought ready made.

LUCY CARTER.

Cigarettes.

The statistics of cigarettes show how their use in this country has grown of late. In one year the supply increased more than a third. The tax on them for the last fiscal year produced nearly a million dollars from the ordinary cigarettes alone. The tax on these was $1.75 per thousand, and the number of cigarettes made and paying revenue was over five hundred million. These cigarettes are mostly vile enough. The odor tells the story. While many of them are unquestionably good, others are said to be mixed with refuse tobacco. Many people can remember when the cigarette was the pleasantest form of tobacco smoking—the pleasantest for the puffer and the pleasantest for the people puffed at. Ladies who could not endure ordinary cigars often found the perfume of the cigarette agreeable; it was like a lighted pastile. But the cigarette of to-day is usually ranker, fouler, and more acrid in its odor than many a clay pipe. Young men puff this abomination on the crowded platforms of street cars, or in mixed assemblies, where they would hardly venture to pull away at a pipe; and yet it is the more nauseating of the two. If the old fragrant cigarettes were restored, the fact that half a billion a year of them are smoked might be less lamentable.

More Improvements.

Last week we gave our readers a short list of the improvements that were going on around town and now we take pleasure in adding the following. Mr. Jonas Shackly is just completing a handsome house on West street, near residence of Mrs. L. L. Trask, for her son-in-law, the Rev. Mr. Fitts. He also has two other houses under way, one near Churchill's quarry for Mr. Frederick Martell, which is ready for the masons, while another house on Common street, for Mr R. O. Townsend, has just been boarded in.

A new cellar is being completed on Cross street, and Mr. Warren D. Higgins has taken a contract to build the house, which is for Mr. Walter H. Ripley.

Mr. Waters is building a house on Willard street for Mr. Thomas Haverhan. Three new cellars are being dug and stoned; one on Copeland street for Mr. John Evans, another near Churchill's quarry for Mr. Degreeny, and one has just been commenced near foot of Cemetery street.

Dr. Charles S. French is making preparations to erect a two-story frame building on Chestnut street, adjoining that occupied by A. W. Hicks and F. A. Bussell.

EXTENSIVE AUCTIONS. Mr. Joseph W. Lombard sells on Wednesday next, a large amount of valuable property belonging to the estate of the late Albert Tirrell. This sale takes place on the Agricultural Fair Grounds in Weymouth, and consists of valuable horses, cows and other farm stock, carriages, harnesses, cultivators and many useful garden tools usually found on a gentleman's estate.

At 3 o'clock in the afternoon, at the same place, a large and choice variety of beautiful plants will be sold from the greenhouse of Mr. Tirrell. Now is the time to secure plants for your gardens.

On Friday next the same gentleman will sell at the farm of the late Albert Tirrell, in Marshfield, a very extensive and valuable property consisting of farm stock and tools. The stock has been selected with great care and without regard to cost and are all thorough bred. The farming tools are all of the most useful and desirable patterns, and were selected by Mr. Tirrell, who was a thorough farmer. A nearly new beach house a short distance from the farm will also be sold. These sales will take place at the times designated, by order of the Administrator, and all who feel desirous of securing rare bargains should be present. Read the advertisements.

TAKE WARNING. It was rumored the first of the week that officers were after the violators of the smelt law, and that all persons in the habit of catching, having in their possession, or eating a good mess of smelts at this season of the year, was liable to be arrested, and fined $5 for each smelt. The rumor in some measure proved true, as on Monday last District Police Thomas of Weymouth, assisted by Constable Locke of Quincy, searched Winslow's express at Neponset, driven by Mr. Hayden, and seized two boxes of smelts, some thirty dozen, which the driver said he had received at the residence of W. G. Prescott, in Quincy. Mr. Prescott was accordingly summoned before the District Court on Thursday, and after hearing the evidence for the Commonwealth, Judge Bumpus sent the case to the Grand Jury, and ordered the defendant to give bonds in the sum of $300, for his appearance at the next term of the Superior Court.

SCHOOL CHILDREN. Ensign S. Fellows, Esq., has collected for the School Committee, the number of school children in this town, and has kindly handed us the figures for publication:

The whole number of scholars in Quincy, between the ages of 5 and 15, is 2312, namely:

SURPRISE. A number of neighbors and relatives called on Mrs. Jerusha Keating, on Water street, on Saturday evening last, to celebrate her 75th birthday. Finding the door unlocked the visitors walked in with their bags and baskets and completely surprised their friend, who was not thinking it was her birthday. After spending a few hours in singing, speaking, etc., the festive board was spread and all invited to partake from the bountiful supply of good things. Mrs. Keating is quite smart, and appears to be enjoying the blessings which this life is bestowing.

DRAMATIC ENTERTAINMENT. Miss Elsie Russell is to have a benefit Wednesday evening next May 17th. The dramatic entertainment promises to be very fine, the company will appear in rich and elegant costumes. There will also be a fine orchestra of eight pieces. The stage has been enlarged so that beautiful scenery may be placed thereon. It is hoped that she may be greeted by a full house. The Ways and Means committee of the Unitarian Society, of this town, recommend Miss Russell very highly.

THE QUINCY YACHT CLUB. The Regatta Committee of this club have prepared the following programme of regattas for the coming year:

The first race takes place on Wednesday, May 24th, off Great Hill, beginning at 2.30 P. M. There will be two prizes in each class. The second regatta takes place on Wednesday, June 21st. The third occurs on Friday, July 21st. The fourth comes off, on Wednesday, August 23d. The fifth and last of the season will be sailed on Monday, September, 4th.

PRIVATE SALES. Among the private sales in this County, we notice the following in Quincy:

Julia Minihan has sold to Hannah Minihan and others, 81,060 square feet of land and buildings on Willard street, West Quincy, for $2000.

Mary A. wife of Phineas P. Coombs, to Nellie L. Curtin, land and buildings on Billings street, Atlantic, for $2000.

Michael Daly to Marianna E. Taber

Brief Locals.

☞ Many homes are being beautified with paint, paper and whitewash.

☞ Families desirous of securing help should read our advertising columns.

☞ No books will be given out from the Thomas Crane Public Library after to-day.

☞ Five o'clock Mass has been held at St. John's Church, every morning this week.

☞ Rev. Mr. Norton will preach at the Quincy Home to-morrow afternoon at 3 o'clock.

☞ Twenty-five good machine operatives wanted, as will be noticed by our advertising columns.

☞ A nice story, entitled "My First Brood of Chickens," by Russ B. Walker, will appear next week.

☞ Dr. Wm. H. Sherman having disposed of his business in this town intends to move to South Boston.

☞ A little son of Mr. John Westland fell on Friday of last week and broke one of his arms, just above his wrist.

☞ The committee to purchase a steam fire engine for the town, visited the Amoskeag works at Manchester, N. H., on Tuesday.

☞ Families can be supplied with pure milk of the best quality from the Penn's Hill Farm as will be seen by referring to the advertisement.

☞ The committee to purchase a new Hook and Ladder truck, and alter the Stone school-house, meet this evening in the Selectmen's Room.

☞ Mr. A. B. Hayward of Braintree has purchased the People's Drug Store on Temple street, and will carry on the apothecary business in Quincy.

☞ A forty hours' devotional service has been held at St. John's Church this week. It was commenced on Sunday last, and has been very fully attended.

☞ There will be a conference of visitors of the Associated Charities Tuesday, May 16th, at 3 P. M., in School Committee's Room, Town Hall building.

☞ Auctioneer Lombard sells a dwelling house and house lot on North st., on Monday next. The property is quite valuable, as the land is under a high state of cultivation.

☞ A little son of Mr. Joseph Stancomb, fell Thursday forenoon on a poker, and the point of it was pushed into his palate making an ugly but fortunately not serious wound.

☞ Rev. S. S. Cummings of Boston will preach to-morrow evening, in the Congregational Church, upon the work of the Baldwin Place Home for Little Wanderers. A choir of children from the Home will be present and sing.

☞ The W. C. T. Union of Hingham, cordially invite the Quincy Union to meet with them in Convention, on Thursday, May 18th, in Loring Hall. Sessions at 10.30. A. M. 2 and 7.30. P. M. Mrs. McLaughlin will deliver the evening address.

☞ Mr. Lorenzo Johnson, a former resident of this town, died on Monday at Concord, N. H. He was superintendent of the Granite Railway Company in that place. He was a brother of Mr. Horace and Jonathan Johnson of this town.

☞ A. G. Durgin has this week been granted a sixth-class license. Now the citizens of Quincy can get good liquors for medicinal, mechanical and chemical purposes by giving an order as the law directs. He informs us that he is going to conduct this business strictly to the provision of his license.

☞ Dr. Small, at his office in Quincy, removed from the finger of Mrs. Leavitt, of Braintree, on Wednesday last, a rusty needle that had been in her finger over a year. Other doctors had examined the hand but said there was no needle there, but as it pained her considerable she tried another surgeon, and fortunately was more successful.

☞ We have had a good variety of spring weather this week. The first part was quite warm with nice rain; but the last part has been cold, cloudy and damp. Some of the cherry trees are partly in bloom, and the indications are that there will be a good crop. The apple trees indicate that there will be a full blossom, and it being the apple year we may expect a large supply.

FAIR. The New England Manufacturers' and Mechanics' Institute is thus early in the field with its prospectus for its second annual grand fair. This is set down to commence Wednesday, September 6th, and to continue until November 1st. The treasurer's statement places the profits of last year's exhibition at $15,544.19, and the cost of the property so far has been, in land and construction of the building, $344,516.66. The meeting authorized a further loan of $150,000 to complete all the improvements in contemplation.

SHOCKING AFFAIR. On Saturday evening last one of the foulest crimes ever perpetrated under any circumstances, took place in Dublin, the capital city of Ireland. On that occasion, Lord Frederick Cavendish, Chief Secretary for Ireland, and Mr. Thomas Henry Burke, Under Secretary, were stabbed to death in Phœnix Park. The assassination took place about seven o'clock in the afternoon. Enough of the occurrences connected with the deed are known to make it clear that the assasins were four men, who drew near the place where the bloody acts were performed, in a jaunting car, escaping in the vehicle after the murder.

District Court, Quincy.

The following cases have been before the court this week:

William G. Prescott, of Quincy, for unlawfully having in his possession 360 smelts. He was ordered to give bonds in $300 for his appearance before the Grand Jury in September next.

John Roach of Weymouth, for being drunk. Fined $1 and costs.

John Riedy and Eugene S. Moran of Weymouth, for selling intoxicating liquor. As one of the witnesses could not be found the case was continued one week.

William F. Moriarty of Randolph, for bastardy. Plead guilty and was ordered to give sureties in $700 for his appearance on Saturday morning. At

The work on Washington street is advancing at the rate of about twenty-five feet a day and is being done well.

The improvement which the town voted to make upon the estate of Mrs. H. F. Smith is under way and when finished promises to be a valuable addition to the looks of the street.

By the parting of a rope Mr. William Caldwell was precipitated from the coal staging on Sheppard's wharf, to the deck of a schooner and received many painful but fortunately not serious injuries.

The Quincy Point Temperance Association held its regular meeting Wednesday evening and the time was occupied by Rev. G. B. Lawton who gave a very interesting talk upon geology. There will be another meeting next Wednesday evening.

The sociable of the Ladies' Aid Society was held Thursday evening at the residence of Mrs. H. F. Smith. The attendance was large and the occasion a pleasant one.

If there is any spare gravel left from the repair of Washington street, it might be used to good advantage alongside the C. U. Church.

Saturday evening the Vulture Engine Company held a special meeting and admitted two new members. No action was taken by the Board of Engineers upon the roll of the company, at the meeting held Tuesday evening.

A large number of the past scholars of the Washington school, visited their classmate Miss Mamie Chapin at her residence in Newton Saturday evening, returning Sunday morning. One of Burke's large teams carried the party and the visit was an entire surprise to Miss Chapin. The visitors were handsomely entertained and had a very pleasant time.

We were pleased to hear of the safe arrival at Liverpool, Wednesday, of Capt. Mouland's wife and child. Mrs. M. and four children will leave Liverpool about June 1, arriving here about the middle of the month, when the whole family will make what we hope will be their permanent (earthly) home at Quincy Point.

The work upon the fire alarm telegraph is progressing fast, and by to-night at least half of the poles will be set in position ready for the wire. The striker for the Centre bell has arrived and the other apparatus is nearly completed.

We hear that Mr. Horace Sampson has leased a large portion of "Point Holes" for a pasture.

Captain Mouland, our new resident, is the inventor of the domed steamship; an experimental one is now being built at Nyack on the Hudson.

The Point nine beat a North Weymouth nine at base ball last Saturday.

The telegraph pole set in the middle of the sidewalk near the school-house, is to be changed.

Yachtsmen are getting their craft ready for the season; business is lively in Maybury's yard. H.

West Quincy Items.

On Friday evening of last week Mr. Frederick Auspland was invited to Temperance Hall, where he was told several of his friends wished to see him. On arriving at the hall, what was his surprise to find about one hundred familiar faces of both sexes. After a hearty greeting, dancing etc., was the order of the evening, which was enjoyed by all present until about 11 o'clock, when Fred. was called to the centre of the hall, where Mr. John G. Woddick on behalf of those present, presented him with a handsome sum of money as a token of their esteem. Mr. A. thanked his friends and dancing was then continued.

Mr. A., it will be remembered, was very seriously injured last winter while coasting, but we are pleased to say he is rapidly improving. He leaves for his home in Maine to-day, where he has been tendered an excellent situation. May success attend him in his new departure is the wish of his friends.

The Old Colony Company are making extensive improvements at the West Quincy station.

Mr. Jas. Gorman, an old resident of West Quincy, was buried on Tuesday last.

A slight fire occurred in the tin shop of Mr. Michael Dolan, on Copeland street, on Sunday evening of last week.

Oakland Gardens will open June 5th with Leavitt's minstrels.

Steamer Empire State will commence the season about July 1st running from Battery wharf.

The Cassino or summer garden at the Mechanics Institute Building, Huntington Avenue will open May 22d among the attractions are billiard tables, bowling alley, bicycle track, roller skating rink, lawn tennis and a theatre with a seating capacity for 10,000.

Forty-four conductors have been discharged on the Metropolitan Horse Railroad in two months and fifteen were arrested last Saturday for using bogus punches.

A Chinese funeral occurred on Harrison avenue last Sunday afternoon. The deceased was a member of a society very like the Masons and the rites were very interesting; on a pole on the roof of the building hung a Chinese flag, draped in white (the Chinese emblem for mourning purposes), in the windows the curtains, &c, were of linen. A large delegation of Chinamen was present.

Eighteen took the temperance pledge at the Bethel Temperance Society, Hanover street, last Monday evening.

Donald McKay and some twenty-five Indians have established an Indian village in Park square, near the Providence depot, where they will remain during the summer.

Four hundred girls in the employ of the Mystic Rubber Company struck last Monday morning against a reduction of 25 per cent. of their earnings. T.

☞ The Old Colony Memorial says: President Proctor, of the Massachusetts Press Association, is arranging for a most attractive excursion to New York city, up the Hudson, and a pleasant tarry in the Catskill Mountains. The Park Question.—No. 2.

To the Editors of the Patriot:

The argument that I have heard most persistently urged against making any provision for a park, next to the argument of expense, has been what may be called the "poor-man" argument. It is insisted that, somehow or in someway which cannot be explained, the scheme is one which will inure to the enjoyment of the rich, and prove an imposition on the poor. It is not easy to meet an argument which can only have its origin either in pure ignorance or in what is known as "general cussidness;" and this "poor-man's" argument originates in one or the other of these. It can be advanced in good faith only by one who never lived in a crowded community, and does not know what a park in such a community is, or who uses it.

Who is it that gets the enjoyment out of Boston Common, or the New York Central Park, or the parks of London or Paris? Is it the rich, who live near them and drive in them and pay for them? Or is it the poor, who there find on each Sunday and holiday the one place in the world where they get a breath of fresh air or see a green thing? The rich have their own pleasure grounds and gardens. In the summer they go to the country and the sea-shore. Even here in Quincy those who are only well-to-do have their beach-houses at Great Hill and at Nantasket, and they go down to them in the hot weather. How is it with the poor? Do the children of those who work for day-wages,—the majority even of our Quincy community,—do they in their holidays and vacations get down to the beaches and pass their time on the sea-shore? We all know they do not. They know very well that they do not themselves.

A few years ago it was different. Quincy had no need of any park or public pleasure ground in my boyhood, for the simple reason that it was all park. Vacant land then lay every where, and it was all open. No one thought of putting up notices forbidding trespassers. Field, hill and grove were free to all. That has long since ceased to be the case. Year by year it is getting to be less and less the case. A short time ago a town-committee found it almost impossible to secure an open space for a town celebration, and if tresspassing was forbidden on the "Crane pasture" the boys would be puzzled to find a place to play base ball. This is not right. No community should allow itself to be shut out in this way. If provision for a town-common has not been made from the beginning, it cannot be made too soon.

To return, however, to the "poor-man's" argument,—to the wonderful proposition that, in someway, the having a public pleasure ground is another benefit for the rich and a fresh imposition on the poor. I wish those who advance this precious argument could pass, as now and then I have had to pass, a sultry August Sunday in a great city. One begins to get a realizing idea then what parks are for. It is a good many years since I was in Paris, but I well remember that nothing gave me such an insight into the lives of the French people, and such a saving respect for them, as those summer Sundays in Paris. The French people are very good to children. Much better to them than the English are. I used then to see the parks full of little family groups. They would go out from their close habitations in the hot city in the morning,—the father, the mother and two or three children,—the father carrying the great luncheon basket, and the mother the youngest child. During the day you could see them all playing together on the grass or under the trees; and at dusk you met them in the streets again, going home, all as tired as they could be, both father and mother carrying a child sound asleep in their arms, while another child behind them lugged the now empty basket. Dr. Sheehan, I think, could probably give experiences of the same sort. Those were poor people. They knew, however, what a park was for, and who got the real good out of it. I have seen much the same thing in New York. I would very much like to see it in Quincy.

What is the alternative to it?—The streets and the gutters. Those who advance the "poor-man's" argument know this well enough;—or they would know it if they would reflect a moment. Those who live in tenement houses can't own gardens. Unless the public provides a garden they must go without; and the streets and the gutters must supply for them the place of a garden. This again is not right;—it is somewhat less than right, it is fairly inhuman. Yet this is just what those are in favor of who talk of a park being a fresh imposition on the poor. They are either ignorant, or thoughtless, or constitutionally otherwise-minded.

Yet in this case they have not worked in vain, and in March last, when the acceptance of the Park act was voted on, it was most singular to see what a hold this "poor-man's" argument had upon the minds of those who could possibly get for themselves and their children nothing but good out of what they were voting against. It was no use arguing with them. They had been labored with and were convinced. As I over-heard one of them tersely put it:—"Don't want no park nohow!"—in other words the streets and the gutters were good enough for them and their children, and they wanted nothing better. Here is a field for missionary work for some one. Those who talk thus simply do not know what a park is, or who it is for. If they did they never would talk so. A park is a great educator. C. F. A., JR.

Comfort and Happiness.

Among the many improvements which are noticable in Quincy, we are pleased to note those of Mrs. Lydia L. Trask and Miss Vinton who have quite recently been under the hands of the dentist, and are now rejoicing in the possession of beautiful sets of teeth, which we doubt not will be condusive to their general health and add years of comfort and happiness to themselves, and will receive the congratulations of their numerous friends. To all who have been alike afflicted, they say, "Go thou and do likewise." S.

☞ An English journal suggests that somebody can make a fortune by collecting cigar-stumps in London and selling them to gardeners and florists for the fumigation of greenhouses, this industry having been pursued for a considerable time in France to great profit. Obituary.

Dr. Lorenzo Fowler Butler was born in Martha's Vineyard, July 17, 1849, and came to this town five years ago, after graduating from the Medical School, Boston University. Possessing qualities which ever insure success in his profession, he gained a steadily increasing practice, and his future seemed secure. He had attained a self-control, the growth of firm purpose and a fixed principle, which was rare in one so young. While his organization was sensitive, his mind was healthy, his judgment was cool, his sympathies extended to all the problems of the hour, yet he was able to temper his opinions with tolerance.

The harmonious blending of his qualities made him friends wherever he was known. Life was sweet to him, and when at the close of last year he was married, the beginning of a new life seemed opening; but it was of a life not bounded by our horizon.

"The good physician, others he could save; himself he could not save." With but little premonition he was stricken with disease, even through the unconscious utterance of weeks, the light of a serenity and beauty of spirit shone. Life so slowly ebbed, and with so many fluctuations that each retreating wave seemed the incoming of a new and stronger life, until the tide ebbed when there was no coming in.

FINE

SPRING CLOTHING.

Reference is made herein to a few leading articles in our spring stock. Gentlemen looking for fine goods for present use can be supplied forthwith with suits or single garments of a quality entirely different from ordinary Ready-made Clothing, at fair prices for first-class work.

SPRING SUITS from genuine Scotch and other choice material of our own importation. Also, from many novelties and fresh standard light-weight woolens from leading American mills. The assortment is large, and comprises Business and Walking Suits of the latest styles made for the season in our own work shops, and designed specially for parties who require the best possible substitute for custom work.

DRESS SUITS from imported broadcloths and doeskins, made with the greatest care in the dull business season, averaging better than the general run of dress garments made to measure, and at 25 per cent. less cost.

WORSTED GOODS. We have in stock also Morning and Walking Suits, in black French Worsteds, in diagonal and basket weaves, that are very neat and useful for wear upon nearly all occasions, without being too expensive.

SPRING OVERCOATS, of fine selected fabrics, with silk linings throughout, together with a graded assortment at less cost—all well made and handsomely trimmed and calculated for excellent service.

Our experience of over thirty years in Boston in manufacturing exclusively first-class clothing, enables us to offer peculiar advantages to our customers in many respects.

DWELLING HOUSE

—AND—

HOUSE LOT

AT AUCTION IN QUINCY.

WILL be sold at Public Auction, on

MONDAY, MAY 15th, 1882

at 4 o'clock P. M., a Dwelling House and House Lot, situated on North street, Quincy, near the residence of the late Abram A[illegible]pough, and within twenty minutes' walk of the Old Colony Depot, five minutes' walk of good schools and churches, and within [illegible] feet of Washington street, the main thoroughfare between Quincy and Quincy Point. The property is owned by CHARLES S. BAXTER, ESQ., and was formerly occupied by Mr Starbuck. The house contains seven rooms, is in good repair, and adapted for a family of six persons. The houselot is very desirable, and is under a high state of cultivation. The estate will be sold in one lot if desired.

In this locality property has been kept down by capitalists, and by that means workmen have not made their appearance, but now is the time for men who intend to purchase and get a good bargain, as the lands are changing hands, and the entire community of Quincy Point are waking to a sense of duty, and realize that the more inducements they hold out the more their lands will be in demand, and a greater profit will be reaped.

This sale offers great opportunity to those in want of a home. Terms liberal.

Sale positive, weather fair or foul.

MUSIC AND DRAMA. This publication edited weekly by John C. Freund of New York makes its appearance regularly on our desk, and we have noticed from week to week the rapid progress it is making. Last week it appeared with a supplement, thus making twenty-eight pages of valuable information on all musical matters; and by its fearless criticisms, its "confessions," the large amount of news and entertaining reading, together with its neat appearance, it should become a favorite with the musical world.

In France shoemakers earn from $1 to $1.20 a day, and to do this they have to work from fourteen to fifteen hours a day.

For the Patriot.

Church Reminiscences.

The recent death of Mrs. Louisa Nightingale, who was the only surviving member of the Congregational Evangelical Church in this town, at the time of its organization in 1831, makes it an appropriate time to pay some tribute of respect to the memory of the eight christian women that withdrew from the First Church in town for the purpose of uniting with the new society. The fact that so many did withdraw at one time, while their husbands continued members of the old parish, caused much comment and no small excitement in town, much more we think than such an event would at present when the question of woman's rights is so generally discussed. The writer of this remembers something of the opposition manifested in town to this new society, and knew something of the peculiar trials and situations in which some of these women were placed, and without any desire to enter into any discussion with respect to their religious opinion, I wish to bear testimony to their fidelity, to their conscientious religious convictions.

They were women who believed their religious duties required something more of them than an attendance at two church services on Sundays; they believed in prayer meetings, in Sunday schools, in temperance meetings, in often assembling together for christian work and conversation, in short, in christian activities of pastor and people. However much might be said, and said truly, of the many good qualities of the pastor of the First Church at that time as a minister and a citizen, he lacked some things I think essential to the usefulness of a pastor. I doubt if he was on speaking acquaintance with more than one-quarter of his parishioners, in fact a large part of them would have been surprised to see the minister coming to their homes; he was not expected except on occasions of a funeral, or a wedding. This was only a few years after the division and separation of Unitarians from the Orthodox in many towns, and extreme doctrinal sermons were often preached on both sides, and no doubt these women were often compelled to listen to sermons entirely at variance with their religious belief, and hence their duty to withdraw from the old society seemed plain. Small and feeble as this new church was at the beginning, their number increased, and in a few years they had a meeting-house, and this was opened to the great reformatory movements of temperance and anti-slavery, at a time when many of the churches of that denomination was closed against the latter cause.

When I visit Quincy and look upon their roomy and convenient church building to accommodate the citizens of Quincy of that denomination, and an ornament to the place, at least when compared with most of the others in town, I feel to pay respect to the memory of the women, who in obedience to what they believed to be their duty, went forward in this christian enterprise, against much opposition and ridicule, in some cases from those who they had reason to expect better things, and who certainly did not seem to realize that "the freedom of the mind is the most powerful attribute of freemen, and the most powerful prerogative of human nature." His life was gentle, and his elements so mingled
That all who knew him, loved him;
His heart was noble, and they loved him first and best,
Who most and best had proved him:
And when God's angel came.
God's own again to claim,
And through death's portal,
To life immortal,
Led him, alas, so soon,
To us it seemed, the sun had set at noon.

THE STATE PRISON. The recent visit of the Legislature to the State Prison at Concord, practically settled the question of removal back to the old quarters at Charlestown. A large majority of the visitors believe the present quarters better thay they ought to have any reason to expect for themselves were they to be punished for crime, and pronounce the scheme of removal as unwarranted. By improving the drainage, which can be done, the prison would be all that could be desired.

PERRY DAVIS' VEGETABLE PAIN KILLER

A Never-Failing Cure for Burns, Scalds, Bruises, Cuts, Sores, etc.

After forty years of trial, PERRY DAVIS' PAIN KILLER stands unrivaled. It is safe! It acts immediately! It never fails!

Editor of the St. John (N. B.) News, says:
In flesh wounds, aches, pains, sores, etc., it is the most effectual remedy we know of. No family should be without a bottle of it for a single hour.

From the Cincinnati Dispatch:
We have seen its magic effects, and know it to be a good article.

From I. S. Potter, U. S. Consul at Crefeld, Rhenish Prussia:
After long years of use, I am satisfied it is positively efficient as a healing remedy for wounds, bruises, and sprains.

W. W. Sharper, Valdosta, Ga., says:
It is a panacea for all bruises and burns.

From R. W. Adams, Saco, Me.:
It gave me immediate relief.

R. Lewis says:
In forty years' use it never has failed me.

W. W. Lum, Nicholville, N. Y., says:
I use your PAIN KILLER frequently. It relieves pain and soreness, and heals wounds like magic.

J. W. Dee says:
For scalds and burns it has no equal.

PERRY DAVIS' PAIN KILLER is not a new untried remedy. For forty years it has been in constant use; and those who have used it the longest are its best friends.

Its success is entirely because of its merit. Every family should have a bottle ready for use. Much pain and heavy doctors' bills may often be saved by prompt application of the PAIN KILLER. Unlike most medicines, it is perfectly safe even in the hands of a child. Try it once thoroughly, and it will prove its value. Your druggist has it at 25c., 50c., and $1.00 per bottle.

"Could We But Know."

Could we but know the secret cares
That lurk in every mortal breast,
We ne'er, by thoughtless word or deed,
Would add one pang to that unrest.

Could we but know of cruel wounds
That throb and beat in many a heart,
How would we strive, by tenderest touch,
Some balm of healing to impart!

Could we but know what thorny paths
Full many weary pilgrims tread,
Would we not count it blessed boon
Sweet flowers on such dark paths to shed?

We cannot know. But if we list
To what the whispering angels say,
We, to our fellowmen, will be
Gentle and merciful alway.

To help the needy, cheer the sad,
And give the erring kindly care,
This—this will make the unseen cross
Of heavy hearts less hard to bear.

Farm and Garden.

Substitute for Butter.

The trade in oleomargarine, butterine, lardine, and all the other "ines," says the St. Louis Republican, threaten the industry of the diary business. Without investigation one would hardly be aware to what extent these substitutes for butter are sold as butter by retail grocers and butter peddlers in our cities and manufacturing villages and towns. The sale of these unctuous mixtures is hard to prevent, for several reasons, some of which are stated below.

In the first place these products can be given the most beautiful color and of fair flavor, so that as long as it is kept cool and hard, it requires an expert to detect the fraud. People imagine that by paying the highest price and buying from reputable grocers they can feel safe, but this is not so as a rule. The fact is that the late investigations made in Chicago developed affidavits to the effect that some of the creameries have been the heaviest purchasers of the crude lardine. They mix it with their butter to a considerable extent, and the dealer who buys from them in good faith is really selling an adulterated stuff which is unhealthful, no matter how clean.

The creameries have been forced to this course because the lardine manufacturers could produce as salable an article at half the price. Dealers are, therefore, sorely tempted to engage in the traffic because of the enormous profit, and the number who do knowingly engage in it is large. If the art of butter-making were better understood by farmers, we believe all who are accessible to the city could bring in their butter and sell it at $1 a pound, to weekly customers, who would gladly take it at that price if they could have confidence in its purity. But farmers have such a poor reputation as butter-makers, that their diary products do not sell well. The lardine which shows such a gilt-edged hue when cold, frequently gives itself away if warmed a little, when the white streaks and salvy texture show the fraud.

Many people who have a desire for hot cakes at breakfast wonder why it is that their appetites cloy so much more quickly than of old. They can easily understand it if they will reflect that of the big chunk of butter used one-half was clear lard. The compound can be made passable to the palate, but in the stomach the chemical action of digestion quickly analyzes the mixture. Butter is easily digested and can be eaten in considerable quantity, but lard, no matter how pure, is a nauseating, sickening indigestible dose. A teaspoonful would probably destroy the appetite of the average man, and the average man who eats creamery butter will be lucky to-day if he does not take at least that amount of lard at every meal. If there be any specially dark and loathsome dungeon in the penitentiary, it would seem to be too good a place for those who manufacture this stuff and sell it for butter. In Chicago there are very large factories, as there are in Boston. It is bad enough where the choicest leaf lard of freshly killed hogs is used, but when it comes to using the grease of dead animals, purchased at the stock-yards, it ought to be sufficient to raise a little enthusiasm in the health department, to see what can be done to stop this fraudulent traffic, so prevalent when butter is dear, as it has been the past winter.—Boston Traveller.

ROSE CULTURE. Any good garden soil will grow roses. A rich loam well enriched with well decomposed manure is to be preferred. Do not use fresh stable manure. Pruning may be done during the growing season to get the plants into fine form. This for heavy sorts is desirable; their shape can be easily controlled by pinching off the young growth after the plant has attained the heighth desired. When protection is removed in the spring all the dead branches should be cut out.

Household Receipts.

CREAM BISCUITS. Delicious little cream biscuits for tea are made by mixing self-raising flour with cream, which roll into a thin smooth paste; prick, cut, and bake immediately. They should be kept dry in a close tin box. If the flour is not self-raising salt it lightly, and mix with it a dessert-spoonful of baking powder.

STEAMED PUDDING. One coffee-cupful of buttermilk, one third of a cupful of sugar, one egg, a little salt, a heaping tea-spoonful of soda, about three and one-half tea-cupfuls of flour, and one small cupful of raisins. Steam two hours.

Temperance.

[Furnished for publication by the W. C. T. Union.]

Waste, 1,200,000,000.

CONTINUED.

We cannot take into our minds any such vast amount. It is enough to make a rich country poor. It is certain if we waste that amount in drink we cannot have it to do anything else with. If we make the grain into drink, we cannot have it to eat. If the man wastes his time in drink he is not raising food nor earning clothing for himself and family, and they are all the poorer for it. If the money is used in building breweries and distilleries, it cannot be used for building school-houses, and clothing children and sending them to school, nor for any other good purpose.

Instead of doing good it does harm. It goes down the throat of the drinkers to poison them, causing sorrow and disease and crime and poverty from one end of the land to the other. You and I help pay for it. It is not possible to lose so large a sum of money out of the country every year and we not feel it. It comes to us in this way: Crime and poverty and accidents make the taxes higher, and that makes the rents higher and the cost of our homes greater to every one of us. Merchants and grocers and shop keepers of all kinds having heavier taxes, charge us more for everything we buy. Every new hat, book or pair of shoes you have costs more than it would but for the drink. Even if none of your friends drink, they must help pay this immense drink bill. It often makes them work very hard, and it prevents your having things as good, as nice and as often as you would have but for this vast amount of drinking.

The drinking man suffers the most, besides making us all so much expense. In the first place it costs him what he pays out for the drink. When he begins he thinks it little, but reckon up some of these littles and see what they amount to. If a young man at twenty-one drinks one glass of beer every day at five cents a glass, what will it amount to in one year? in two years? We will suppose he next drinks two glasses a day, how much will that amount to for three years? How much will that be for the whole five years? If he drinks three glasses a day for the next four years, how much will that be? How much will it be for the whole nine years? How old will he be by that time? How much would it cost in a year for three glasses a day, at five cents each? How many suits of new clothes would that buy for his little boy, at $10.25 each? There are many families where the boys and girls never get any new suits from one end of the year to the other, because their father spends his money for drink. There are thousands and thousands of cases where it costs the drinker all his property, scatters his family, and brings him at last to the poor-house and a pauper's grave.

"Spirit of peace and health and power,
Fountain of life and light below,
Abroad thy healing influence shower,
O'er all the nations let it flow
Inspire our hearts with perfect love,
In us the work of faith fulfil,
So not heaven's host shall swifter move
Than we on earth to do thy will."

Anecdotes.

"Every one must eat his peck of dirt before he dies," said a meek waiter, in answer to a remonstrance about a dirty-edged soup-plate.

"Yes you dog," retorted the customer, "but not on one plate."

"Pa," said a child, thirsting for knowledge, "they say that beavers are the most industrious of animals. What do they make?"

"Beaver hats, my child—beaver hats," replied the father.

At a young ladies' seminary recently, during an examination in history, one of the pupils was interrogated thus: "Mary, did Martin Luther die a natural death?"

"No," was the reply; "he was excommunicated by a bull."

"A four-year-old boy lying in a bed in which his brother was also to sleep replied, when his mother exclaimed: "Why, Tommy, you are lying right in the middle of the bed; what will poor Harry do?"

"Well, mother, Harry has got both sides."

A Washington man went out to hunt up a coachman, met a good-looking negro, and asked if he could recommend anybody. The negro said he could not.

"What are you doing, yourself?" said the servant-hunter, "why can't I hire you?"

"I am not doing anything just now," was the reply; "but I expect to have a seat in Congress in a few days. My name is Lynch, and I am contesting the seat of Gen. Chalmers."

Walnut Leaf Hair Restorer.

It is entirely different from all others. It is as clear as water, and, as its name indicates, is a perfect Vegetable Hair Restorer. It will immediately free the head from all dandruff, restore grey hair to its natural color, and produce a new growth where it has fallen off. It does not in any manner affect the health, which Sulphur, Sugar of Lead, and Nitrate of Silver preparations have done. It will change light or faded hair in a few days to a beautiful glossy brown. Ask your druggist for it. Each bottle is warranted. Chas. N. Crittenton, New York, and Geo. C. Goodwin & Co., Boston, wholesale agts. S 24po

The President of the Andover Farmers' Club, at Andover, Mass., has been experimenting with Phosphates, and reports the following results:—

"I experimented last year with Bradley's Phosphate, in comparison with a special manure for corn and a home-made super-phosphate. The field had a light coat of manure. Two rows were planted with each kind, alternating through the whole field. I used about a heaping tablespoonful in the hill, calculating that I used the same value of each kind. They were harvested separately, and each lot weighed. Where I used Bradley's Phosphate, the yield was one hundred and eleven bushels per acre, calling seventy-six pounds of ears a bushel of shelled corn. Neither of the others equalled this by a number of bushels, and the home-made article was very far behind. I am satisfied that this Phosphate is the best and cheapest fertilizer I can buy."

ST. JOSEPH SATURDAY DEMOCRAT, Aug 27, 1881.

A Friend to the Friendless.

Sorrow and sickness is the two common heritage of humanity, and when we see how little is done to alleviate the miseries of the great mass of humanity we are almost out of patience with life. Even where the intentions are best, ignorance is prone to bid the afflicted "suffer and be strong," instead of "ministering to the mind diseased," or laying a hand of healing on the poor tortured body.

Ah! when Science and Philanthrophy, with love and sympathy and skill, come to the aid of the sufferers, they feel as if the angel of annunciation had drawn near.

Samaritan Nervine really is salvation to thousands. I speak from a full heart when I say it, for friends very near and dear to me have been restored to health and happiness by the means of it.

"God bless Dr. Richmond," said one of them to me the other day. "I feel as I know the man mentioned in Scripture must have felt when he went from Jerusalem to Jericho and fell among thieves, and when robbed and at the point of death, was befriended and restored to health by the Good Samaritan."

"Yes," he continued, "that was exactly my condition. I had spent a fortune in doctors and patent medicines. Everything I could hear of I tried, so desperate was my situation, but I grew worse steadily, until some kind friend told me of the Samaritan Nervine. Since taking it I am, as you see, restored to perfect healthy.

With such incontrovertible proof of the beneficent nature of the remedy, it is not strange that an editor, always solicitous for an accurate knowledge of what could benefit the world in general, should take the earliest opportunity of visiting the inventor and proprietor of the medicine at the World's Epileptic Institute.

We found the doctor in his elegant private office busily engaged in superintending the gentleman whose business it is to attend to the details of the immense correspondence which is a natural result of his wide-spread reputation.

On making known our wishes, he very kindly accompanied us in our tour of inspection through the magnificent building and grounds.

Almost as soon as we entered the office our attention was arrested by a wonderful collection of photographs, numbering somewhere in the thousands. All nations, ages and stations were presented. The elegant carte of the society leader was side by side with the picture of the humble artisan; innocent childhood and withered old age showed in their counterfeit presentments the gratitude they could not speak; doctors, lawyers ministers of the gospel, soldiers, laborers, plain mothers of families, haughty children of wealth, rich and poor, high and low, black and white, all were represented. It reminded me of the miracle cures of Europe, only instead of the crutches bandages, gold, silver and wax images of the recuperated pilgrims, left before the shrine of the miracle worker, Dr. Richmond has as testimonials the pictures of his deeply grateful patients.

"You must feel very happy, doctor, when you look at this collection," he said.

"Ah! yes," said the doctor pleasantly, "but if you like my Art Gallery, what would you say to my Library?"

He led the way to the next apartment, and we followed, expecting only to see perhaps one bookcase filled with dusty tomes of abstract science. Instead, the walls were lined with very handsome bookcases, containing over one hundred thousand unsolicited testimonials from those whom the Nervine had cured.

"How wonderfully fortunate as well as talented you are," we exclaimed in amazement. "The Nervine has proved a perfect gold mine."

The doctor looked at us reproachful.

"I am not one to underestimate the value of wealth," he answered, "for I have known what it is to be without it, but what is the most colossal fortune that was ever in the grasp of mortal man in comparison to the good my remedy is doing? Picture to yourself, if you can, what must be the feeling of an epileptic. Think of him with his dreadful disease so long pronounced incurable. He cannot take part in the studies, duties, employments, recreations or amusements of an ordinary fellow being. He is an object of horror rather than of pity to his friends. His malady never stands still, it is constantly growing worse and more dreadful in all its phases. Last and most dreadful before him stands the awful phantom of insanity. Sleeping and waking he feels that it is there, and that sooner or later it will clutch him; and it does. An epileptic must be, like Job, tempted to curse Heaven and die. Why, it would bring tears to your eyes to read a letter I received from a gentleman at Potsdam, New York, telling how he had two thousand dreadful fits in eighteen months, and is now, thanks to the Nervine, entirely cured. That poor fellow can scarcely find words strong enough to express his feelings. That's the kind of a thing to make a man feel happy.

Commonwealth of Massachusetts

NORFOLK, ss. PROBATE COURT.

TO all persons interested in the estate of

THOMPSON BAXTER,

late of Quincy, in said County, deceased,

GREETING:

Whereas, Daniel S. Baxter, the remaining Executor of the will of said deceased, has presented for allowance the final account of his administration upon the estate of said deceased:

You are hereby cited to appear at a Probate Court to be holden at Dedham, in said County of Norfolk, on the third Wednesday of May next, at nine o'clock in the forenoon, to show cause, if any you have, why the same should not be allowed.

And said Accountant is ordered to serve this Citation by publishing the same once a week, for three successive weeks, in the newspaper called the Quincy PATRIOT, printed at Quincy, the last publication to be two days at least, before said Court.

Witness, GEORGE WHITE, Esquire, Judge of said Court, this twenty-sixth day of April, in the year one thousand eight hundred and eighty-two.

NORFOLK, ss. PROBATE COURT.

TO the Next of Kin, and all others interested in the estate of

JOSEPH RICHARDS,

late of Quincy, in said County, deceased,

GREETING:

Whereas, Charles H. Webb, the administrator of the estate of said deceased, has presented for allowance the second and final account of his administration on said estate, and application has been made for a distribution of the balance in his hands among the next of kin of said deceased;

You are hereby cited to appear at a Probate Court to be holden at Dedham, in said County on the third Wednesday of May next, at nine o'clock in the forenoon, to show cause, if any you have, why said account should not be allowed and distribution made according to said application.

And said Charles H. Webb is ordered to serve this citation, by publishing the same once a week, in the Quincy PATRIOT, a newspaper printed at Quincy, three weeks, successively, the last publication to be two days, at least before said court.

Witness, GEORGE WHITE, Esquire, Judge of said Court, this twenty-second day of April in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and eighty-two.

Mortgagee's Sale of Real Estate.

BY Virtue of a power of sale contained in a certain Mortgage Deed given by Thomas H. Hayes to Henry H. Faxon, dated October 30th, 1880, and recorded in the Registry of Deeds for the County of Norfolk, Libro, 523, Folio 195, will be sold at Public Auction, for a breach of the conditions contained in the said mortgage, on the premises, on TUESDAY, the sixteenth day of May, 1882, at 4 o'clock in the afternoon, all and singular the premises conveyed by said Mortgage deed, namely:—

A certain lot of land with all the buildings thereon, situated in Quincy, in the County of Norfolk, and bounded and described as follows, viz: Northerly on land of Paul Wild, now or formerly, forty feet and six inches; easterly on Phipps street seventy-two feet; southerly on Water street, formerly called Liberty street, fifty feet and nine inches; westerly on land now or formerly belonging to said Paul Wild, sixty-six feet. Being the same premises described in, and now subject to, a certain mortgage given to said Faxon for fifteen hundred dollars.

$100 will be required to be paid in cash by the purchaser at the time and place of sale.

SAMARITAN

NERVINE

SAMARITAN NERVINE

Cures Epileptic Fits, Spasms, Convulsions, St. Vitus Dance, Vertigo, Hysterics, Insanity, Apoplexy, Paralysis, Rheumatism, Neuralgia and all Nervous Diseases. This infallable remedy will positively eradicate every species of Nervous Derangement, and drive them away from whence they came, never to return again. It utterly destroys the germs of disease, by neutralizing the hereditary taint or poison in the system, and thoroughly eradicates the disease, and utterly destroys the cause.

SAMARITAN NERVINE

Cures Female Weakness, General Debility, Leucorrhœa or Whites, Painful Menstruation, Ulceration of the Uterus, Internal Heat, Gravel Inflammation of the Bladder, Irritability of the Bladder. For Wakefulness at Night there is no better remedy. During the change of life no female should be without it. It quiets the Nervous system and gives rest, comfort and nature's sweet sleep.

SAMARITAN NERVINE

Cures Alcoholism, Drunkenness and the habit of Opium Eating. These degrading habits are by far the worst evils that have ever befallen suffering humanity. Thousands die annually from these noxious drugs. The drunkard drinks liquor not because he likes it, but for the pleasure of drinking and treating his friends, little thinking that he is on his road to ruin. Like the Opium Eater, he first uses the drug in small quantities as a harmless antidote. The soothing influence of the drug takes strong hold upon its victim, leading him on to his own destruction. The habits of Opium Eating and Liquor Drinking are precisely what eating is to alimentiveness, as over eating first inflames the stomach, which redoubles its cravings until it paralyzes both the stomach and appetite. So every drink of liquor or dose of opium, instead of satisfying, only adds to its fierce fires, until it consumes the vital force and then itself. Like the glutionous tape-worm, it cries, "Give, give, give!" but never enough until its own rapacity devours itself. Samaritan Nervine gives instant relief in all such cases. It produces sleep, quiets the nerves, builds up the nervous system, and restores body and mind to a healthy condition.

SAMARITAN NERVINE

Cures Nervous Dyspepsia, Palpitation of the Heart, Asthma, Bronchitis, Scrofula, Syphilis, diseases of the Kidneys, and all diseases of the urinary organs. Nervous debility, caused by the indiscretions of youth, permanently cured by this invaluable remedy. To you young, middle-aged and old men, who are covering your sufferings as with a mantle, by silence, look up, you can be saved by timely efforts, and make ornaments to society, and jewels in the crown of your Maker, if you will. Do not keep this a secret longer, until it saps your vitals, and destroys both body and soul. If you are thus afflicted, take DR. RICHMOND'S Samaritan Nervine. It will restore your shattered nerves, arrest premature decay, impart tone and energy to the whole system.

SAMARITAN NERVINE

Cured my little girl of fits. She was also deaf and dumb, but it cured her. She can now talk and hear as well as anybody.

Various Causes—

Advancing years, care, sickness, disappointment, and hereditary predisposition—all operate to turn the hair gray, and either of them inclines it to shed prematurely. AYER'S HAIR VIGOR will restore faded or gray, light or red hair to a rich brown or deep black, as may be desired. It softens and cleanses the scalp, giving it a healthy action. It removes and cures dandruff and humors. By its use falling hair is checked, and a new growth will be produced in all cases where the follicles are not destroyed or the glands decayed. Its effects are beautifully shown on brashy, weak, or sickly hair, on which a few applications will produce the gloss and freshness of youth. Harmless and sure in its results, it is incomparable as a dressing, and is especially valued for the soft lustre and richness of tone it imparts.

AYER'S HAIR VIGOR is colorless; contains neither oil nor dye; and will not soil or color white cambric; yet it lasts long on the hair, and keeps it fresh and vigorous, imparting an agreeable perfume.

For sale by all druggists.

Assessors' Notice.

To the Inhabitants and all other Persons liable to pay taxes in the Town of Quincy.

THE ASSESSORS of the Town of Quincy hereby give notice to the inhabitants of said town, and all persons liable to pay taxes therein, that they will be at the office of the Selectmen, EVERY SATURDAY in May, from 2 to 4½ o'clock P. M., and from May 27th until June 3d every day from 8 to 10 o'clock A. M., to receive the valuation of Estates; and all persons liable to be taxed in said Town, are hereby required to bring in at said office, a true and correct schedule of the Real and Personal Estates, for which they are liable to pay taxes.

MORTGAGED REAL ESTATE.

"Any mortgagor or mortgagee of real estate may bring in to the assessors of the town or city where such real estate lies," within the time specified in this notice, "a statement, under oath, of the amount due on each separate lot or parcel of such real estate, and the name and residence of every holder of an interest therein as mortgagee or mortgagor. When such property is situated in two or more places, or when a recorded mortgage includes for one sum two or more estates or parts of an estate, an estimate of the amount of the mortgagee's interest in each estate or part of an estate shall be given in such statement."—[Chap. 175 of the Acts of 1882.] When a statement in conformity with the law above quoted is brought in, the real estate therein returned will be assessed under sections 14, 15 and 16, of chapter 11 of the Public Statutes. But in cases where the Mortgagor of the real estate has agreed in writing to pay all taxes assessed thereon, NO STATEMENT OR RETURN IS REQUIRED from either mortgagee or mortgagor, unless requested by the assessors in writing.

Persons holding estates in trust are requested to furnish the Assessors with statements in relation to such estates.

When estates of persons deceased have been divided during the past year, or have changed hands from some other causes, the executor or administrator is required to give notice of such change. In default of such notice he will be held responsible for the tax assessed.

Any person bringing in a list of his taxable property will be assessed upon the valuation thereof, and any one neglecting to furnish the assessors with such list, within the time above specified, will at a legal meeting of the Board of Assessors, be doomed according to the laws of the Commonwealth.

All persons will take notice that statements of personal property must be in writing and subscribed under oath before one of the Assessors, at their office, on or before the 3d day of June; and that the personal property of all taxable persons must be estimated by the Board of Assessors, notwithstanding a verbal statement or informal written communication to any one or more of the Assessors.

When a person has failed to bring in a list or schedule of all his taxable property, in conformity to this notice, no abatement of a tax assessed upon such person for such property can be granted, unless such tax exceeds by more than fifty per centum the amount which would have been assessed to that person on personal estate.

LIFE.

The sunlight struggled feebly
Through the clouds that August day,
As we watched the white-winged vessels,
Go sailing down the bay.

And I said, 'tis but a picture
Of the life we lead below;
One time in the sombre shadow,
Next beneath the sun's bright glow.

Some there are who struggling bravely,
Reach the point they would attain,
While there's some, like floating sea drift,
Buffeted by wind and rain.

Till they quite lose faith and courage,
Deem themselves misfortune's prey,
And, like many a noble vessel,
On the rocks are cast away.

My First Brood of Chickens.

BY RUSS B. WALKER.

How short a time it seems, as I look back to the day mother gathered the eggs in her apron, one early spring morning, and put them into the nest of the old cropple-crowned black hen!

This biddy was a very important body in her own opinion. She strutted more proudly, cackled louder, and scratched more recklessly than any other on the farm. Father could tell her work on any garden bed at a glance, for she dug deeper than any other hen, and with a total disregard of the proprieties, scratching up everything her muscular claws came in contact with, throwing the dirt in all directions, regardless of consequences. Strange what work one hen will make with a nice garden bed! strange how the men who build them should keep their tempers, and stranger that mother earth can so soon repair all damages to the seemingly ruined vegetation.

Previous to the gathering of the eggs, old croppie-crown had been putting on lots of frills and airs. She turned her feathers all wrong side out, at times; talked to herself; was impudent to the rooster, and one would have thought, from her behavior, that she "ruled the roost." She kicked dirt into the eyes of her companions, and made herself generally disagreeable; in fact to such an extent, that when she began "to set," as they called it, every one was glad of it.

What a picture of patience, hope and perseverance, faith and trust, is a setting hen! From the time she sat down on those thirteen eggs her demeanor entirely changed. Day after day came and went, and still she remained faithful—faithful unto life in this case; only leaving the nest long enough to get a few mouthfuls to eat and a drink of water. At these times she was quite talkative with herself, evidently speculating regarding the future brood. She felt the dignity of her position, and paid no attention to the other hens, and when Mr. Rooster said good morning, she never answered him, but hastened back to her high trust, and resumed the quiet and silence so becoming to one in her place. I used to wonder what she was thinking about, all those long days and nights! Building "castles in the air," I presume, and making up her mind how the expected chicks should be reared and educated; wondering how many would be white, how many black, and what number speckled.

I grew terribly impatient as the time drew near for the chickens to make their appearance, and tried one day to take the old hen off the nest, to see how things were getting along, but she flew at me in such a rage that I was glad enough to get out of her way at once.

Another time I put dainty crumbs, and kernels of wheat before her, but she paid no attention to them whatever; never turned her head even, and I finally came to the conclusion that I might as well wait patiently.

Upon informing mother of my attempts to investigate, she said I must never go near the nest, nor by any means touch the hen, as she might break the eggs, or perhaps pick my eyes out. I didn't molest her after that, and a few days later, to my great joy and satisfaction, I saw my old cropple-crown come marching out of the barn with eleven of the nicest chickens that were ever hatched. Four pure white ones; four jet black, and three speckled. Weren't they lovely?

Old cropple-crown was prouder than ever. Didn't she scratch? often knocking over her own pets in trying to show off. She talked to the chicks all day long; and when night came on, and she gathered them under her wings, she still kept up her baby chat in a low tone until no enquiring peep was heard. As the summer came on, their bright yellow legs grew longer, their downy jackets changed to nice little feathers, their eyes grew bright, their bills stronger, and they actually began scratching for themselves.

One morning only ten of the brood could be found. We hunted high and low, far and near, and counted them over forty times, but only ten—only ten were left. We laid its disappearance to the cat; but mother said puss knew better, and, besides, if she would do such a cruel thing, she might have eaten them all up long before. Sure enough; so Tabby was acquitted.

That afternoon I went to a cistern that was set in the ground at the corner of the barn, to get mother a pail of water, and lo! there was poor chicken dead on the surface. I took it up tenderly and carried it to mother. She left her work, and came to sympathize with me. She folded the pretty wings, and put the little feet together, closed the eyes and put it in a neat box for burying. We dug a little grave under one of the syringa bushes in the front yard, and, in the early twilight, buried the "poor unfortunate." I tell you there have been grand funerals, surrounded with the pomp and pride of plumed parade, that have had fewer sincere mourners, than attended that little buriel under the eaves of the old farmhouse at Claremont.

For quite a while after nothing occurred to mar our felicity. Old cropple proved a splendid mother, and well calculated to bring up a brood. She taught them to be industrious and economical, and instructed them how to catch bugs and grass-hoppers, how to tell crickets from wasps, and many other things that all chickens ought to know. She brooded them until they were too big to get under her wings, and then showed them how to get on the roost at night.

At this point, I am very sorry to say, I noticed something on the part of the chickens that very much lowered them in my estimation. For weeks and months, whenever their mother called them they ran eagerly to her with outstretched necks, but now, I observed, that they paid her but little attention, and frequently none at all. She was as devoted as ever, and whenever she found a choice morsel, she would sing out, but sometimes to no avail.

Father said they were ungrateful things, and he had known children guilty of just such conduct. Yes! after all the pains, trouble, care, anxiety, watching and trials that a mother endures, he said some children were ungrateful, disrespectful, even unkind, and often disobedient. Too dreadful to be true. I found later in life that father was quite right; but it has ever remained a mystery to me how anybody can call one good or pretty who is an undutiful son or daughter.

The summer wore away, and as autumn approached the chickens outgrew all their prettiness. They were a long-legged, "awkward squad," a noisy, mischievous, cackling set, and quarrelsome withal. They treated old cropple-crown as they did any other hen, and no one would have thought that the slightest relation existed between them. Mother said she couldn't understand it, and I am sure it passed my comprehension altogether. Father said, "'twas ever thus" with the lowest animals, with beasts and birds, and with human beings when brains are scarce and hearts are small.

One afternoon we heard a great outcry, and, upon rushing out, found that big a hawk had swooped down and seized one of the chickens. I remember so well how he looked, with his wide-spread white wings, and poor pullet in his curled up claws, as he sailed away over the meadows, over the woods beyond, and finally out of sight. I didn't feel half so badly about it as I did when the little one was drowned in the cistern. Of course I was mad at the hawk, and wanted him shot, because he was a thief. When he returned, a day or two after, father put a bullet through him, and hung him up by one leg to a pole in the garden, as a warning to such birds to keep away.

At Thanksgiving we had chicken pie, chicken fricasseed, and chicken roasted, and I must say my earlier sentiment disappeared before their savory taste and smell.

To Keep Out Moths.

Buy the tar paper in sheets from the drug store. It costs fifty cents for a dozen large sheets. Have the woolen articles well brushed, and wipe off with a little diluted ammonia any grease spots, as these are the places where it is most likely the moth will have laid its eggs. That is the reason the moth holes are frequently found on the front of the waistcoat, or front breadths of the dress. If you see any suspicious looking white films upon the cloth, secure against these by pressing them with a hot iron over a damp cloth. It is claimed by some that the tar paper not only will keep out moths, but that it will even destroy the grub. But this is not so sure, so take care that there are no moth films or white specks upon the garments you put away and you may safely trust the tar paper to keep them out. The most delicate white woolens and furs can be laid away in this paper without any protection, as the tar does not rub off. For the large fur-lined garments, if you send these to a trusty furrier, he will insure them. If you do not care to do this, envelope the cloak at its full length with tar paper, and then sew it up in a coarse linen bag, hanging it up as if it was a canvas covered ham. The coarse glossy gray linen that comes so cheap for ulsters and summer coats is the right thing, as it is slippery enough to repel the moths. Moths like soft nests and do not like linen fibre. The tar paper alone is sufficient if you put the cloak away in a chest. If you hang it up it is best to have a bag for it.

Mr. Horace Searle tells how he raised profitable crops without manure. He says:—

"Two years ago, I tried Bradley's Phosphate on one and one-fourth acres of corn, using one-half ton of it broadcast, without other manure. From this I harvested one hundred bushels of sound shelled corn. Last year, I sowed this field with oats, putting on no manure; and I had a very good crop, as much as I should have expected to get from a liberal dressing of barn-yard manure. I am satisfied that the strength of this Phosphate is not exhausted by the first crop."

"This year, I used six hundred pounds of Bradley's Phosphate to the acre for corn, no other manure being used, and I had as good a crop of corn as any one in town."

Washington Letter.

WASHINGTON, May 9, 1882.

No death since that of the late President has caused more sorrow in Washington than that of Major Twining, President of the Board of Commissioners for the District of Columbia. You know, perhaps, that the District of Columbia and the Territory of Alaska are the only despotisms over which the stars and stripes wave, all the other states and territories, whether composed of railroads or ranches, have a representative government. That is, the railroads and ranches vote. The District of Columbia, though partaking of both the nature of a railroad and a ranch, cannot vote. No citizen of Washington can exercise this sovereign right or rite. But Washington has been all the happier and cleaner for the deprivation of the ballot-box. If it had been in her power to select a governor, aristocrat, autocrat, Democrat, she would not have selected one so wise, honest, and able as Major Twining. He came to take charge of the improvements of the National Capital at a time when there was great dissatisfaction, on account of the dilatory and uncertain manner in which great contracts for improvements had been given out and performed during the four years that followed the removal of the Board of Public Works. He soon showed that he was master of the situation, and quietly impressed upon his two associates the force of his ability. There are three District Commissioners, but Napoleon the First was not more the head of the Government, when ruled by the triumvirate Bonaparte, Seges, and Camberces, than was Major Twining the autocrat in the matter of District improvements. He had none of the arrogant supercilliousness, that usually attaches to a West Pointer placed in an important civil position. He was courteous and kind to those under him, and the meeting of the District employes on Saturday, tears attested the genuineness of their sorrow at the loss of the Commissioner. His death is regarded by property owners as a real calamity, and much anxiety is felt in relation to the appointment of his successor.

To-day, the appeal of Guiteau to the Court in banc, will be heard. The Chief Justice is desirous that a full bench, with the exception of Judge Cox—who is prohibited by law from sitting on a case originally tried by him—shall sit on this appeal. But Judge Wylie's time is so completely taken up with the Star Route cases that he will not be able to leave court. Four Judges, Carter, James, Hagner, and McArthur, will, at all events, occupy the bench. The Government will be represented by Messrs. Corkhill and Davidge, while Mr. Charles Reed, of Chicago, will appear for Guiteau.

The National Ladies Aid Society of the Garfield Memorial Hospital, held a fair in the Rotunda of the Capitol last Saturday evening, the object of which was to raise money for the proposed hospital. The fair was attended by the President, and by the elite of Washington official, diplomatic, and social circles. Many of the different states were represented by distinctive booths or pavilions, from which chicken salads, coffee, deviled crabs, etc., were sold by the fair maids and matrons at fabulous prices. It is not yet known how much was realized, but it is supposed that the fund for the hospital was considerably increased.

Unitarianism in Chicago.

Since the resignation of Mr. Miln as pastor of Unity Church, another Unitarian clergyman has terminated his connection here and gone, or is going, to Boston. The reasons why the former's resignation was asked for are of course known, as much has been said of them in the newspapers. Brooke Hereford's reasons were very simple and easily understood. First, as Boston is something less than a thousand miles nearer to Old England, he would be nearer home! Second, the ministry in Chicago requires a good deal of energy and hard work—that which is similarly displayed in business affairs, to keep pace with the times, and for one not accustomed to such an energetic life, Boston is far more preferable.

Chicago has but three Unitarian Churches, "Unity," "Church of the Messiah," late Mr. Hereford's Church, and one other, smaller and less important. Though there are three churches there is but one Unitarian minister. I say Unitarian though this gentleman, Mr. Coivl, was recently called from a Methodist Church. One Unitarian (?) minister in a city of 650,000 inhabitants!

Mr Miln, who left the pulpit of Unity never to preach again, leaves Chicago in a short time for Dakota, there to enter upon a far different career from what he has been accustomed. The newspapers have published many rumors in relation to what his future course would be, notably that he would go on the stage—on the lecture platform, or be the head and teacher of a Society for the study and promulgation of Natural Philosophy; all of which are without foundation. His future career will probably be either that of an editor or lawyer.

☞ A noble man had married three wives who had been his servants. A beggar woman meeting him one day in the street made him a very low courtesy. "Ah! bless your lordship," she said, "and send you long life, for if you do but live long enough we shall all be ladies in time."

☞ At twenty a man is sure he knows everything; at thirty he begins to have grave doubts; at forty he knows there are some things he don't know; at fifty he is certain that he will never again know as much as he once knew.

Memorial Day.

Commander-in-Chief George S. Merrill of the Grand Army of the Republic has issued the following order for the observance of Memorial day:

In accordance with the provisions of rules and regulations, Tuesday, the 30th day of May, will be observed as Memorial day.

It is hoped that the unprecedented growth of the Grand Army during the past year will be an incentive to preparation for such a universal observance as belongs to this day of sweet memories and tender service.

Scarcely do we realize the swiftness of the flying years; that to a whole generation to-day the story of the war against the rebellion is but a bit of history; year by year we are marching with lessened tread to the growing circle of the patriot graves where sleep the silent forms of old comrades in arms.

To the ever lengthening roll of those already passed from our ranks to join the invisible host beyond, the past year has added the conspicuous names of our beloved comrades, Stephen A. Hurlbut, the first, and Ambrose E. Burnside, third commander-in-chief of our organization, and our great nation has watched through weary weeks of anguish at the bedside, and wept beside the tomb of its stricken soldier President.

Upon the bud and blossom, leaf and laurel, we one year ago laid upon the grass-grown mounds, has fallen the heat of summer and the snow of winter, and their beauty and perfume has gone forever; but as we join in these sadly sweet ceremonies the story of valor and patriotism we will keep as sweet in our memories and as fragrant to our hearts as when for the first time we came to bedeck these shrines with the early offerings of an opening spring.

To the country these fallen comrades offered the service and sacrifice of their lives; let us reverently give one day in loyal devotion to their memories; search out every one of their known resting places, so that in all our broad land, wherever exists a post of the Grand Army, not a single grave of a Union soldier or sailor shall be unvisited—not one which willing fingers and grateful hearts do not unite to cover with myrtle and evergreen, entwined with bright blossoms, upon which the glad sunlight has painted something of eternal beauty, tokens of life's fraility, emblems of valor's immortality.

☞ A man traveling in the upper part of New England and seeing a laborer at work in a field said, rather pityingly to him: "You must have a hard time of it, this land is so rocky and barren?" And the laborer replied: "Yes, stranger, it is poor land. But don't think I am as poor as I seem; I don't own any of it."

☞ An old sailor was observed to be always hanging about the door of a church when a marriage was taking place. He explained that he liked to see the tied going out.

Woman's Column.

Mrs. L. G. Coburn, a lady of San Antonio, Texas, has 40,000 silk worms at work in her yard.

The Illinois Woman Suffrage Convention will convene in executive session at Moline, Thursday and Friday, May 25 and 26, 1882.

Dr. Anna Warren, of Emporia, Kas., has a practice of $5,000 a year, besides mining interests, that will give her a competence in old age.

A social festival to be held in Boston on the evening of May 31, is a new and attractive feature of the Woman Suffrage work in New England.

The bill prohibiting the disfranchisement of women has passed the third reading in the New York Assembly by seventy-seven affirmative votes, and it is believed that the Senate will concur.

Miss Lizzie Sargent, the younger daughter of the Minister to Germany, intends to pursue her medical studies at a Germany university. She is already a qualified physician, having been graduated at the Pacific Medical College.

Mrs. H. F. Crocker and Mrs. H. A. Johns were appointed April 17, as Police Matrons to look after women prisoners in police stations and courts, through the action of the First Brooklyn Woman's Christian Temperance Union, which furnishes the money for the purpose.

Several ladies are employed on the staff of computers in the astronomical observatory of Harvard College. We believe that women have shown themselves specially competent in the ordinary reductions of observations in more than one European observatory.

At the last November election held in the city of Cheyenne, Wyoming Territory, 1,434 votes were polled, 510 of which were voted by the women. This proportion confirms the recent statement of Governor Hoyt that women vote in proportion as largely as the men in Wyoming.

The progress of women towards complete parity with men in all the relations of business is illustrated by the establishment of an advertising agency at No. 110 Tremont street, Boston, Blaisdell & Foster; and the proprietors are Misses L. A. Blaisdell and E. F. Foster.

Mr. W. E. Kollock, of Madison, Wisconsin, has four daughters. The two oldest are well-educated physicians with large practice; the third is a successful and popular minister of a church in a Chicago suburb; the fourth is a successful dentist at Chicago.

The Senate of the General Assembly of Rhode Island, by special committee on women's relation to the laws and the constitution, made report, recommending no action at this time, in view of the fact that the question of a constitutional convention is to be submitted to the electors.

The Dramatic Entertainment.

A large and appreciative audience greeted Miss Elsie Russell last Wednesday evening, at the testimonial given her in the Town Hall by the Lyceum Dramatic Company of Boston. The programme consisted of "Lady Audley's Secret" and the popular Comedietta, "The Happy Pair." The music was furnished by Nason's Orchestra. Rarely have we seen so successful a presentation by amateurs of anything so complex as Lady Audley. The club deserve great praise for carrying out so brilliantly an undertaking which only those behind the scenes can truly estimate.

As Lady Audley, Miss Russell showed a degree of artistic merit which might render her a successful candidate for the legitimate stage. In the closing scene she was especially effective. She possesses the power of transition from grave to gay and proves her dramatic ability to be of wide range, by assuming with equal facility the tragic rôle of Lady Audley and the playful badinage of Mrs. Honeyton in "The Happy Pair."

Mr. Carl Stein as Mr. Honeyton and also as Sir Michael Audley was most excellent in both action and make up.

Quincy may be congratulated upon its success this season in dramatic entertainments; no small portion of which has been due to Miss Russell's efforts and talent.

Decoration Day.

The dedication of the new Crane Memorial Hall, together with the customary observance of Decoration Day, will make Quincy a lively place on that day. A special invitation has been extended to the Rural Lodge of Masons to dedicate the library building, but we learn that the Grand Lodge of Massachusetts will be present and perform that part of the ceremonies, and that they will be escorted by the Rural Lodge, the South Shore Commandery of Knight Templars, Paul Revere Post, No. 88, of the G. A. R., and possibly by some of the other societies of the town. The fire companies hold special meetings Monday evening next, relative to taking part. After the dedication services the Masons and Knight Templars will adjourn to the quarters of the former, where an excellent dinner will be served by a first class caterer. Rural Lodge now numbers about 150 members, having taken in several new members this winter, and we expect to see a large turnout. They look forward with pleasure to this visit of the Grand Lodge, and the committee of Rural Lodge are making extensive preparation to entertain them.

DANCING SCHOOL BALL. In spite of the very stormy weather last Friday evening, the Town Hall has seldom contained a happier party. The occasion was a ball given by Russ B. Walker's large class of pupils in Quincy. The hall was filled soon after the doors opened. The class was about the largest Prof Walker ever had in this town, and numbered about eighty. The music was good, and Mr. Walker may well feel proud of the excellent dancing. The "military" was a feature of the evening and was admirably led. The lanciers could not be excelled. After the exhibition by the young people the older ones were allowed the privilege of dancing.

We understand that it is Prof. Walker's intention to open an evening class in the fall, and we predict it will be a large one, for many have expressed a wish that he should come.

ADAMS ACADEMY. On Saturday last the annual examinations in reading and declamation for the Adams Gold Medal took place. The readings were held in the Academy and the declamations at the Town Hall. The judges on speaking were His Excellency Gov. John D. Long, Elbridge Smith, of the Dorchester High School, Charles H. Barrows, Assistant Attorney General, Rev. H. Evan Cotton, Rector of Christ Church, Quincy, and Sylvester Brown, Superintendent of Schools, of Quincy. Thre gold medal was awarded to Charles F. Ayer, of Lowell, for declamation; other prizes were awarded to William W. Bruner, of San Francisco, Cal., Crosby C. Whitman, of Virginia, Nev., John G. Faxon, Perry Lawton and James F. Harlow, of Quincy.

OBITUARY. It is with feelings of sorrow we record the death of Mrs. Adam Vogel, of this town, after an illness, of about two weeks. Mrs. Vogel was a lady beloved by all who knew her, who had naught but a kind word for her many friends and acquaintances. On Monday evening last she quietly passed away surrounded by her family, who was always near and dear to her. Her funeral took place on Wednesday last, her remains being taken to St. Mary's Church, where a solemn requiem mass was celebrated by the Rev. F. A. Friguglietti, assisted by four priests, after which the remains of a kind mother and loving wife were taken to Mt. Wollaston Cemetery and interred in the family lot. The many friends of the family sympathize with them in the loss of one who was the light of their household.

THE QUINCY LIGHT INFANTRY. For many years this excellent body of soldiers was one of the prominent institutions of the town. It was incorporated, according to Pattee's History of Quincy, in 1790. In its ranks, for over half a century, were found many of our most influential citizens. In 1846, the company becoming reduced in numbers, the property belonging to it was sold at auction. Now, can any one of our numerous readers tell us who was the last clerk of the company? or, where is the orderly book of the company? In it could be found much of interest, that would be worthy of publication. A record of this organization should be preserved in the town library.

PERSONAL. The Peekskill Blade says "Rev. Professor Thwing, preached his farewell sermon last Sunday and sails this week for Europe. He has brought to his work scholastic attainments with which few are favored, and the prayers and pleadings of a sympathetic heart. He has kindled the flame of loving and lasting remembrance." The church to which he has ministered some 17 months, passed very hearty resolutions. He now has charge of Tolivers Square Church, London for June and perhaps July, going thence to Spain.

The Colony Railroad Company's [illegible] has advanced to $133 per share.

Brief Locals.

☞ A good family cow is offered for sale.

☞ May has the indications of being a cold wet month.

☞ The street sprinkler enjoys the weather this week.

☞ The trees are pushing forward their buds and blossoms.

☞ We are sorry to learn that Dr. James Morison is quite seriously sick.

☞ The Tiger Engine Company have a special meeting on Monday evening.

☞ Rev. Mr. Wilson will preach at the Quincy Home to-morrow, about 3 o'clock.

☞ About three inches of rain fell in Quincy during the storm the first of the week.

☞ The Willing Eight held a dance in Temperance Hall, West Quincy, on Thursday evening.

☞ The Boston Independent Fusileers will do escort duty for Paul Revere Post on Memorial Day.

☞ Sealed proposals will be received until 5 o'clock this afternoon for enlarging the Willard School House.

☞ Col. A. B. Packard will serve as marshal on Decoration Day, at the dedication of Crane Memorial Hall.

☞ The committee to purchase a steam fire engine will meet Monday evening to decide what make and size to purchase.

☞ Mr. Gardiner, manager of the Suburban Telephone Company, was in town Thursday, looking over the location of his line.

☞ Mr. Charles C. Brackett is building for a gentleman in Boston, a nice house on Greenleaf street, corner of Valley street.

☞ Horace S. Feltis is on a visit to his family, from Santa Rita, New Mexico. He intends to remain in Quincy for several weeks.

☞ Mr. Albert Keating has a very large stock of straw matting and carpeting, which he would be pleased to show to customers.

☞ The oration, at the dedication of Crane Memorial Hall, will be delivered in the Unitarian Church, by C. F. Adams, Jr., Esq.

☞ The Universalist Society have a parish meeting on Wednesday evening to take some action in relation to the improvements contemplated.

☞ If the dull stormy weather continues it is little doubtful if the Crane Memorial Hall and grounds are completed before Decoration Day.

☞ The Gamewell Fire Alarm Company has completed the setting of its portion of the poles, and will commence to run the wire next week.

☞ The frame of a house has been raised this week on the side of Knox's Hill, West Quincy, for Mr. E. H. Doble. Mr. Morrison is the contractor.

☞ Any persons owning lots in the Mount Wollaston Cemetery can have them repaired and kept in first-class order by applying to the Superintendent.

☞ An excellent story, with a good moral, from the pen of Mr. Russ B. Walker, will be found on our first page. His many friends in this place will read it with great interest.

☞ A workman at the quarry of Mr. Frederick J. Fuller, West Quincy, had his hand jammed on Wednesday last, by a chain slipping from a large piece of granite that was being hoisted.

☞ A very large gathering assembled at the sale of personal property of the late Albert Tirrell, in Weymouth, on Wednesday, including many citizens from Quincy. Mr. Lombard, the auctioneer, was in his glory.

☞ Four of the citizens drawn as jurors were notified to be at the Superior Court, at Dedham, this week:—Henry A. C. Adams, Franklin Curtis, Cotton C. Johnson, Chase Parker. Two capital cases were to be tried.

☞ The new seal, recently accepted by the town, is being engraved this week on one of the brown stone blocks at the right of the entrance to the Crane Memorial Hall, in place of the book formerly engraved on this block.

☞ The ladies of the Congregational Church are making extensive arrangements for an enjoyable affair to consist of a strawberry festival, dolls' reception and fancy articles for sale. Full particulars may be expected in our next issue.

☞ George Saville, Sealer of Weights and Measures, announces that he will be at the Selectmen's room on the four following Mondays, for the purpose of sealing such weights, beams, measures and milk-cans as may be brought to him. See Sealer's notice in another column.

☞ A large horse-chestnut tree in front of the Crane Library blew over last Sunday night, during the gale, and nearly blockaded Washington street. Next morning the saw and axe were put in motion, and by noon the trunk and limbs were cut short enough to be moved in a tip-cart.

☞ Rev. Mr. Eaton of Brighton will preach in the Universalist Church to-morrow. This gentleman occupied this pulpit one Sunday last month, and his discourse was considered a very able one. As he is a candidate, the society hopes that all persons interested in its welfare will be present.

☞ Quite a number of ladies and gentlemen from this town visited Nantasket Beach on Monday to see "the breaking waves dashed high." It is said that the early visitors were fortunate in seeing old ocean lashed into fury, some of the waves seeming) to be nearly an hundred feet high.

☞ The number of public carriages which are allowed to stand side of the depot platform, often cause the private teams a great deal of inconvenience. At times there is hardly room for people to drive up to the depot and alight, without walking in the mud, and the same thing happens in trying to reach their carriages after leaving the cars.

☞ The handsome terra cotta vase, on exhibition at Mr. Holden's, is the work of Richard E. Brooks, a son of the gate tender at the Quincy Adams station. It is with pleasure we give in another column a complimentary notice of this young man, and would say that it is hoped our citizens will aid and encourage him in pursuing his studies in this beautiful art, which is one of the oldest of mankind. The vase is for sale on shares, and the money thus secured will be appropriated to continuing his studies, thereby perfecting his rare talent.

Quincy Point Items.

Work on the Washington street improvement which was stopped during the storm, is again going on.

The captain of the schooner "Rommell" is having hard luck; three times within a week he has shipped crews and three times they have run away, the last with twelve dollars advance pay.

Quite a number of Point people attended the dance given by Russ B. Walker in the Town Hall last week.

A large three masted schooner has been ashore part of the week on Hunt's hill point, North Weymouth. It was discharging part of its cargo of lumber at the yard of Porter Keene and dragged its anchors during the gale of Sunday night; it was hauled off Wednesday.

Mr. Edwin Hill has purchased a sloop yacht about twenty-five feet long and well built.

The regular meeting of the Quincy Point Temperance Association was held Wednesday evening, quite a large audience being present. The exercises consisted of a second geological talk, (illustrated) by Rev. G. B. Lawton; papers upon the Chinese question by Messrs. W. F. Barry and H. M. Federhen, and singing by the audience.

For some time past, persons have been in the habit of crossing the land of Messrs. Smith and Mouland, and the latter now propose to put a stop to it and have put up signs forbidding trespassing. Lawyer Eldridge is to be engaged to prosecute all persons who do not heed the signs.

Mr. S. D. Ransdell has commenced work upon a new house for T. F. Hinckley, which is to be pleasantly located upon Billings street.

The Road Commissioners have had a few men at work here upon the streets cleaning away the stones and rubbish. It is hoped that they will make more extensive repairs upon the principal streets as they need it very much, having been neglected the past three or four years.

The fire alarm poles have been "planted" on Hancock street.

Active work has commenced on the Moon Island Sewer, and as a consequence a large number of drunken men have been seen in our streets, which calls out the question: "Why don't the Selectmen put on a policeman as they did last year?"

The Chemical Engine Company have unanimously voted to "turn out" on Decoration Day, and participate in the dedication of the new library building.

Gentlemen interested in yachting have taken steps toward organizing a yacht club.

The John Q. Adams Chemical Engine Company, No. 2, organized on the first Monday in the month, and elected the following as officers:

Foreman, Edward H. Richardson.
First Assistant, A. G. Nye.
Second Assistant, Fred Jenkins.

Rev. L. E. Charpiot, of Boston, is to deliver the oration on Decoration Day.

The old store at the corner of Washington and Pearl streets, formerly occupied by H. M. White, is being repaired. L. M. Rodgers, our stove dealer, is to occupy it as soon as finished.

On Monday of last week a son of Mr. James Holbrook, aged about 12 years, was playing with other boys on the verge of the pond at the paper mill. By some means he fell into the pond, and had gone under for the third time before he was taken from the water. Dr. Trafton was immediately called and after nearly two hours hard work, succeeded in resuscitating him.

NEW ENGLAND CONSERVATORY OF MUSIC. The concert given Wednesday afternoon last at Music Hall, Boston, furnished an interesting programme, which was fully attested by the large audience. Instrumental music was furnished by organ, piano and violin, noticeable in which was "Variations of a Theme of Haydn," for violin, by Alfred de Sive, winning repeated encore. Our townsman, Mr. S. R. Kelley, received a beautiful floral offering, a token of the pleasure experienced in his reading "Death of Marmion." Vocal music by Miss S. C. Fisher and Mr. L. C. Elson, added to the success.

District Court, Quincy.

The business before this Court is quiet, and but few complaints are being made:

Michael M. Brophy of Milton, and Thomas Haley of Boston, were brought before the Court for the larceny of two ducks and one hen of the value of six dollars, the property of George J. Leeds, of Milton. They were found guilty, and sent to the House of Correction for three months.

DECEASED. Mr. John T. Lyons, a former resident of Quincy, died at his home in Dorchester, on Sunday last, at the age of sixty-three years. He was a large dealer in Quincy granite. He moved some years ago from this town to Dorchester, and has been quite successful in business.

The Park Question.—No. 3.

To the Editors of the Patriot:

In my first communication I discussed the argument against a park on the score of its cost, and in my last the argument against it on the score that it would be a hardship to the poor; I now propose to discuss the argument against it on the ground of locality. This is always the rock ahead for every park-scheme. It would not be fair to call it the "dog-in-the-manger argument," because it is rather the argument of the dog who isn't in the manger against there being any manger at all. Those who live in the immediate neighborhood of any proposed park grounds can usually be counted upon to favor the project; those who live at a distance from it are apt to bring forward counter projects; and so one project is made to kill another, and a great and general public need remains unsupplied simply because local jealousies cannot be reconciled. This was what happened in Boston a few years ago. The outlying, thinly inhabited districts said that the central and crowded districts should have no park, because parks were not provided for all the districts at the same time.

In the case of Quincy, however, the matter settles itself. It is said that the ground proposed is too far from certain sections of the town, especially West Quincy, to be of any advantage to the dwellers in those sections. It would be inaccessible to them. A more central locality, if any, should be chosen. Very well; let us see what people now do. When the people of these sections of the town take a holiday, or go off for an excursion, or have an outing, do they now have recourse to those neighboring localities? Most assuredly they do not. They go to Mears's; they go somewhere to the shore. They do not go into the fields, or the wood-lots, or the interior. They do not want to go there. They do want to go to the salt-water. The object of the Merry-Mount Park Association is to have the best and only possible and permanent public provision on the salt water made for them. It is these remoter regions which, in fact, more than any others, are interested in carrying out the scheme. Through it they can get their public pleasure ground on the shore within easy reach and free to every one. They will thus get that which they invariably seek when left to themselves.

But they say that the distance is so great;—the proposed ground is practically inaccessible. What is this tremendous distance? From the Willard School-house in West Quincy it is, by the roundabout public road, just one mile and three-quarters to the Greenleaf grounds, which it is proposed to take. In the direct line across Mt. Ararat it is a mile and a third. Is it possible that our New England people have got so off their legs in the matter of walking that — man, woman or child — they cannot walk two miles? For about two centuries in the time of our fore-fathers there was but one church and but one school in the whole town. Yet the people of the town, including the children, contrived to get to that church and that school with commendable regularity. Were they the worse for walking? I am inclined to think our doctors would say with one voice that they were the better —especially the women and children — and that a great deal more walking than they get now would do the present generation a world of good.

Certainly if a mile and three-quarters of distance is to cut people off from the benefit of a park, the dwellers in the crowded parts of our large cities are in a very bad way. But we know very well such is not the case. In Boston, or New York, or Philadelphia, or Chicago, or St. Louis it requires a great deal more than two miles to keep the poorest of the poor away from the green trees and grass of the parks on any sort of a summer holiday. In those cities, however, it may be said there are cheap means of public conveyance. In Quincy there are no such means. The cases are different. Here it would be a choice to the majority between footing it, and staying at home. In conclusive reply to this objection I again appeal to the experience of Great Hill and Mears's. See how quickly in that case the supply of means of cheap communication answered the demand for it. Great Hill is as a water-front in no respect better than the long beach in front of Gull Island. It is not nearly so good; and it is a great deal further off. By the shortest route it is three long miles from the stone church and Town Hall. In Summer there is not a day that Great Hill is not thronged with visitors, and the road to and from it lined with conveyances, public and private. Yet in the face of this every day experience we are gravely assured, by persons, too, who seem actually to believe what they are saying, that the Greenleaf farm is remote, and the Gull Island beach inaccessible!

The simple fact is that, as parks, town-commons and public-pleasure grounds go, this site is peculiarly accessible and convenient to all parts of Quincy. On this subject of distance ideas are always relative. Boston Common only a century ago was looked upon as an out of the way place, and the land beyond it as much too far from State street to be suitable for residence. A house on Beacon street, below where the State House now stands, was spoken of as out of town. The new park for the city is, however, on the other side of the Back Bay, and those who live in the most crowded quarters of the old city will find their way to it in numbers and with a regularity that will be astonishing. Again, however, take the same example, nearer home. In Quincy we have but one place of general resort to which our people find their way in yearly increasing numbers, the place already twice referred to,—Great Hill and Hough's Neck. Great Hill is just about twice the distance from the Town Hall that the proposed Merry-Mount Park would be from the Willard School-house. That one fact seems to dispose pretty conclusively of the argument from remoteness and inaccessibility. In securing a public pleasure ground it should be the aim to secure it in the most convenient and accessible quarter possible, in that direction in which people show they wish to go. This is exactly what it is proposed to do in the present case.

Art in Quincy.

There is now on exhibition in Mr. John O. Holden's window a large vase in terra cotta, the work of Richard E. Brooks, of our town. It is to be hoped that our citizens will give this work of art more than a passing glance of idle curiosity, for the more carefully it is scrutinized the more apparent becomes its true artistic merit. Furthermore, when it is known that the sculptor is but sixteen years of age, the strength and beauty of the vase seem to become more marked.

This lad has for two years been an earnest and conscientious student of art and sculpture under the careful supervision and instruction of Mr. Thomas H. Bartlett, the well-known Boston sculptor, who has rendered such material aid to the art school formed by some of our stone-cutters in the West District. Mr. Bartlett speaks very highly of the talents of young Brooks, and recommends him to the favorable notice of his fellow-townsmen.

Is it asking too much of them to give at least one serious thought to the subject? It is by no means every day that our people see so strong a talent exhibited in one so young. A true artistic temperament cannot be acquired, it is inborn and natural, and when such a temperament makes itself prominent, as in this case, we should do all in our power to foster and encourage it. As so often happens, this young sculptor is not in such a position that he can adequately complete his studies in art. Let the people come forward and make it possible.

The time is rapidly passing away when sneers at art and artistic merit are popular with the community at large, which now feels more clearly the necessity of encouraging "art for art's sake," as it advances in the paths of civilization and higher education; not the knee-breeched and sun-flowered art that has been so grotesquely menageried about our country of late, but the true art which springs direct from nature's laws.

It is a significant fact that the appearance of this young artist and the foundation of an art school in our town are cotemporaneous. Both should be encouraged; the former for his already apparent ability, the latter not only for its possibilities in the development of what is now hidden talent, but for the assistance that it is sure to render the community towards a higher and more liberal education.

WASHINGTON, May 16, 1882.

This being the third Monday of the month, session of the House was devoted to action upon motions to suspend the rules for the passage of bills.

The bill to extend the charters of the National banks will be taken up again to-morrow, and an effort will be made to reach a final vote. It is not probable, however, that this bill will be passed before Thursday, owing to the large number of amendments that will be presented.

The Republican caucus has decided to call up a number of contested election cases during the week, and the Republican contestants will probably be seated.

The appropriations committee will soon be ready to ask consideration for the Pension bill, and the Legislative, Executive, and Judicial appropriation bill, both of which have been perfected by the committee and will probably be reported to the House on Wednesday.

There are rumors, which, however, can be traced to no authentic source that Mr. Conkling will be offered the portfolio of the Secretary of State, and that the present Secretary, Mr. Frelinghuysen, will be made minister to England instead of Mr. Lowell.

Guiteau's appeal was lengthily argued before the Court in banc last week. No decision will be rendered until the 22d of May, but the decision of the court below will be affirmed, and Guiteau will be hanged on Friday the 30th of June, just one year, lacking two days, from the date of his crime.

Yachting Gossip.

The first regatta of the Quincy Yacht Club will take place at 3 P. M. on Wednesday next, off Quincy Great Hill. It being the opening race of the season a large turn out is expected. The Club is in a flourishing condition and never stood better since it was organized in 1874.

The Yacht Amy has been thoroughly overhauled and put in fine trim, as the owner has a little fear of Mr. Geo. C. Adams' new yacht built this winter by Mr. Maybury. The Wildfire is afloat and looks as though she intended to keep up her old reputation,—take nobody's dust.

At the mouth of the beautiful creek that winds its way through the proposed park to the ocean can be seen the little Rocket gracefully floating at her moorings. She has won lots of prizes, has a splendid reputation, and expects to keep it up this summer. Mr. Morton has had his yacht Zip put in the best of trim, and if she sails as well as she looks, she will make skipper Ben do his level best to cross the line ahead of her.

Mr. Jeffrey R. Brackett has had his new steam yacht added to the Club's roll and has kindly offered her for the use of the Judges on regatta days.

HEADQUARTERS.

Paul Revere Post No. 88,

Grand Army of the Republic.

DEPARTMENT OF MASSACHUSETTS, General Order No. 1.

IN Compliance with the laws of our Order, our established custom and general orders from headquarters, the comrades of this Post will observe Tuesday, the 30th day of May, as Memorial Day. Comrades, each recurring Memorial Day brings to the living added duties. There are more mounds to decorate, and fewer hands to bear the offerings. The Grand Army that followed the flag with loyal devotion from '61 to '65 is crossing the line to join the Grand Army of the Invisible. Let us perform our duties to the end, that as soldiers, we may illustrate the devotion to comrades of those who touched the elbow beneath the flag of the stripes and the stars.

All living in town who served in the late war are cordially invited to join with the Post in the services of the day. Comrades of the war days, will you not assemble with us through the day, assist us in our duties, and partake of our rations.

All members of the order and all who served in the late war are invited to meet at Revere Hall at 7 P. M., Sunday, May 28th, to attend divine services at the First Church.

All friends of the order are invited to send food to Revere Hall during the forenoon of May 30th, for the noon collation of the Post and its guests.

All persons are cordially invited to send flowers to Lyceum Hall on the morning of Memorial Day.

ORDER OF THE DAY.

1. The Post will assemble promptly at 6.30 A. M. in Lyceum Hall.
2. A detail of comrades under the command of S. V. C., Lewis G. McIntire, will decorate the graves at Mount Wollaston Cemetery.
3. A detail of comrades under the command of J. V. C., Albion S. Dodge, will decorate the graves in the Town and English Cemeteries.
4. A detail of comrades under the command of O. D., Samuel B. Turner, accompanied by the Chaplain of the Day Rev. Samuel Kelley, will proceed to the National Sailors' Home, hold services, and decorate the graves in that cemetery.
5. Adjutant Samuel W. Spear, will make a detail of one comrade, and accompanied by him, proceed to Mount Auburn Cemetery and deposit a wreath marked Post 88, G. A. R. on the grave of Paul J. Revere.
6. Quarter master William P. Martin, will have charge of invited guests.
7. At 7.30 A. M the Post will proceed in carriages to West Quincy, where appropriate services will be held, after which the graves will be decorated in the different cemeteries.
8. At 9.30 A. M. the Post will assemble at Revere Hall, Post Headquarters, and accompanied by the Union Band, and the Boston Fusileers as an escort, will report to Chief Marshal, Colonel A. B. Packard, to join with the other organizations of the town in the dedicatory services of Thomas Crane Memorial Building.
9. At 12 M. a collation will be served at Post Headquarters, for the Post and their invited guests.
10. At 2 P. M. a procession will form headed by the Union Band, in front of Post Headquarters, Hancock street, consisting of the Post and other soldiers and sailors of the late war, Boston Fusileers, invited guests and citizens of Quincy. The line of march will be taken to Mount Wollaston Cemetery, where with appropriate ceremonies the monument will be decorated with flowers.
11. At 3.30 P. M. an oration will be delivered by the Orator of the Day, Rev. H. Evan Cotton, at the Town Hall, to which the public is generally invited.

DEDICATION

— OF —

Crane Memorial Hall.

THE following is the outline of the order of services to be held during the forenoon of Memorial Day, May 30, 1882:—

At the request of the committee of arrangements, Col A. B. Packard will serve as Marshal of the Day.

At 9 o'clock A. M. the family of Mrs. Crane will hold a reception of the people of the town at the Memorial Hall.

At 10 o'clock A. M. a procession, to be composed of Rural Lodge, F. & A. M., escorted by South Shore Commandery, K. T., Paul Revere Post, G. A. R., No 88, the Fire Department of the town, and such other organizations and bodies of citizens as may desire, will arrive at the building, which will then be consecrated in Masonic form by Most Worshipful Grand Master, Samuel C. Lawrence and suite.

After which the procession will re-form, and proceed to the First Church, where after music by the Weber Quartette, and prayer, an address commemorative of the life of the late Thomas Crane will be delivered by C. F. Adams, Jr., Esq.

Organizations, other than those mentioned, who desire to participate, will at once notify the Marshal.

A full programme will be published in the next issue of the PATRIOT.

Administrator's Notice.

NOTICE is hereby given, that the subscriber has been duly appointed Administrator with the will annexed of the estate of late of Quincy, in the County of Norfolk, deceased, testate, and has taken upon himself that trust by giving bonds as the law directs.

PEREZ CHUBBUCK,

All persons having demands upon the estate of said deceased are required to exhibit the same; and all persons indebted to said estate are called upon to make payment to

HENRY CHUBBUCK, Administrator.

Quincy, May 20, 1882. 3w

Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

NORFOLK, SS. PROBATE COURT.

TO the Heirs-at-Law, and others interested in the Estate of

PATRICK DOLAN,

late of Quincy, in said County, deceased,

GREETING:

Whereas, Timothy Lennon, administrator of the Estate of said deceased, has presented to said Court his petition for license to sell the whole of the real estate of said deceased, for the payment of debts and charges of administration, and for other reasons set forth in said petition:

You are hereby cited to appear at a Probate Court to be holden at Dedham, in said County of Norfolk, on the first Wednesday of June next, at nine o'clock in the forenoon, to show cause, if any you have, against the same.

And said petitioner is ordered to serve this Citation, by publishing the same once a week, three weeks successively, in the Quincy PATRIOT, a newspaper printed at Quincy, the last publication to be two days, at least, before said Court.

Witness, GEORGE WHITE, Esquire, Judge of said Court, this seventeenth day of May, in the year one thousand eight hundred and eighty-two.

JONATHAN COBB, Register.

Supreme Court.

The Supreme Court has been in session at Dedham this week; Chief Justices Devens and Allen on the bench.

Tuesday was occupied in the trial of James Gately of Dedham for the murder of his wife, Mary Gately on the 11th of August last. The jury returned a verdict of "not guilty, by reason of insanity," and Gately was ordered to the Worcester Lunatic Hospital during his natural life.

On Wednesday Attorney-General Marston moved for the impanelling of a jury for the purpose of trying James McKenney, alias James Makenney, charged with the killing of William McCormish at Braintree upon the 4th of July last. District-Attorney French appeared with Mr. Marston for the government, while the prisoner is represented by John L. Eldridge and James J. Malone, of Quincy. Among the jury impanelled was Chase Parker of Quincy. The case was on trial yesterday when the PATRIOT went to press.

GRAND CONCERT. The announcement of the appearance in Boston Music Hall of Frau Materna in two grand concerts, on Friday evening, June 2, and Saturday afternoon, June 3, will be hailed with delight. She participated in the recent great musical festival in New York City, and her singing was much admired. Music and Drama, excellent authority on all musical matters, said of her, in connection with the festival: "Of course the event of the evening was the appearance of Frau Materna, an artist whose celebrity is world-wide. She is a woman of noble presence, tall in stature and of splendid physique. Her voice is of enormous volume, and yet completely under control. Frau Materna is not merely a singer, but an intellectual artiste of a kind that is but rarely encountered." The people of Boston and vicinity should not fail to hear her. The sale of tickets commences Monday.

CEDAR GROVE CEMETERY. This beautiful lawn cemetery located in Boston, on the bank of the Neponset river, about three miles from Quincy centre, has interred for the year ending April 30th, 408 persons. The City Council last year appropriated $3000 for greenhouse and shed, and a much needed addition to the facilities for raising and storing plants was provided. About 5000 loads of muck have been moved from the pond on Adams street, and there will probably be 1000 more loads taken out of this section. The lawns and lots now comprise about twelve acres of grass, which was mowed last year twenty-five times during the growing season, and all the avenues were kept neat and clean.

POINT OF PINES. This beautiful summer resort made its first grand opening last season and proved one of the most delightful places around Boston. Its second season opens June 1st. Extensive improvements have been made during the past winter and it is proposed to spare no efforts to make the place in every particular the centre of attraction for summer visitors to Chelsea Beach.

COLLECTOR OF BOSTON. Roland Worthington, the proprietor and editor of the Boston Traveller, has been confirmed as collector of the port of Boston to hold office for four years. The Boston Globe congratulates Mr. Worthington and believes he will make a good collector.

☞ Ex-adjutant General Cunningham has been elected by its trustees, Superintendent of the Massachusetts Soldiers' Home in Chelsea. Mrs. Cunningham will act as matron of the institution. It was opened to-day, May 20.

DEDHAM. At a special town meeting held in Dedham on Monday evening, D. G. Hill was elected Selectman and Town Clerk, in place of Charles Harrington, deceased.

☞ Dr. Henry A. Reynolds has moved westward with his family and will settle in the new town of Reynolds, Grand Forks Co., Dakota, which he founded.

A CONTRAST. There was good sleighing in Maine on Monday; and nice ripe cherries and watermelon in the gardens in Georgia.

☞ Hon. C. C. Washburne, ex-Congressman and ex-Governor of Wisconsin died of paralysis and Bright's disease last Saturday.

BERRIES. A large supply of strawberries have arrived in Boston this week, but they were rather sour, and of poor quality.

Summary of News.

The walking distance over the East River Bridge, New York, is about a mile.

A New York clergyman received in one week, recently, $850 in marriage fees.

There were $10,000,000 worth of barbed wire fences built in this country last year.

French soldiers are said to be far inferior to Italian soldiers in point of physique.

One Chicago firm, which cans and cures meats, kills and packs 200,000,000 hogs each year.

A San Francisco surgeon is alleged to have supplied a mutilated patient with a celluloid nose.

A Middleboro photographer has orders for 10,000 photographs of Tom Thumb and wife.

The total acreage of wheat in this country is 24,346,000 acres, an increase of 500,000 acres over last year.

Mr. Oscar Wilde has made $25,000 out of his lectures. He points to it when inquired of as to the utility of beauty.

For the Patriot.

Weymouth Items.

On account of the cold rain storm on Sunday the various places of worship were thinly attended.

Messrs. Bryant & Bailey are now located at their new store on Lincoln Square.

The young and handsome elm trees recently set on the edge of the sidewalk on Front street, between Hunt and Broad streets, were the free gifts of Messrs. F. Harris and G. E. Porter.

Mr. Alfred Wyman, our popular pharmacist, will soon make a splendid display of drugs, medicines and fancy articles in the large windows of Dr. A. G. Nye's new building, on Washington Square.

In the absence of Miss Josie Dowse, Mr. Lewis E. Tilden presided at the organ of the Episcopal Church on Sunday morning.

Mr. E. G. Tirrell, the veteran grocer on Lincoln Square, who nearly three months ago received a paralytic shock, is very slowly recovering.

Mr. David Richards, for the past few months has been confined to his house by dropsy, and at the time of writing, slight hopes are entertained of his recovery.

The boot and shoe business in this place remains quiet. Carpenters and all other mechanics find steady employment.

The yachtsmen are getting their fine little crafts into the water, bending sails, and making all necessary repairs, and will soon be ready to take pleasure parties down among the islands in the harbor. We understand that a prize of $5 is to be offered to the person catching the largest cod previous to the first day of July next. Notice of which must be given with good vouchers to either of venerable skippers, Messrs. Freeman Whitmarsh or Andrew Lane, who are requested if convenient to make memorandum of all returns.

By the report Monday morning that Minot's Lighthouse had been blown over, the 11.45 train was nearly filled with people for Cohasset.

Mr. George Nash has been quite unwell the past week. His medical attendant thinks that his brain is softening. Mr. Nash is well remembered by the Quincy boatmen; being for many years master and owner of the famous sloop Lyon, built by Atherton W. Tilden at the Landing.

The fine yacht Alida is soon to be added to the fleet. She is owned, and was built during the last winter by Mr. John Phillips.

Post No. 58, G. A. R., are making preparations. There are 322 members enrolled, and it is expected that nearly 300 soldiers will be in line on Decoration Day.

The house on the corner of Washington and Federal streets was sold on Saturday at auction, for $1700, which is considered a low price.

Joseph D. Stiles will speak at Williams Hall on Sunday, at 2 and 7.30 o'clock.

Our new Superintendent of Streets, Mr. James Ford, is doing his work in the most thorough manner.

BOSTON THEATRE. "The World," the unsurpassed realistic drama, which has been played at the Boston Theatre the past nine week, is still the great attraction with theatre-goers, and no one should miss of seeing it. The scenery cannot be surpassed, and the reality of all is such as cannot but delight. Large and enthusiastic audiences greet the company every night, and thus testify their appreciation of one of the best dramas that has been presented in Boston.

☞ A very important act transferring divorce cases from the Supreme to the probate courts has passed the Massachusetts House of Representatives. If the bill should pass the Senate and it becomes a law, the probate judges will very likely require an increase of salaries.

Births.

In South Braintree, May 8th, a son to Mr. and Mrs. Gleason Torrey.

Marriages.

In Quincy, May 17th, by Rev. Samuel Kelley, Mr. Thomas Douglas to Miss Sarah Beaton.

Deaths.

In Quincy, May 15th, Mrs. Catherine, wife of Mr. Adam Vogel, aged 68 years, 4 months and 25 days.

May 16th, Mr. Robert McLean, aged 60 years.

May 17th, Mr. Naaman B. Holmes, aged 67 years, 3 months and 12 days.

May 18th, Mrs. Eliza Y., wife of Rev. Mark Trafton, aged 72 years and 9 months.

May 19th, Mr. Charles Curtis, aged 65 years and 11 months.

SAMARITAN
NERVINE

SAMARITAN NERVINE

Cures Epileptic Fits, Spasms, Convulsions, St. Vitus Dance, Vertigo, Hysterics, Insanity, Apoplexy, Paralysis, Rheumatism, Neuralgia and all Nervous Diseases. This infallible remedy will positively eradicate every species of Nervous Derangement, and drive them away from whence they came, never to return again. It utterly destroys the germs of disease, by neutralizing the hereditary taint or poison in the system, and thoroughly eradicates the disease, and utterly destroys the cause.

SAMARITAN NERVINE

Cures Female Weakness, General Debility, Leucorrhœa or Whites, Painful Menstruation, Ulceration of the Uterus, Internal Heat, Gravel, Inflammation of the Bladder, Irritability of the Bladder. For Wakefulness at Night there is no better remedy. During the change of life no female should be without it. It quiets the Nervous system and gives rest, comfort and nature's sweet sleep.

SAMARITAN NERVINE

Cures Alcoholism, Drunkenness and the habit of Opium Eating. These degrading habits are by far the worst evils that have ever befallen suffering humanity. Thousands die annually from these noxious drugs. The drunkard drinks liquor not because he likes it, but for the pleasure of drinking and treating his friends, little thinking that he is on his road to ruin. Like the Opium Eater, he first uses the drug in small quantities as a harmless antidote. The soothing influence of the drug takes strong hold upon its victim, leading him on to his own destruction. The habits of Opium Eating and Liquor Drinking are precisely what eating is to alimentiveness, as over eating first inflames the stomach, which redoubles its cravings until it paralyzes both the stomach and appetite. So every drink of liquor or dose of opium, instead of satisfying, only adds to its fierce fires, until it consumes the vital force and then itself. Like the gluttonous tape-worm, it cries, "Give, give, give!" but never enough until its own rapacity devours itself. Samaritan Nervine gives instant relief in all such cases. It produces sleep, quiets the nerves, builds up the nervous system, and restores body and mind to a healthy condition.

SAMARITAN NERVINE

Cures Nervous Dyspepsia, Palpitation of the Heart, Asthma, Bronchitis, Sofula, Syphilis, diseases of the Kidneys, and all diseases of the urinary organs. Nervous debility, caused by the indiscretions of youth, permanently cured by this invaluable remedy. To you young, middle-aged and old men, who are covering your sufferings as with a mantle, by silence, look up, you can be saved by timely efforts, and make ornaments to society, and jewels in the crown of your Maker, if you will. Do not keep this a secret longer, until it saps your vitals, and destroys both body and soul. If you are thus afflicted, take DR. RICHMOND'S Samaritan Nervine. It will restore your shattered nerves, arrest premature decay, impart tone and energy to the whole system.

SAMARITAN NERVINE

Cured my little girl of fits. She was also deaf and dumb, but it cured her. She can now talk and hear as well as anybody.

HOME QUESTIONS!

TO THE SICK AND DEBILITATED.

Is it worth while to endure penal torture every night from wakefulness, inability to sleep, nervous prostration, &c., when you can be immediately relieved and permenently cured by so agreeable a remedy as

SAMARITAN NERVINE.

Does it pay to be compelled, by debility and languor, to abandon active business when brain, nerve and muscle can be braced up and the whole system can be restored to a healthy condition by a course of

SAMARITAN NERVINE.

You nervous dyspeptics, why approach the dinner table daily, with a positive disgust for all that is savory and delicious, when a vigorous appetite for even the plainest food is created by the use of

SAMARITAN NERVINE.

Is it wise to live in this bright world as though it were a dungeon, constantly miserable and discontented, when the worst cases of epilepsy, nervousness or hypochondria is cured in ninety days by such a pleasant and wholesome an exhilarant as

SAMARITAN NERVINE.

Can it be possible that any person of a nervous temperament will run the risk of apoplexy or paralysis when he can tone and regulate the nervous centres with

SAMARITAN NERVINE.

Is it not a species of insanity for any merchant, mechanic, farmer or traveller to be without the best known antidote against disease,

SAMARITAN NERVINE.

Considering the harrassing and depressing nature of the functional derangements to which woman is subject, is it not astonishing that any invalid of the feebler sex should hesitate to seek the certain relief afforded in such cases by the general operation of

SAMARITAN NERVINE.

These are questions of deeper interest than any of the political dogmas of the day, and those whom they concern are invited to give them something more than a passing thought.

THE BEST AND The Richest BLOOD, BRAIN and NERVE
-F-O-O-D-
CAREFULLY PREPARED, THOROUGHLY TESTED, ACCEPTABLE AND RELIABLE.

The Phosphates of the Wheat are its most valuable food property, and are, when properly prepared, the most acceptable nutriment with which to build up the system.

The Blood, Brain and Nerves are the forces which bear the strain of every day work and life, and in order to save sickness it is wise to BUILD FOR HEALTH.

Wheat Bitters are prepared, not by fermentation but by solution and are richest in the Phosphates, while the starch and impure matter are eliminated. These make in themselves a basis, to which is added the best and choicest medicinal qualities, necessary to make it a tonic and bitter. It is at once healthful, pleasant to the taste and must not be confounded with the thousand and one cheap alcoholic bitters which are sold as cure-alls. Medicine is doubly effective when used with food, so as to nourish while it corrects.

PERRY DAVIS' VEGETABLE PAIN KILLER

A Never-Failing Cure for Burns, Scalds, Bruises, Cuts, Sores, etc.

After forty years of trial, PERRY DAVIS' PAIN KILLER stands unrivaled. It is safe! It acts immediately! It never fails!

Editor of the St. John (N. B.) News, says:
In flesh wounds, aches, pains, sores, etc., it is the most effectual remedy we know of. No family should be without a bottle of it for a single hour.

From the Cincinnati Dispatch:
We have seen its magic effects, and know it to be a good article.

From I. S. Potter, U. S. Consul at Crefeld, Rhenish Prussia:
After long years of use, I am satisfied it is positively efficient as a healing remedy for wounds, bruises, and sprains.

W. W. Sharper, Valdosta, Ga., says:
It is a panacea for all bruises and burns.

From R. W. Adams, Saco, Me.:
It gave me immediate relief.

R. Lewis says:
In forty years' use it never has failed me.

W. W. Lum, Nicholville, N. Y., says:
I use your PAIN KILLER frequently. It relieves pain and soreness, and heals wounds like magic.

J. W. Dee says:
For scalds and burns it has no equal.

PERRY DAVIS' PAIN KILLER is not a new untried remedy. For forty years it has been in constant use; and those who have used it the longest are its best friends. Its success is entirely because of its merit. Every family should have a bottle ready for use. Much pain and heavy doctors' bills may often be saved by prompt application of the PAIN KILLER. Unlike most medicines, it is perfectly safe even in the hands of a child. Try it once thoroughly, and it will prove its value. Your druggist has it at 25c., 50c., and $1.00 per bottle. PERRY DAVIS & SON, Proprietors, Providence, R. I.

Love Me Before I Die.

If you've dear, sweet thoughts about me,
Why not whisper them to me?
Don't you know 'twould make me happy,
And as glad as glad can be?

If you wait till I am sleeping,
Ne'er to waken here again,
There'll be walls of earth between us,
And I could not hear you then.

I won't need your kind carresses
When the grass grows o'er my face;
I won't crave your love and kisses
In my last low resting place.

So if you are ever going to love me,
Love me now, while I can know
All the sweet and tender feelings
Which from pure affection flow.

Love me now while I am living,
Do not wait till I am gone,
And then chisel it on marble,
Warm love-words in ice-cold stone.

Farm and Garden.

A Miniature Flower Garden.

For small flower gardens where but few flowers can be cultivated a florist recommends a row of sweet peas along one edge of the bed. They bloom constantly during the Summer, and they are among the sweetest flowers we have. The more you cut them the more flowers you will have. A handful of them in a vase (and for such bouquets their style of growth makes them invaluable) will make the parlor as fragrant as a clover-field. Have a row of geraniums, including two or three scarlet ones, one or two pink ones, and a salmon, and at least three rose geraniums. You will want their leaves for use with other flowers. When you cut geraniums for use in the parlor don't mix the scarlets with the pinks or salmons; they clash. Keep each color by itself. You can use white flowers with them if you have them, but they are much more satisfactory alone than with most other flowers. A row or two of phlox is desirable. This blooms early and continually. It is fine for bouquet work, and here your rose geranium leaves will come in play nicely, for phlox has no foliage of its own worth speaking of. Phlox is better for flat bouquets than for vases. The white variety will combine well with the scarlet or pink geraniums. It will give you excellent satisfaction. Then you want pansies. The young plants will not give you many flowers before Fall, but then they will do better than they would through the hot days of Summer, and for bouquets in flat dishes nothing is finer. Put a row of rose geranium leaves about a glass dish and fill it with sand. Wet the sand and insert the stems of the pansies in it. They will remain fresh for days in this way. Of course, in such a garden, there can be no artistic arrangement of plants. None should be aimed at. The plan is to supply bloom for the parlor. If that is done the aim of the owner is accomplished. Such a garden will, however, afford a vast deal of pleasure in itself, and in all true pleasure there is real profit.

Household Receipts.

MARBLE CAKE. Light part: One cup white sugar, one-half cup butter, one-fourth cup sweet milk, one and one-half cups flour, whites of three eggs, two teaspoonfuls baking powder. Dark part: One cup brown sugar, one-half cup molasses, one-half cup butter, one-half cup sour cream, two and one-half cups flour, one-half teaspoonful each spice, nutmeg and cinnamon.

POUND CAKE. Beat one pound of butter and one pound of sugar to a cream, whisk ten eggs to a high froth, and add one and a half pounds of flour, half a nutmeg, one tea-spoonful of vanilla; beat all until light and creamy. Put into a tin pan with buttered paper, and bake in a moderate oven one and a half hours.

Garments to be ironed in cold starch should be immediately dipped in boiling water and ironed as soon as starched. You will, in this way, have no trouble with flats sticking to the cloth. Another good way is to wet the starch with weak, cold suds made from white soap.

One of the most essential things in serving fish is to have everything hot and quickly dished, so that all may go to the table at once. Serve fresh fish with squash and green peas; salt fish with beets and carrots, salt pork and potatoes, and parsnips with either.

To always insure light dumplings, mix and let stand two or three hours before rising; cut into thin strips, roll in flour and boil twenty minutes.

Always flour your tins after greasing, before putting in cake. The cake will cleave from the pans more readily.

Anecdotes.

"How do you like the Episcopalian service?" asked Jones.

"Never heard it," replied Fogg.

"I dropped in at one of the churches last Sunday. It was quite early, and so I began reading the service. I didn't read far, though, before I found that it it would never do for me, so I came out."

"Why, what was the trouble?"

"Too many collections. On almost every page it said 'collect.' Must be awful expensive to be an Episcopalian."

An aged miser feeling unwell, but grudging to pay a doctor's fee, sees with pleasure a medical gentleman with whom he is acquainted approaching him on the sidewalk.

"How do you do?" said the doctor, on meeting him.

"Well, I don't feel very well, doctor," replied the miser; "In fact, I am quite out of sorts. I have no appetite, my tongue is coated, I have pains in the back and in the head, and so on."

"Hum!" said the man of science, "that is pretty bad!"

"What would you advise me to do, doctor?" asked the avaricious one.

"To consult a doctor, by all means," replied the doctor, and walked away.

Temperance.

For the Patriot.

Poor Humanity.

MESSRS. EDITORS:—Some of your readers in Quincy thought some of my remarks, a short time since, on Rum and Tobacco, was too severe; tending to open old sores that time had partly healed. But there is some truth in the old squaw's remark that desperate disorders require desperate remedies. Father Abraham being himself in happiness, when appealed to by one in misery for that which could not be granted, was requested by the man in misery to send some one to warn his brethren, that they might not come to his place of torment. But Abraham replied: "They have Moses and the prophets, if they will not hear them neither will they hear one although he rise from the dead." But the man in torment thought different, at least he thought the experiment worth trying, and so do I. Call one from the dead and try that if nothing else will do; but even that will not always prevail. I myself have had my full share of those sores; sores that can never be healed until the waters of oblivion have washed every thing from the memory; but, if the sight of blood, gushing from the fresh opened side, will stop even one person from his downward career, then I say let it bleed.

How it will sweeten and "temper the cold waters of the river of death," as we pass over, if we can have the satisfaction of realizing that even one person has by our example been saved from an untimely end; and how will they be imbittered when we find that some weaker brother, by endeavoring to follow in our steps, temperate although they may have been, has, for want of a little firmness, fallen into a place of torment; and not only himself, but has dragged down with him a devoted wife and a family of helpless children; and not them alone, for time as well as scripture prove that the iniquities of the father are often visited upon the children unto the third and fourth generation, especially the sin of intoxication. Such scenes need to be continually held up to the public gaze, that some one whom you least expect may see the evil of his way and repent.

The horrid effects of rum are continually before us, and must we shut our eyes to them, because old sores are to be opened, and hide them from the public; will throwing the veil of charity over them, and keeping them out of sight, produce the desired effect? What will gladden the heart of a rumseller more than to have the sad effect of his traffic hidden from the public gaze? They may be partially hidden from the public, but can they be hidden from his family, who is the greatest sufferer?

A sad case has recently occurred in our vicinity, which although for a time was hidden from the public by the darkness of the night, was discovered by a kind-hearted watchman. The victim was found in an insensible, helpless condition, with a broken limb. How long he had been there or what caused his injury no one knew. The last that was known of him he was in a rum-shop, licensed by the godly city of Boston to sell rum for the public good, where the probability is that he was furnished with rum as long as his money lasted, then turned out of doors to shift for himself, and being unable to reach home fell by the road side, and in the darkness of the night, was ran over by some carriage, which caused his broken limb. Being unconscious he knew nothing about it. And in that situation he was found by the kind-hearted watchman, who procured a carriage and took him home.

Make the case your own for one moment, and think what must have been the feeling of that family, which started in life with as bright prospects as ever surrounded any couple, and now reduced to this. Would not they, would not any one (except a rum-seller) be ready to exclaim: "Great God, is there not some hidden lightning in the Heavens, red with uncommon wrath, ready to burst on the rum-seller's head," and not his alone but those who sanction its being done! Whatever "superior wisdom" would say, indignant human nature would exclaim: "If not, let there be some made on purpose."

Those who beguiled your distinguished townsman from the path of rectitude (if they did so lead him), would no doubt be glad if their doings could have been kept from the public until they could have fleeced another and another victim; but, would that have been for the public good? But such things being made public, we learn who and what to avoid. "Line upon line and precept upon precept" was thought necessary in olden times; it is as necessary now. Quincy has taken a good step forward, may she never step back until her good purposes are accomplished. B.

☞ Parish clerk (at vestry-meeting on the question of organ-blowers salary, the rector in the chair): "You see, sir, it isn't as if there was only the hymns, but there's the comin' in and the goin' out, and the 'sponses and the prayers, and the Psalms take a wonderful deal o' wind."

Walnut Leaf Hair Restorer.

It is entirely different from all others. It is as clear as water, and, as its name indicates, is a perfect Vegetable Hair Restorer. It will immediately free the head from all dandruff, restore grey hair to its natural color, and produce a new growth where it has fallen off. It does not in any manner affect the health, which Sulphur, Sugar of Lead, and Nitrate of Silver preparations have done. It will change light or faded hair in a few days to a beautiful glossy brown. An Open Letter.

Some Outspoken Statments of Great Value from Parties of the Highest Standing.

When the people of America become so thoroughly aroused, and on a subject of such serious importance as the preservation of their lives and health, it is but natural that the ones who have been largely instrumental in the origin of this movement should speak frankly and directly to the people most interested. It is for this reason that we thus come before the public and make the following revelations.

Every careful observer who has sought to keep pace with the march of events has noted the alarming increase of certain peculiar physical troubles within the past few years. These troubles have come at unexpected moments and in a most treacherous way. They have manifested themselves innumerable forms, but they have always had the same cause. They have not afflicted the minor parts of the body, but have gone direct to the strongholds of the system and their work has usually been as prompt as it is fatal. Their treacherous and deceptive nature has often prevented a careful analysis of what causes them, and, as a result, intense suffering and final disaster have usually ensued. The real cause, however, has been a derangement of the kidneys and all of these troubles are, in fact, the first symptoms of the terrible Bright's disease, which has cast its dark shadow over so many homes in the land and is increasing wonderfully and continually. It is now conceded by the ablest physicians in every land and by eminent scientists the world over, that this disease is the result of blood poisoning. This poisoning is brought about by wasted and unhealthy kidneys that permit the poison to remain in the blood, instead of throwing it from the system. But it is equally evident to all who have studied into the effects and have become conversant with the facts, that a disordered state of the kidneys and liver produces most of the common complaints and pains which afflict the human race, and they can be traced to this source just as certainly as can Bright's disease. To purify a stream we must go to its source, and to cure a disease we must remove the cause. It being true, therefore, that nine-tenths of all human ailments are caused by diseased kidneys or liver, the only certain way to cure these troubles is by treating the organs which cause them. How intimately the kidneys are associated with the entire system may be understood from the fact that over 1000 ounces of blood pass through them every hour, being more than 200 gallons, or nearly one ton in the course of twenty-four hours. This vast mass of living fluid is sent to every part of the body, and if the kidneys are diseased the impurities that are in the blood are not removed, and hence pass through the veins, carrying disease in some of its many terrible forms. The horrors which accompany most of the diseases caused by disordered kidneys and liver cannot be described in print, while the dangers surrounding them are even worse than the agony. And yet a person may be troubled for months without knowing the cause of the diseases that have attacked him. Some of the symptoms of the first stages, any one of which indicates disordered kidneys or liver are these: Pains in the back and around the loins, severe headaches, dizziness, inflamed eyes, a coated tongue and a dry mouth, loss of appetite, chilly sensations, indigestion (the stomach never is in order when the kidneys or liver are deranged), a dryness of the skin, nervousness, night sweets, muscular debility, despondency, a tired feeling especially at night, puffing or bloating under the eyes, etc. If any of the following things are noticed about the fluids passed from the system, it shows that the kidneys or liver are out of order: A red deposit, a scum upon the surface, an unusual thickness or thinness, a very dark or a very light color, a burning sensation in passing, an unusual odor, a retention, or a frequent desire to void and inability to do so.

The above are a few of the hundreds of symptoms which indicate the beginning of aggravated cases of kidney or liver difficulties, and they require instant attention. If these symptoms are not checked at once, they are almost certain to result in some one of the many terrible diseases of the kidneys. But unpleasant as all the symptoms and even these diseases may be, they are as nothing compared to the last stages of the complaints. The kidneys waste away by degrees, accompanied by intense pains; the heart becomes uncontrollable; the lungs are oppressed; the eyeballs grow glassy, and the entire system is reduced and debilitated. For weeks before death comes the sufferer looks forward to it as a blessed relief, and anything that can furnish even temporary help is gladly hailed. Then it is that bloating begins; the face becomes puffy and pallid; the breath can only be caught in gasps, speech is impossible and muscular action suspended. The patient finally sinks into a state of unconsciousness to everything except the pains which are racking him, and death comes by certain but slow degrees. There can be but one conclusion which all readers of care and judgment will draw from these facts, which is the necessity of treating the disease in time and by that means which has been proven the best and most efficient.

It has been our privilege to treat more cases and effect more cures of this terrible complaint than has ever been known before in the history of the world. The wonderful sale which our remedies have attained is due wholly to the fact that they have cured the ones who have used them. The power and value of any remedy must rest wholly on a basis of worth, and here is just where our Safe Kidney and Liver Cure has found its wonderful power and success. But in this connection comes one important fact: It has always been true that articles of merit are subjected to imitations. No one seeks to counterfeit the bills of a worthless bank. The productions of a cracked inventor or witless writer are never copied. It is just so with a healing remedy. If it possess no merit it will not be subjected to imitations. If, however, it has power and value, imitations will spring up on every side. While it is a tribute to the value of this medicine that it has imitations, still in justice to those who are suffering, we feel that all should be warned against them.

There is but one known remedy that has ever been able to cure serious kidney troubles or control these great organs when once deranged, and that remedy is Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure. There are numerous nostrums on the market claiming to be just as efficient and some which even claim to be the same. The test of merit, however, is in what has been accomplished, and we therefore say unhesitatingly that for all diseases of the kidneys, liver and urinary organs, Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure stands alone, not only in point of excellence, but in the wonderful results it has achieved. In order to successfully avoid the purchase of spurious and injurious medicines, observe these facts:

Our remedy is put up in dark amber glass bottles, with the Safe (our trade mark) blown in the back. A private proprietary six-cent internal revenue stamp is affixed to the neck and covers the top of the cork and is of a light brown color. In the middle thereof is a Safe in outline, and on it the picture of a negro gathering herbs. If this stamp is not found on every bottle of the Safe Kidney and Liver Cure, or if there is any evidence that it has been tampered with, and if a Safe is not blown on the back of the bottle, reject the bottle at once, and insist on having a genuine one.

We are led to publish the forgoing in order that the public may know and realize just where we stand. We have always sought to keep our personality from obtruding upon the public, knowing full well that the value of our remedy was the essential thing, but the unexampled use which has been made of this medicine, and the volumes of letters we are constantly receiving demand a personal statement from us. We are justly gratified at the confidence which has been shown us, and thankful for the myriads of cures our remedy has performed, and we pledge ourselves for the future as we have endeavored in the past, to furnish the best and only valuable remedy that can control and cure all the many and terrible troubles arising from disorders of these great organs. Sincerely,

H. H. WARNER & Co.

By Universal Accord,

AYER'S CATHARTIC PILLS are the best of all purgatives for family use. They are the product of long, laborious, and successful chemical investigation, and their extensive use, by physicians in their practice, and by all civilized nations, proves them the best and most effectual purgative Pill that medical science can devise. Being purely vegetable no harm can arise from their use, and being sugar-coated, they are pleasant to take. In intrinsic value and curative powers no other Pills can be compared with them; and every person, knowing their virtues, will employ them, when needed. They keep the system in perfect order, and maintain in healthy action the whole machinery of life. Mild, searching and effectual, they are especially adapted to the needs of the digestive apparatus, derangements of which they prevent and cure, if timely taken. They are the best and safest physic to employ for children and weakened constitutions, where a mild but effectual cathartic is required.

For sale by all druggists.

Assessors' Notice.

To the Inhabitants and all other Persons liable to pay taxes in the Town of Quincy.

THE ASSESSORS of the Town of Quincy hereby give notice to the inhabitants of said town, and all persons liable to pay taxes therein, that they will be at the office of the Selectmen, EVERY SATURDAY in May, from 2 to 4½ o'clock P. M., and from May 27th until June 3d every day from 8 to 10 o'clock A. M., to receive the valuation of Estates; and all persons liable to be taxed in said Town, are hereby required to bring in at said office, a true and correct schedule of the Real and Personal Estates, for which they are liable to pay taxes.

MORTGAGED REAL ESTATE.

"Any mortgagor or mortgagee of real estate may bring in to the assessors of the town or city where such real estate lies," within the time specified in this notice, "a statement, under oath, of the amount due on each separate lot or parcel of such real estate, and the name and residence of every holder of an interest therein as mortgagee or mortgagor. When such property is situated in two or more places, or when a recorded mortgage includes for one sum two or more estates or parts of an estate, an estimate of the amount of the mortgagee's interest in each estate or part of an estate shall be given in such statement."—[Chap. 175 of the Acts of 1881.] When a statement in conformity with the law above quoted is brought in, the real estate therein returned will be assessed under sections 14, 15 and 16, of chapter 11 of the Public Statutes. But in cases where the Mortgagor of the real estate has agreed in writing to pay all taxes assessed thereon, NO STATEMENT OR RETURN IS REQUIRED from either mortgagee or mortgagor, unless requested by the assessors in writing.

Persons holding estates in trust are requested to furnish the Assessors with statements in relation to such estates.

When estates of persons deceased have been divided during the past year, or have changed hands from some other causes, the executor or administrator is required to give notice of such change. In default of such notice he will be held responsible for the tax assessed.

Any person bringing in a list of his taxable property will be assessed upon the valuation thereof, and any one neglecting to furnish the assessors with such list, within the time above specified, will at a legal meeting of the Board of Assessors, be doomed according to the laws of the Commonwealth.

All persons will take notice that statements of personal property must be in writing and subscribed under oath before one of the Assessors, at their office, on or before the 3d day of June; and that the personal property of all taxable persons must be estimated by the Board of Assessors, notwithstanding a verbal statement or informal written communication to any one or more of the Assessors.

When a person has failed to bring in a list or schedule of all his taxable property, in conformity to this notice, no abatement of a tax assessed upon such person for such property can be granted, unless such tax exceeds by more than fifty per centum the amount which would have been assessed to that person on personal estate.

The Park.

A public park for Quincy town
Is being talked about,
I hope the subject will not down
Until the park's laid out.
The reasons given pro and con,
With reference to the scheme,
Are surely worth reflecting on,
For thought, they form a theme.
They vary much according to
The districts where they rise,
And those against the park in view,
Are far from being wise.
The first we hear proclaims the cost,
In debt would run the town,
Yet little time must needs be lost,
To put that reason down.
For men of common sense well know,
Improvements such as this,
Will make the population grow,
And that won't come amiss.
To pay the cost, the tax assessed
Will cause us little care,
North, South and Centre, East and West,
Will scarcely feel their share.
Each year the sum will be quite small,
That any one will pay
For this improvement, free to all,
Enjoyable every day.
With many people coming here,
(And come they surely will,)
It seems to me to be quite clear,
They'll help to pay the bill.
And we will find instead of debt,
The situation thus,
The extra cost will all be met,
By them instead of us.
Again we hear some people say,
This park's for those of wealth,
But all the poor on many a day
May there renew their health.
May there enjoy the woods and fields,
Which round their homes are not,
But which the rich man's money yields,
Where e'er he casts his lot.
The poor man's child may freely roam
'Midst foliage fresh and green,
Which near his lowly, humble home,
Is scarcely ever seen;
For land with trees and fields of green,
Are far beyond his purse,
This park by him will soon be seen
A blessing, not a curse.

⁂

Miscellany.

CONVERTED.

"Albert, I wish you would let me have seventy-five cents?"

Kate Landman spoke carefully, for she knew that her husband had not much money to spare; yet she spoke earnestly, and there was a world of entreaty in her look.

"What do you want seventy-five cents for?" asked Albert.

"I want to get some braid for my new dress."

"I thought you had all the material on hand for that."

"So I thought I had; but Mrs. Smith and Mrs. Thompson both have a trimming of braid upon theirs, and it looks very pretty.

"Plague take these women's fashions! Your endless trimmings and things-a-majigs cost more than the dress is worth. It's nothing but shell out money when once a woman thinks of a new dress."

"I don't have many new dresses. I do certainly try to be as economical as I can."

"It is a funny kind of economy, at all events. But if you must have it I suppose you must."

And Albert Landman took out his wallet and counted out seventy-five cents; but he gave it grudgingly.

When Albert reached the outer door on his way to work he found the weather so threatening that he concluded to go back and get his umbrella; and upon re-entering the sitting-room he found his wife in tears. She tried to hide the fact that she had been weeping, but he had caught her in the act, and asked what it meant.

"Good gracious!" cried the husband, "I should like to know if you are crying at what I said about the dress?"

"I was not crying at what you said, Albert," said Kate, tremulously; "but you were so reluctant to grant me the favor. I was thinking how hard I had to work; I am tied to the house; how many little things I have to perplex me, then to think—"

"Pshaw! what do you want to be so foolish for?"

And away started Albert Landman a second time; but he was not to escape so easily. In the hall, he was met by his daughter Lizzie, a bright-eyed, rosy-cheeked girl of ten years.

"Oh, papa, give me fifteen cents!"

"What?"

"Oh, I want fifteen cents. Do please give it to me."

"What in the world do you want with it? Are you changing school books again?"

"No, I want to buy a hoop. Ellen Smith has got one, and so has Mary Buck and Sarah Allen. Mr. Grant has got some real pretty ones to sell. Can't I have one?"

"Nonsense! If you want a hoop, go and get one off some ash barrel. I can't afford to be buying hoops for you to trundle about the street."

"Please, papa."

"No. I told you."

The blue eyes filled with tears, and the child's sobbing broke upon his ear. Albert Landman hurried from the house with some very impatient words upon his lips.

At one of the stores Albert Landman met some of his old friends.

"Hello, Albert! What's up?"

"Nothing particular."

"What do you say to a game of billiards, Albert?"

"Good! I'm in for that."

And away went Albert to the billiard hall, where he had a glorious time with his friends. He liked billiards. It was a healthy, pretty game, and the keeper of the hall allowed no rough scuffs on his premises.

They played four games. Albert had won two and his opponent had won two.

"That's two and two," cried Tom Piker. "What do you say to playing them off, Albert?"

"All right, go in," said Albert, full of animation.

And so they played the fifth game, and he who lost was to pay for the five games. It was an exciting contest. Both made capital runs, but in the end Albert was beaten by three points; and with a little laugh he went up to settle the bill. Five games, twenty cents a game—just one dollar. Not much for such sport; and he paid out the money with a grace, and never once seemed to feel that he could not afford it.

"Have a cigar?" said Tom.

"Yes."

They lighted their cigars and then sauntered down the hall to watch the others play.

Albert soon found himself seated over against a table at which some of his friends were playing, and close by stood two gentlemen, strangers to him, one of whom was explaining to the other the mysteries of the game.

"It is a healthy pastine," said he who had been making the explanation; "and certainly is one which has no evil tendency."

Albert heard the remarks very plainly and had a curiosity to hear what the other, who seemed unacquainted with billiards, would say.

"I cannot, of course, assert that any game which calls for skill and judgment, and which is free from the attendant curse of gaming is of itself an evil," remarked the second gentleman. "Such things are only evil so far as they excite and stimulate men beyond the bounds of healthy recreation."

"That result can scarcely follow such a game," said the first speaker.

But the other shook his head.

"You are wrong there. The result can follow in two ways: First, it can lead men away from their business; it can lead men to spend money who have not money to spend. Whenever I visit a place of this kind I am led to reflect upon a most strange and prominent weakness of humanity as developed in our sex. For instance, observe that young man who is just settling his bill at the desk. He looks like a mechanic, and I should say from his manner, and from the fact that he feels it his duty to go home at this hour, that he has a wife and children. I see by his face that he is kind-hearted and generous, and I should judge that he means to do as near right as he can. He has been beaten, and he pays one dollar and forty cents for the recreation of some two hours' duration. If you observe you will see that he pays it freely, and pockets the loss with a smile. Happy faculty! But how do you suppose it is in that young man's home? Suppose his wife had come to him this morning, and asked him for a dollar to spend for some trifling thing—some household ornament, or some bit of jewelry to adorn her person—and suppose his little child put in a plea for forty cents to buy a paper and picture-books with, what do you think he would have answered? Of fifty men just like him, would not forty and five men have declared that they had not the money to spare for any such purpose? And, moreover, they would have said so, feeling that they were telling the truth. Am I not right?"

"Upon my word," said the man who understood billiards, "You speak to the point. I know that young man who has paid his bill, and you have not misjudged him in a single particular. And what is more, I happen to have a fact at hand to illustrate your charge. We have a club for an excellent literary paper in our village, and last year that man was one of our subscribers. This year he felt obliged to discontinue it. His wife was very anxious to take it, for it had become a genial companion in leisure moments, but he could not afford it. The club rate was one dollar and fifty a year."

"Ay, and so it goes," said the other gentleman. "Well, that man's wife may be wishing at this very moment that she had her paper to read, while he is paying almost its full price for a year—for what? And yet how smilingly he does it. Ah! those poor, sympathizing wives! How many clouds often darken upon them from the brows of their husbands when they ask for a trifling sum of money, and how grudgingly the mite is handed over when it is given! What perfect floods of joy that dollar and forty cents might have poured upon the children of that unsuccessful billiard player. Ah! it is well for such wives and children that they do not know where the money all goes."

They had finished at the nearest table. The two gentlemen moved on and Albert Landman arose from his seat and left the house. Never before had he such thoughts as now possessed him; he had never dwelt upon the same grouping of ideas. That very morning his own true, faithful, loving wife had been sad and heart-sick because he had harshly and unkindly met her request for a small sum of money. And his sweet Lizzie was almost broken-hearted for the want of a simple toy, such as her mates possessed, and yet the sum of both their wants amounted to not as much as he had paid away that evening for billiard-playing.

Albert Landman wanted to be an honest husband and father, and the lesson was not lost upon him. On his way home he stopped at Mr. Grant's and purchased the best and greatest hoop to be found, with driving-stick painted red, white and blue, and in the morning, when he beheld his child's delight, and had received her grateful, happy kiss, the question came to his mind which was the best and happiest result—this or the five games of billiards? The hoop cost thirty cents. He could play two games of billiards less and be the absolute gainer of ten cents by the pleasant operation.

A few mornings after this, as Albert arose from the breakfast table, he detected an uneasy, wistful look upon his wife's face.

"Kate, what is it?"

"Albert could you spare me half a dollar this morning?"

And out came the wallet and the money was handed over with a warm, genial smile. What! Tears at that? Was it possible she had been so little used to such scenes on his part, that so simple an act of loving kindness thus affected her? How many games of billiards would be required to secure such satisfaction as Albert carried with him that morning to the shop?

A very simple lesson, is it not?

The Garfield Statue.

To the PEOPLE through the Press:

At the last meeting of the Society of the Army of the Cumberland, it was proposed that under its auspices there should be erected in the city of Washington a statue or monument in memory of our former comrade, the late President James Abram Garfield. With that end in view, a committee was appointed by Lieutenant-General P. H. Sheridan, president of the society, which organized and proceeded to work, and it is with much pleasure that the committee announce that its efforts have met with such liberal response from all parts of the country as to warrant the assurance that the work will be consummated.

The question now is, and to you we submit it, shall the statue be such an one as we can build with the funds on hand, or will you come to our aid in such a manner as to enable us to erect a work of art in size, design and workmanship in keeping with the glorious name with which it will be forever associated, as well as an ornament to our already magnificent capital city. It is proposed that the work when completed shall be no longer the property of the society, but be formally transferred through their Chief Magistrate to the people of the United States to be a monument of their affection for all time.

We therefore present to you the opportunity to unite with us in the work, and thereby enable us to make the structure in every respect worthy the name of America's foremost people. To that end we request that on the 30th instant, a day when all hearts turn in love and grateful remembrance to the soldiers of the Republic, and we strew their graves with flowers, that a feature of that day shall be the offering and soliciting of contributions to the end set forth. But few can enjoy the privilege of placing a flower on his grave Decoration Day, but all can contribute the cost of one, and thereby enable us to stimulate genius and exhaust art in the endeavor to plant here a statue that will testify to men of all time the great love the people bore him.

It is the desire of the committee that this work be general; one in which all the people can take part without feeling it to be a tax; and it is therefore suggested that no contribution from any one person on that day shall exceed one dollar.

The press and postmasters throughout the country will receive and forward subscriptions; or, if preferable, a committee of citizens may take charge of the work under such plans as they may deem most efficacious. In either case it is desired that a complete list of subscribers be kept, all subscription lists, as well as copies of papers publishing the same, are desired for deposit in the corner-stone of the statue, and will be carefully retained for that purpose.

CONSUMPTION.

The Cause and Prevention.

Prof. Tyndall writes to the London Times to direct attention to some important results which may flow from the investigations and experiments of a German scientist, Dr. Koch. The result of these researches is to prove that tubercular consumption is caused by a parasite, which is described as rod-shaped and which disclosed itself in every case on the microscopic examination of the diseased organs of men and animals. Transferring directly, by inoculation, the tuberculous matter from diseased animals to healthy ones, Dr. Koch in every case reproduced the disease. To prove that the real contagion came from these bacilli he cultivated them artificially for long periods of time and through many successive generations. In every case inoculation was followed by the reproduction and spread of the parasite and the generation of the original disease. It is not easy to exaggerate the importance of these discoveries. About one-seventh of the human race, it is estimated on the basis of reliable statistics, die from some form of tubercular disease, and fully one-third of those who die in active middle life die from this cause. It has been already demonstrated that the disease was communicable, but Dr. Koch's aim has been to determine the precise character of the contagion which previous experiments had proved to be capable of indefinite transfer and reproduction. The result of his experiments tends to show that there is an essential similarity between tubercular diseases and the common eruptive fevers previously shown to be due to the growth within the body of the minute parasites termed bacilli. It is a characteristic of many, and probably of all, the disease-producing bacilli that they can be so altered by cultivation as to produce a mild disease instead of a severe one, and that the designed communication of the former will afford protection against the latter—as in the case of small-pox and the splenic fever of cattle. The next step will be the attempt to cultivate the bacilli in diminished intensity. What has already been accomplished, in the opinion of the London Times, affords a reasonable hope that an antidote to consumption and to tuberculous diseases generally may soon be brought within our reach; and the London Medical News expresses a like anticipation, thus:

"If Pasteur's culture experiments have led to the discovery of a method by which the poison of splenic fever is rendered harmless and the disease prevented by the timely inoculation of the modified virus, may we not hope that the time is not distant when the ravages of consumption will be prevented by the inoculation of a modified bacilus? The medical profession of the whole civilized world will now await with the keenest interest the developments which may be expected from further study of the bacillus tuberculosis."

For the Patriot.

John S. Lyons.

In the early days of granite enterprise in Quincy, the prominent firms engaged in it could be counted on the fingers of one hand, namely: Messrs. Richards, Munn & Co., O. T. Rogers & Co., Granite Railway Co., and James Newcomb. Perhaps the largest concern engaged was Richards, Munn & Co., who, with James Newcomb, were about the only operators in the South Quincy Commons, where now the number is so large I cannot attempt to count them.

Of the firm of Richards, Munn & Co., all save one, passed away many years ago, and within the past week (on the 14th inst.) Mr. John S. Lyons, the youngest and the last of that once enterprising firm departed this life at Dorchester, at the age of 63. Long before the birth of the Old Colony Railroad, was he commanding an army of men with hammers and drills to tear from the Laurentian beds the Syenite rocks, commonly and improperly called granite, in the Quincy Commons. He was an active man, and since his departure from Quincy, some twenty-five years ago, he has carried on an extensive granite business in Boston. His late residence in Dorchester, on Pleasant street, near Savin Hill, is an elegant "old time" mansion, with extensive grounds, and formerly occupied by the Emerys, an old aristocratic family of Dorchester in "ye olden time," where his widow and five sons, who survive him, still live. A married daughter, Mrs. Chase, lives near the residence. It is but a few months ago that his son George had returned home but two or three days from a trip to Florida, when his spirit gently left his manly form for the higher life beyond. Mr. Lyons was an ardent advocate of temperance, and was strongly opposed to smoking and chewing tobacco. It is rare to find a family of five young men in any city of whom not one either smokes, drinks, or chews, but it is true of his family; such an example of a parent is a fortune to any child starting in life.

Silently, swiftly and steadily old Mother Earth rolls on, travellers on its face drop by the way, and another generation fills their places. How beautiful and how wise is this provision of nature. Could we fashion the laws of the universe and shape the manner of existence upon our little planet we would not strike out death as the enemy of man, it is his friend, a blessing and not a curse.

Death removes our bodies when worn out and of no further use to the world. We would not live always upon the earth; pile all the beings inhabiting the planet the past ages upon the surface and life to-day would be insupportable, hence when our time comes, if we be ripe, let us be just, content, and not mar our life in giving place to a desire that this wise and beneficial law might be suspended to suit our individual self. As the drop in the ocean is part and parcel of the great universal mass, so are we of the great whole, and what is good for the aggregate is good for the individual, and the converse is equally true. "Be of good cheer," and trust in the ultimate.

☞ Cabbages are retailing at eight cents per pound; and the farmer who succeeded in raising forty thousand plants, and having every plant make a solid head, must have made a good thing. We have received the following letter:—

East Danvers, Mass., Nov. 25, 1881.

We used Bradley's Phosphate upon our cabbages again this year, using it according to the directions. This requires eight hundred pounds per acre. And with this amount we can raise the largest crops of cabbages that we ever grew in any way. We had over forty thousand plants, and every plant made a good, solid head.

We also raised a good crop of squashes by using this phosphate in the same way on them; and we get larger crops of potatoes, and better potatoes, where we use the phosphate in the drill than we ever got by any other method. We recommend it to our neigbors as the best and cheapest manure they can buy.

JAMES RICHARDSON.
CHARLES P. TRASK.

☞ A London paper says: "A lady was singing, last week, at a charity concert, and the audience insisted upon hearing her song a second time. Her daughter, a little child, was present, and on being asked afterwards how her mamma had sung, replied, "Very badly, for they made her do it all over again!"

The Quincy Patriot.

SATURDAY, MAY 27, 1882.

The Crane Memorial Hall.

The programme for the ceremonies at the dedication of the Crane Memorial Hall on Tuesday next has been arranged and will be found in another column. Col. Packard has consented to serve as Chief Marshall for the occasion. It is proposed to have the exercises simple and quite short, and adapted to the day and season. They will begin with a reception at the Crane Hall at 9 A. M., when the building will for the first time be thrown open to the public. The furniture will then be in place, the books on their shelves, and the interior decorated with flowers. Mrs. Crane, her sons and their party will arrive at 9 o'clock, and receive at the Crane Hall until 10 o'clock. The ladies and gentlemen of Quincy, and more particularly the former, will be expected to pay their respects to the family who have erected the building.

The masonic dedication exercises will take place at 10 o'clock, after which a procession will be formed and move to the church. The exercises there will begin as soon as the procession arrives, and occupy from an hour to an hour and a half, closing at about half after 12 o'clock. As it is Decoration Day it will be entirely a town affair, no special invitations to attend having been extended to official personages or well-known gentlemen outside of the town. Any person in Quincy or elsewhere who feels an interest in the occasion, or who was a friend of Mr. Crane, is invited to be present, and will receive a cordial welcome; but the simple nature of the exercises and the time to which they were limited, put any long programme of speakers or general entertainment out of the question, and it was accordingly deemed best to make the programme as simple, natural and spontaneous as possible. It was also ascertained that this would be most agreeable to the Crane family. All who reside in Quincy will therefore be expected to do whatever is in their power, by at least being present, to make the occasion a thorough local success in the way proposed.

THE PROCESSION.

The line will form at 9 o'clock, on Hancock street, near the PATRIOT Office, in the following order:—

City Band of Boston,
Chief Marshal and Aids,
South Shore Commandery,
Rural Lodge,
Most Worshipful Grand Lodge,
Independent Fusileers of Boston,
Paul Revere Post 88, G. A. R.,
Town Officers,
Orator, Clergy and Invited Guests.

Union Band of Quincy,
Chief Engineer and Assistants,
Fire Companies,
Clan McGregor and others.

The Fire Department will be formed on Adams street, near the Adams Academy as follows:—Hook and Ladder Co., Capt. Green; Vulture Engine Co., Capt. Lapham; W. M. French Hose Co., Capt. Pierce; Granite Engine Co., Capt. Barry; J. Q. Adams Chemical Engine Co., Capt. Richardson; and Tiger Engine Co., Capt. Williams. The companies are expected to report at 8.30 A. M. sharp.

The procession will move south over Hancock to Elm, through Elm to Washington, up Washington to Crane Memorial Hall, where dedicatory services will be held. The line will be again formed and march to the Adams Academy, and then to the First Church where there will be commemorative services and address by our townsman, C. F. Adams, Jr.

After the services the masonic bodies will move to Faxon Hall, and the fire companies to the old library building for dinner.

Decoration Day.

On Tuesday next, May 30th, the day set apart for the decoration of the graves of all soldiers and sailors of the late war, will be duly observed by Paul Revere Post, G. A. R.

The members assembly promptly at 6.30 in the morning at the Lyceum Hall, and a detachment under the command of Lewis G. McIntire will visit Mount Wollaston Cemetery and decorate the soldiers' grave in that place. Another detachment, under command of Albion S. Dodge, will visit the old Hancock Street Cemetery and the Episcopal Cemetery and decorate the mounds there. Samuel B. Turner, accompanied by Chaplain Kelley and other comrades will visit the cemetery at the National Sailors' Home, and hold services and decorate. Adjutant S. W. Spear and an assistant will visit Mount Auburn Cemetery and decorate the grave of Paul J. Revere.

At 7.30 A. M., the Post will visit and decorate the graves in the cemeteries at West Quincy. At 9.30 they will join the procession in the dedicatory services of the Crane Memorial Hall. At 2 P. M. a procession will be formed in front of their hall as follows: Union Band, Boston Fusileers, Capt. Snow, invited guests, &c., and march to the Wollaston Cemetery, where appropriate exercises will take place, and the soldiers' monument decorated.

At 3.30 an oration will be delivered in the Town Hall, by Rev. H. Evan Cotton, orator of the day.

THE NEW LIBRARY. We give our readers this week through the kindness of one of our citizens a very full description of the new public library building given to the town by the heirs of the late Thomas Crane. It is probably one of most substantial and costly public library buildings to be found in any town in the state. It will be an honor to the town, and a lasting memorial to the name of the Quincy boy whose money has paid for it.

It is a great pity the architect did not select a more central portion of the lot for its location,—as it would have made a handsomer appearance from all sides, and given much better satisfaction. A movement has already been started we learn to purchase the estate owned and occupied by Mr. Joseph T. French, so as to move the buildings off, and thus show the library building to a better advantage. Architects appear to be wise in many things but very foolish in others.

CONVICTED. The jury returned a verdict of guilty in the case of James Fitzgerald whose trial has taken place this week for obtaining money fraudently from Hon. Charles Francis Adams. The case will now go to the Supreme Court on exceptions.

☞ Dr. Gray's Lotion.

Brief Locals.

☞ There was quite a frost and some ice noticed on Wednesday morning.

☞ Carver's ice cream saloon opens on Decoration Day. Give him a call.

☞ The Rev. Mr. Wilson will preach to-morrow at the Quincy Home, about 3 o'clock.

☞ It will be seen by an advertisement that a beach house is wanted for a short time.

☞ Arrangements are being made for the annual summer excursion of the F. F. F's.

☞ Rev. Mr. Wilson has moved this week to Miss Elizabeth Adams' cosy residence on Elm street.

☞ Invitations are out for a grand wedding. The marriage ceremony takes place at Christ Church.

☞ We are compelled by a press of matter to lay aside this week, our valued Weymouth correspondence.

☞ Mr. John A. Newcomb, an old and highly respected citizen, died at his residence on Friday, after a lingering illness.

☞ Col. Packard's house has received a coat of paint this week, by the Haywards, and makes a show in its new colors.

☞ We learn that the Irishmen of West Quincy have forwarded $150 to Ireland, to assist in procuring council for imprisoned Irishmen.

☞ Dr. Whall, the apothecary, has received a sixth class license, and we learn he is prepared to supply liquors for medicinal and mechanical purposes.

☞ Service was not held at the Quincy Home last Sunday, the Rev. Mr. Wilson being called away to attend a funeral, and one of the inmates of the Home was also lying dead.

☞ William A. Oliver, belonging in Providence, was run over and killed at Atlantic, on Wednesday night, on the Old Colony railroad, by the outward night freight on which he was a brakeman.

☞ We were very sorry not to be able to attend the Golden Wedding festival of Mr. and Mrs. Ebenezer Adams, last Saturday evening. We tender our congratulations to this aged couple.

☞ Rev. Father Halley, a former pastor of St. John's and St. Mary's Churches in this town, but who is now pastor of the Immaculate Conception Church in Salem, sailed this week for Europe.

☞ Sailors and soldiers who served in the late war are invited to meet at Paul Revere Post's headquarters tomorrow, Sunday evening, at 7 o'clock to attend a Union service at the First Church.

☞ Notwithstanding this cold, dismal May, it is expected that strawberries will be ripe at Faxon Hall, June 7. There will be a crowd of dolls at the reception. Young folks and old folks see advertisement.

☞ A beautiful picture of the late Thomas Crane, who so generously contributed a handsome fund for a library building, which is to be dedicated on the 30th inst., is to be seen at Mr. John O. Holden's jewelry store.

☞ The work at the new library has been pushed forward quite rapidly this week, considering the rainy weather. The walks have been concreted; a large number of evergreen trees planted, and the ground are beginning to look very attractive.

☞ The best news that some of our citizens have heard for many days is the announcement that the Geneva Award bill has passed the Senate in the form in which it came from the House. The matter has been before Congress at every session for eight years, suffering defeat at some stage every year.

☞ Deacon George Thomas of Quincy Point, one of the oldest, if not the oldest gentleman in town, celebrated his 87th birthday on the 7th instant. He is a hale and hearty person, very smart for one of his age, and bids fair to be useful for years to come. He has probably built more vessels during his long and useful life than any other man in this state. He commenced when very young, and continued till quite recently.

BAPTIST. Rev. C. D. R. Meacham, who preached at the Baptist Chapel, Quincy Point, last Sunday, will again supply the pulpit on the coming Sabbath. Mr. Meacham is an exceedingly earnest, practical preacher. His discourse last Sunday on the "Perpetuity of the Gospel" was an eloquent, vigorous presentation of the indestructibility of the Bible. For more than the usual time allotted for a sermon, he held his audience without any loss of interest, some saying at the close that they could have listened much longer. S. S. Concert in the evening. Mr. Meacham will address the school, and Rev. Geo. B. Lawton will give a black board illustration of the topic for the evening.

FIRE IN WEYMOUTH! The office of the Advance at East Weymouth was destroyed by fire on Sunday morning last. The building and contents were entirely consumed. The building was owned by Alva Raymond whose loss is estimated at $1,000. The Advance Publishing Company's loss is estimated at $4,300 and there was an insurance of $2,300. This is the second printing office that has been burned in that village and what is a little singular both fires were caused by incendiaries.

WARM SUMMER. It is stated that the cold spring indicates an exceptionally warm summer. Fields of ice still block harbors of Newfoundland, and the ocean steamers encounter an unusually large number of icebergs, which causes the present cool weather. The bergs must have been cast loose by a phenomenally early action of solar heat in the Arctic regions and it is asserted that unseasonable warmth there unerringly indicates the advent of a very hot summer elsewhere.

UNPAID LETTERS. After June 1st letters upon which the postage has not been paid will not be forwarded to the dead letter office, but the postmaster at the mailing office will notify the addressed by postal card of the presence of such letters in the office, and upon receipt of the postage, they will be forwarded.

FOR LIFE. The trial of James McKenney of Braintree, for the murder of William McComish was finished last Saturday and McKenney was sent to jail for the remainder of his life.

Quincy Point Items.

Mr. Walton Hall took a party of friends fishing Thursday; they went in the "Faustina," Capt. George H. Higgins, and had a fine time. We hear Mr. Hall is trying to catch materials for a lecture, to be given shortly before the Q. P. T. A.

We hear the late sparring match in Town Hall was eclipsed by that given at the "Pegurian House" Thursday evening.

The fire alarm wire was run to the Neck Thursday; the line is now complete from Atlantic to Winter street.

The Quincy Point Temperance Association held its regular meeting Wednesday evening; a fair sized audience was present and listened to remarks by Messrs. Hall, Lawton, Bills, Tinkham and Federhen. Next Wednesday evening Mr. W. T. Barry will give a talk on "optics."

The golden wedding of Mr. and Mrs. Ebenezer Adams was celebrated at their residence on Washington street, Saturday evening. The number of relatives and friends present tendered the worthy couple their hearty congratulations, and left many souvenirs of their visit; during the evening many wishes for their future health and happiness were expressed.

Friday evening of last week the "United Six" gave a sociable at the Neck School-house; though rainy, about fifteen couple were present and took part in the dancing.

The Gamewell Company changed the telephone wire on to the fire alarm poles this week, and the old poles have been removed; the looks of the street is much improved.

Saturday a naptha stove, in use aboard Mr. Granger's yacht "Neva," exploded and caught fire; the man in charge of the boat threw the stove overboard, but some of the oil ignited on top of the water badly burning the tender and scorching the yacht.

Mr. Henry Kittredge, who has been residing in Kansas City, Mo., for some time past, is at home for a short vacation.

The children of the Christian Union Sabbath School gave a concert in the church Sunday evening, in the presence of a large audience. The exercises were quite interesting, but not up to the usual standard in number.

The disease known as the "pink eye" has attacked several children during the week; we understand that, while it is painful and inconvenient, it is not dangerous.

Score victory No. 1 for the "Amy."

Quincy Yacht Club Regatta.

The first regatta of the Quincy Yacht Club took place off Quincy Great Hill on Wednesday afternoon. The day was all that could be asked for; the wind being strong from the northwest. The first class did not sail, as the Thorn was the only yacht in that class that was ready. In the second class seven started promptly at 3 o'clock, and made a handsome appearance, going off before the wind. They all kept within hailing distance throughout the race, and the Amy came in ahead and won the first prize. In the third class but three yachts started, they being the crack boats in that class. The Zip took the lead at the start, followed closely by the Flora Lee and Dandelion. The race was a hot one throughout and was won by the Flora Lee. The Cosette was capsized a short distance from the shore, and was towed in by Capt. Croucher's yacht Nat. About seventy-five persons rode down in carriages and boats to witness the race. Below is the summary:

Hough's Neck.

Cold and rather rainy at the beach, but still it is quite lively. Cottages are in good demand and several are already occupied for the season.

It made you think of old times to glance over the water at Great Hill Wednesday.

Mr. Whicher's house is receiving a coat of paint and is already let for the season.

The Albion House, which has lately changed hands, is losing its "barber pole" appearance, and together with Vine Cottage, will soon be ready to let.

Mr. Tuckerman's house on the cliff is also changing its coat, for the owner can't be left in the back ground.

Where are the little "Daiseys" at "Daisey Cot." There friends are enquiring for them.

Don't forget that you will need ice cream and sherbert Decoration Day, and that you may be sure to find them at the Linden House.

Mr. Belcher, at the island, is building a piazza to his house.

Mr. Cobb has been having a hard time in the rain trying to build an addition, but in spite of all, his house begins to present quite an imposing appearance.

Several new houses are already talked of, and it will soon be as gay as it has been dull.

Dry Time in Quincy

Last week I saw a person at the Neponset depot inquiring where he could get a drink. On being informed that he could probably get one at the Neponset House, he seemed so pleased that he asked his informant to go up with him and take something. He said he arrived recently at Quincy Point, in a coal vessel, and had come all the way from that place to get a drink, for he could find none in Quincy. This seemed like good news, but as he was a respectable looking, active man, we thought, perhaps, the reason he could get no whiskey was, because he was suspected of being one of Mr. Faxon's detectives. Considerable effort was recently put forth in Neponset village to prevent certain parties from getting licenses, and we are informed that they succeeded in one case, but in this effort as in some others we are reminded that Dorchester is within the limits of Boston.

Thomas Crane Public Library.

The building is in plan a parallelogram, measuring about 41 by 84 feet, and contains basement, library hall and a low attic story, with pitch roof, gable ends at the east and west, and gables on the south and north facades. The materials entering into its construction are Easton granite and Longmeadow brown stone for external walls, and red terracotta tiles and ridge-saddles or crotchets for roof covering.

The granite is laid in random ashler, with the quarry faces, and the base, sill and lintel courses, door and window jambs, gable copings, etc., of brown stone, are in the quarry face and partly dressed, with a moderate amount of carving, in conventional and natural ornamentation. The gutters are of stone, and end in large plain water-spouts at the corners. The interior finish is of figured Georgia pine, finished in wax and oil polish. The building is located on the Woodward lot, on Washington street, setting well back from the street, with what promises to be a fine lawn in front (barring anything but a gracefully laid out carriage and foot-way,) and its general aspect is on the whole imposing and pleasing. The style of architecture may be classed as "Richardsonian," though Mr. R. would probably call it a free treatment of the Romanesque; but aside from the arched doorway and the group of arched windows overhead, there is nothing distinctively Romanesque about it.

The leading motifs of the south facade are, the arched entrance-way and the semi-circular "bay" projecting, and enclosing stair-way to basement and attic, flanked on the left by a belt of small windows with carved columns between—giving light to the alcoves within—and on the right by a large window, sub-divided into twelve small lights by heavy stone mullions, lighting reading room. The entrance is off of the centre of the facade to the right, and is through a low heavy arch, forming an open porch within the main walls of the building, with a stone seat at the right with a blind window, over seat, of Mexican onyx marble set in the stone work.

The door, a small low one, is at the left. The arch is a strong, sturdy one, low, and starting on rough blocks, (which we suppose are intended for carved capitals) with large carved bead in conventional design on the intrados, and carved hood moulding on the extrados of the voussoirs. Above the archway is a swelling frieze bearing the legend,— with the town seal at the right and the Crane coat-of-arms—a crane and gothic C—at the left, carved in the stone and surmounted by a gable containing a group of three small arched windows with carved jambs and archivolts.

ANNO DOMINI

The west, north and east facades are severely plain, with large and small windows, cut up into small lights by heavy stone mullions. A large gable is the crowning feature of the north facade, and an unnecessary and unseemly defiance of architectural and constructional propriety is glaringly set forth, in designing the left foot or heel of the gable, directly over the middle of one of a group of windows; a huge chimney-top crowns the east gable.

Passing through the entrance-arch and door-way, we step directly from out-doors into the library hall, without any intervening vestibule, this we consider a mistake and objectionable.

A lofty room of excellent proportions running from end to end, and, as before stated, finished in Georgia pine, with opera-timbered ceiling, moulded, and high paneled wainscoting all around, with a small portion of the walls plastered and laid with embossed leather in a monotone of old gold and black. To our right, on entering, is the reading room, and to our left, the library proper. The reading room has a most cheery and hospitable fire-place in the centre of the east wall, and the breast work above up to the ceiling is very profusely enriched with carved columns and entablature in natural foliated design, with panel in the centre for a memorial tablet of hammered brass. To the right and left of the fire-place will hang portraits of Mr. and Mrs. Crane. The reading room is surrounded by broad easy seats or wall benches built in, and lighted by windows to the north, east and south.

At the west end is the library proper, occupying full half of the hall, and containing sixteen ornate alcoves in two stories, with a capacity of about 40,000 volumes. An ornate bridge at the further end gives access across the hall, from and to the upper tier of alcoves on either side. A screen librarian's desk and delivery counter of unique design separate the library proper from the public. The windows are filled with stained glass treated in an artistic manner, some of it being from John La Farge, with appropriate emblematic designs interwoven in conventional and naturalistic treatment. The gas-fixtures are of wrought brass of appropriate design.

Having given a general description of the building we will now consider it from an architectural and practical point of view, and in passing we would say that we doubt if there is any [illegible] who has more admired or felt more in harmony with a great deal of Mr. Richardson's works than the writer, and any criticism of the present example will be made, if biased at all, in sympathy with him. But we cannot say that the Crane Library is satisfactory. We have heard many of the towns-people speak of it with much disappointment, and the writer considers it the least acceptable and pleasing of any of Mr. Richardson's recent works. While its general characteristics are those of its architect, it bears not the stamp of thought and study that the most of this architect's works show. It either lacks the inspiration of the moment of design, that will sometimes fail the cultured architect, or it has the handiwork of some subordinate. It has an air of restlessness, (the word, though unarchitectural, expresses the writer's impression) of incompleteness, which is quite disappointing, and which we think will grow upon us rather than diminish.

For a building of its kind and character its entrance is too insignificant, and lacks breadth of treatment. It should have been large, broad, hospitable, as though it would say to every one: "Come in." The windows are too small and prison-like either for dignity of design or for the practical admission of light, and we predict that in years to come when the interior wood-work has grown dark with age, as it surely will, that lack of daylight will be a serious drawback.

In our opinion there should have been an interior vestibule, screening the library hall from out-doors direct, with a place for wet garments, umbrellas and the like. The reading room would be much better if separated from the rest by a stained glass screen or heavy draperies, in place of being exposed to more or less noise, dust and outer air. True, the effect of the grand hall would be in a measure lost; but a library is for intellectual use, as well as for architectural effect. We should have preferred more of rough plastered walls, treated in warm, rich oriental coloring and frescoes, giving a warmth and cheerfulness to the interior which it lacks at present. It is too woody and expressionless as finished, but on the whole the interior is far more acceptable than the exterior.

The most pertinent and oft-repeated criticism we have heard, is, why was not this building built of Quincy granite? For a Quincy library, in memory of a Quincy man, and, we might say, built and paid for by Quincy money, to be built of any granite but that of Quincy, seems unnecessary and inexcusable. And still another practical question asserts itself. Where has the cost gone to, which is said to approximate $50,000? We can only say that we fail to see where it has been put, and that, in our opinion, as good and substantial a building in all respects could have been erected, at once much more pleasing, ornate and satisfactory, both from an architectural and practical point of view.

To sum the matter up, the Crane library is a solid, substantial, thoroughly built, [illegible] realizing the main highly acceptable and appreciated, and Quincy is to be congratulated in possessing so good an one.

Obituary.

In East Milton, April 29th, Mrs. Mary Elizabeth, wife of Mr. J. Wesley Martin.

Mrs. Martin had been unwell for several years, but was not considered dangerously ill until a few days previous to her departure, therefore her unexpected call to go to the better life was a severe shock to all who knew her. In external appearance she was seemingly gradually increasing in renewed life forces. Whether it was considered wisdom by her spirit-friends that she should not know of her internal incurable disease, remains a secret with them. When she learned that she had an internal tumor, and that she could not recover, she calmly remarked, a short time before the "death change" took place, "I am now at rest," and her spirit then peacefully and triumphantly took its flight. She being highly mediumistic and well informed in the laws of nature in human life, looked upon what is known as "death" as a natural event to all human beings, necessary to a birth to a higher sphere of existence; therefore it had no terror for her.

Mrs. Martin was beloved by all who knew her, for her many womanly traits of character. Before she was convinced of Spiritualism being a truth, she attended the Congregationalist meetings, but since then she has been a consistent, practical Spiritualist, publicly expressing her convictions of the fact of spirit communion. She enjoyed spirit-messages and manifestations in a great degree. Her parlors were often filled with neighbors, that they too might share the inspirations that fell from the inspired lips of the mediums.

She leaves [illegible] husband, mother, brother, two sisters, and other relatives and friends, and joins her father and sister in her new home. Her genial countenance and material presence will be sadly missed, but her well unfolded spirit will, without question, return with words of comfort and guidance. Truly a good, noble woman has exchanged spheres of life. Mrs. Sarah A. Byrnes spoke consoling, fitting words at the funeral, followed by Jos. D. Stiles with an appropriate poem. Floral offerings were bestowed in abundance by sympathizing friends.

Domestic or Home-Made Wine.

As there is to be no licenses granted this year in Quincy for the sale of intoxicating drinks and temperance seems to be the order of the day, there may be some persons who have a surplus of fruit who may wish to make a summer beverage for their own use. We will give our method and materials in preparing what we call domestic or homemade wines.

The most important article we use is drawn or raised from the bottom of our well by hand power and is called water. It has different names on other parts of the earth according to the language of the people; but it is admitted, we believe by all nations and people, to be the most useful, healthy and life-giving fluid that can be taken into the human stomach. In fact all living creatures seem to like it, and thirst for it, and it satisfies the thirst of all except the human race. The next article we use is sugar which is a very important item in the preparation. It is healthy and strengthening; much more so than most people may give it credit. The sugar and water are about 75 per cent. of the domestic or temperance wines we prepare. The acids we use are pressed from the various fruits grown in our garden. As good well ripened fruit is considered as healthy food as a person can eat, the juice thereof cannot be injurious. These three articles are all that we use in any preparation that we call wine.

There is no iron, no beef, no whisky, brandy, rum, or alcohol, put in it, and if there is any there it must come from the fruit or sugar.

PERSONAL. The following complimentary notice we copy from the Danvers Mirror, without our townsman's consent or knowledge. Mr. Faxon has many enemies in Quincy, which is not to be wondered at, as no one can advocate and push forward any cause, even if he has good judgment, but what he will at times make blunders, or tread upon some one's corns:—

"Henry H. Faxon of Quincy is the most unselfish, persevering and thorough-going temperance man, probably, that the world knows of. Men like Gough, Neal Dow, Murphy, Reynolds, and others, go round lecturing on temperance for $250 or a less sum per night, all of them for what they can make out of it, but Mr. Faxon establishes temperance headquarters in Boston, employs clerks, prints and scatters temperance documents broadcast over the land, and pays all the bills with his own money. He even serves as constable for the prosecution of liquor selling in his own town, and in fact gives nearly his whole time and thousands of dollars annually to the work restraining the evil of intemperance. We feel safe in saying that there is not another man in the United States who does the same to the same extent, and therefore we think Mr. Faxon entitled to the first rank in the army of temperance workers. The latest document from his headquarters at 36 Bromfield street, Boston, is a pamphlet of forty pages of the public statutes, embracing everything in the laws relating to the observance of the Lord's Day, gaming, intoxicating liquor, suppression of common nuisances, innholders, common victualers, and municipal regulation of police."

Whereas, application has been made to said Court to grant a letter of administration on the estate of said deceased, to John Q. A. Field, of Quincy, in the County of Norfolk,

You are hereby cited to appear at a Probate Court to be holden at Quincy, in said County of Norfolk, on the second Wednesday of June, next, at nine o'clock in the forenoon, to show cause if any you have, against granting the same.

And said petitioner is hereby directed to give public notice thereof, by publishing this Citation once a week, for three successive weeks, in the newspaper called the QUINCY PATRIOT, printed at Quincy, the last publication to be two days at least, before said Court.

Witness, GEORGE WHITE, Esquire, Judge of said Court, this twenty-fifth day of May in the year one thousand eight hundred and eighty-two.

JONATHAN COBB, Register.

HEADQUARTERS
Paul Revere Post No. 88,
Grand Army of the Republic.

DEPARTMENT OF MASSACHUSETTS,
General Order No. 1.

IN Compliance with the laws of our Order, our established custom and general orders from headquarters, the comrades of this Post will observe Tuesday, the 30th day of May, as Memorial Day. Comrades, each recurring Memorial Day brings to the living added duties. There are more mounds to decorate, and fewer hands to bear the offerings. The Grand Army that followed the flag with loyal devotion from '61 to '65 is crossing the line to join the Grand Army of the Invisible. Let us perform our duties to the end, that as soldiers, we may illustrate the devotion to comrades of those who touched the elbow beneath the flag of the stripes and the stars.

All living in town who served in the late war are cordially invited to join with the Post in the services of the day. Comrades of the war days, will you not assemble with us through the day, assist us in our duties, and partake of our rations.

All members of the order and all who served in the late war are invited to meet at Revere Hall at 7 P. M., Sunday, May 28th, to attend divine services at the First Church.

All friends of the order are invited to send food to Revere Hall during the forenoon of May 30th, for the noon collation of the Post and its guests.

All persons are cordially invited to send flowers to Lyceum Hall on the morning of Memorial Day.

ORDER OF THE DAY.

1. The Post will assemble promptly at 6.30 A. M. in Lyceum Hall.
2. A detail of comrades under the command of S. V. C., Lewis G. McIntire, will decorate the graves at Mount Wollaston Cemetery.
3. A detail of comrades under the command of J. V. C., Albion S. Dodge, will decorate the graves in the Town and English Cemeteries.
4. A detail of comrades under the command of O. D., Samuel B. Turner, accompanied by the Chaplain of the Day Rev. Samuel Kelley, will proceed to the National Sailors' Home, hold services, and decorate the graves in that cemetery.
5. Adjutant Samuel W. Spear, will make a detail of one comrade, and accompanied by him, proceed to Mount Auburn Cemetery and deposit a wreath marked Post 88, G. A. R. on the grave of Paul J. Revere.
6. Quarter-master William P. Martin, will have charge of invited guests.
7. At 7.30 A. M. the Post will proceed in carriages to West Quincy, where appropriate services will be held, after which the graves will be decorated in the different cemeteries.
8. At 9.30 A. M. the Post will assemble at Revere Hall, Post Headquarters, and accompanied by the Union Band, and the Boston Fusileers as an escort, will report to Chief Marshal, Colonel A. B. Packard, to join with the other organizations of the town in the dedicatory services of Thomas Crane Memorial Building.
9. At 12 M. a collation will be served at Post Headquarters, for the Post and their invited guests.
10. At 2 P. M. a procession will form headed by the Union Band, in front of Post Headquarters, Hancock street, consisting of the Post and other soldiers and sailors of the late war, Boston Fusileers, invited guests and citizens of Quincy. The line of march will be taken to Mount Wollaston Cemetery, where with appropriate ceremonies the monument will be decorated with flowers.
11. At 3.30 P. M. an oration will be delivered by the Orator of the Day, Rev. H. Evan Cotton, at the Town Hall, to which the public is generally invited.

Per order,
I. M. HOLT,
Commander.
S. W. SPEAR,
Adjutant.

GUARDIAN'S SALE
— OF —
REAL ESTATE
IN QUINCY.

WILL be sold at Public Auction, on Thursday, June 1st, 1882,
at 4 o'clock P. M., on the premises, the well known Double Cottage House and Stable, with about one-half acre of land, on Granite street, and belonging to the heirs of the late Peter B. Page. This estate fronts on Granite street 66 feet, and is about 125 feet deep. The dwelling house has ten apartments, a good cellar and a never failing well of water. The house is laid out to accommodate two families. The buildings are well painted and in good repair, and just the place for the man who has but a small amount of cash, as he can occupy one-half and let the other at a good price. Tenements are very scarce in this locality. Within ten minutes' walk of the depot, where trains run almost hourly. The public should understand that in this locality a city has almost grown up in a day by the efforts of our fellow townsman, James Nightingale, Esq., thereby making the property very valuable. This sale offers a rare opportunity to parties about seeking a permanent location as the property in and around this vicinity is held and owned by the occupants.

P. S. Parties about seeking a home will read the above, think over it, and be at the sale prepared to pay $200 down, and the balance in ten days on delivery of deed.

The auctioneer has houses and land to sell in Quincy, Weymouth, Braintree and Dorchester. Apply at his office, 702 Washington street, Boston.

EARS FOR THE MILLION!
FOO CHOO'S BALSAM OF SHARK'S OIL.
Positively Restores the Hearing, and is the Only Absolute Cure for Deafness Known.
This Oil is abstracted from peculiar species of small White Shark, caught in the Yellow Sea, known as Carcharodon Rondeleth. Every Chinese fisherman knows it. Its virtues as a restorative of hearing were discovered by a Buddhist Priest about the year 1410. Its cures were so numerous and many so seemingly miraculous, that the remedy was officially proclaimed over the entire Empire. Its use became so universal that for over 300 years no Deafness has existed among the Chinese people. Sent, charges prepaid, to any address at $1.00 per bottle.
Hear What the Deaf Say!
It has performed a miracle in my case.
I have no unearthly noises in my head and hear much better.
I have been greatly benefited.
My deafness helped a great deal—think another bottle will cure me.
"Its virtues are unquestionable and its curative character absolute, as the writer can personally testify, both from experience and observation. Write at once to HAYLOCK & JENNEY, 7 Dey street, New York, enclosing $1, and you will receive by return a remedy that will enable you to hear like anybody else, and whose curative effects will be permanent. You will never regret doing so."—Editor of Mercantile Review.

James Morison, M. D.

James Morison, M. D., died at his residence in Quincy on Saturday morning, May 20. He was born in Peterboro, N. H., June 20, 1818, graduated at Harvard University in 1833, and received his medical degree from the University of Maryland in 1846. He was nearly five years resident physician of the Baltimore infirmary. He went to San Francisco in 1850, where he practised his profession till 1854. Then he went to Europe, and for two years spent most of his time in Paris, attending medical lectures and the clinics of the hospitals. In 1858 he returned to San Francisco, where, in addition to an extensive medical practice, he assisted in the organization of the first medical school on the Pacific coast, and for five years filled the office of professor of the theory and practice of medicine and pathology in that school. He was one of the trustees of the University of the Pacific and vice-president of the California Medical So. Wishing to bring up his children where they would have better advantages of education, he left California in 1867, and in June, 1869, removed to Quincy, where he has practised his profession for thirteen years. Dr. Morison was an able and successful practising physician, but more distinguished as a student who made himself thoroughly acquainted with the resources and capabilities of his profession, and who kept up with its advancing knowledge and improvements. The feeling of his brother physicians toward him is shown by the fact that at his death he had just been unanimously chosen president of the Norfolk County Medical Society, to which he belonged.

Within twenty-seven months Quincy has sustained the loss of six physicians: Drs. James A. Stetson, William B. Duggan, Joseph Underwood, William S. Pattee, L. F. Butler and James Morison. All of them were able men, and all were good citizens of Quincy. In the death of Dr. James Morison, a physician is removed whose extensive and accurate knowledge in his profession was unquestioned, whose wise and tender offices at the sick-bed were greatly appreciated, and whose broad culture, fine instincts and lovable spirit were valued by a constantly increasing circle. A natural shyness sometimes stood in the way of his contracting intimacies, but when this was overcome those who learned to know him were impressed with the nobility of his character. His thoughtfulness was something remarkable. He never knowingly offended any, and his good feelings toward all were so predominant that he was surprised and pained when misunderstood, and rather than vindicate himself would suffer and be silent. While the town loses in him a valuable citizen, his patients, more in number this year than during any year he has been in Quincy, feel they have sustained personal bereavement.

The funeral services took place at the home of the deceased last Tuesday at four o'clock in the afternoon. A very large number of the townspeople were present, as was also a numerous delegation of his fellow physicians especially of Norfolk County. Two brothers of the doctor were able to attend,—one of them, the Rev. John H. Morison, D. D., of Boston is widely known as a writer on practical theology. The services were conducted by the pastor of the deceased, the Rev. D. M. Wilson, assisted by the Rev. W. O. White formerly of Keene, N. H., a connection of the family and at one time pastor of Mr. and Mrs Morison.

The remains were taken to Peterboro, N. H., where they were interred in the family burying place. Sanford, the son, who was in the far West when he heard of his father's death, arrived in time to be present at these final services.

Flower and Fruit Mission.

That beautiful charity, the Boston Flower and Fruit Mission, began its work for the present season on Monday in the Hollis Street Chapel. This organization has for its work the distribution of flowers, plants, fruits, jellies and eggs in the homes of the sick and infirm poor, in hospitals, diet kitchens, medical dispensaries, etc. In the department of flowers alone, no less than 2000 bunches have been made up and distributed in a single day by the members of the mission. Owing to the backwardness of the season, the number of garden and wild flowers sent last Monday was small, and the managers would be very much pleased if people having greenhouses and conservatories would, for two or three weeks, send what flowers they can spare.

It is earnestly requested that all who are interested in this charity, will send their weekly offerings, however small. Also that children may be encouraged in gathering and sending wild flowers of the season, which, to many of the sick and poor, are more welcome than the rarest flowers of the garden. Contributions in Quincy may be sent on Wednesday afternoon and evening of next week, to the house of Mr. E. Granville Pratt, Hancock street.

LAGER. The Boston Globe says: "We should expect that a party of gentlemen from Quincy who go out to sea in yachts would refrain from the use of intoxicating beverages out of respect for the law and Messrs. Faxon and Furnald. And yet the reporters who saw the judges' boat land Wednesday after the regatta of the Quincy Yacht Club do say that a case of empty lager-beer bottles was taken off. Perhaps the case was used for ballast. We wonder where they procured it. There is no such thing in Quincy."

We learn when Officer Furnald seized the case as it came ashore, nearly all the bottles were full,—only four had been emptied. The Globe reporter had better be careful; Furnald will be after him. Officer Furnald's opinion is if the Globe reporter had been admitted to the Judges' boat, the case would have contained nothing but empty bottles.

The Park Question.—No. 4.

To the Editors of the Patriot:

One other argument that I have heard advanced against the town taking the land of the Greenleaf farm for a park, is that the so doing would in some way be an injustice to the Woodward fund. As one person I heard of expressed it: "Why, the trustees could keep selling that land for fifty years to come, bringing money in all the time!" It is not very easy to discuss a business and a financial proposition with a person who apparently has never heard of the blacksmith and his horseshoe nails. It is true, a parcel of land like the Woodward tract can be held, and peddled out in lots, for fifty years before the whole of it is disposed of. Would any competent business trustee, however, so hold it, if he had a good chance to sell it all at once? He most certainly would not, if he had ever been a successful man in the management of his own affairs. I remember very well Mr. William Appleton, one of the shrewdest business men that ever lived in Boston, looking at his house on the best part of Beacon street, and remarking that he remembered the time when the lot on which the house stood could have been bought for a thousand dollars. When he spoke it might have been worth $20,000. Some one carelessly remarked in reply that it was unfortunate for Mr. Appleton that he was not able to buy it then; to which Mr. Appleton at once answered back, that he had done the sum, and the accumulated interest on the $1000 had amounted to a great deal more than the increase in value of the land. Of course it had. William Appleton was too keen a business man not to remember the blacksmith and his nails. He was speaking of a time sixty years back. In sixty years $1000, at 6 per cent. interest, becomes over $30,000. The land meanwhile during those sixty years had increased in value only from $1000 to $20,000. He had actually made money by not buying it until he wanted it, and then paying the whole enormous increase of price.

That was the way of looking of a thorough business man. Now let us apply his process of reasoning to the Woodward fund. Let us suppose that the land North of the brook, which it is proposed to take for a park, is bought by the town for $14,000,—its present market value as estimated by Messrs. Whitman & Breck. Dr. Woodward, in his will, provided that the town should guarantee 6 per cent. interest on his fund. At 6 per cent. interest $14,000 in fifty years will amount to $300,000. This is rather startling, but it is so; and where does it leave that "fifty year" argument? The price of the blacksmith's nails, it will be remembered, counted up at an appalling rate. Does any one in his senses then believe that it is a good, or even a defensible, business proceeding to keep a trust of this sort in unproductive land for year after year if that land can be turned at a fair price into a solid lump of money? The present trustees of the Woodward fund will not be likely to take that view of the matter. The town to-day has twenty year notes at 6 per cent. outstanding. In twenty years $14,000 at 6 per cent. interest rolls up to nearly $50,000.

Does any one suppose that in twenty years the proposed park grounds, if held in the trust as they now are, will be worth to the fund either $50,000, or half that sum? If any one does suppose this, it would be well for him to exercise his memory and his arithmetic a little. It is now twenty-seven years, or thereabouts, since Dr. Woodward laid out Greenleaf street, and brought the land into the market. It is just thirteen years yesterday since he died. In the whole twenty-seven years not half of the available land South of the brook has been sold; and the entire amount received since his death by the fund from sales, rents and all other sources, except interest, does not amount to $20,000. The increase of the next twenty years in that part of the town, is not likely, unless a park is laid out, to exceed the increase of the last twenty. It probably will not equal it. If the land North of the brook, which it is proposed to take for a park, were now sold in a lump for $14,000, and the money allowed to accumulate, it would in twenty years amount to a sum equal to $1000 for every acre of upland, front or rear, in the whole tract, and $250 an acre for the salt-marsh, ponds and muck-holes. Who can question then what is for the interest of the Woodward fund? The policy of slowly peddling out its land has probably cost that fund quite enough already.

It would, on the contrary, rather be for the interest of the town to wait, and take the risk of buying the land when it actually needs it at its then price. Unfortunately, however, waiting in such a case involves another risk. The land not only may be, but almost certainly within the next twenty years will be, divided and more or less built on. Then good-by forever to a water-park for Quincy! Once let a private holding creep into those eighty acres and the question of cost assumes a wholly new shape. The town will have lost its pleasure ground, and the Woodward fund its chance of a lump sale.

Such a result, as I see it, would be very unfortunate both for the town and for the Woodward fund,—unfortunate in every way. The purpose of Dr. Woodward in creating the fund was set forth in his will,—it was to provide the town with an "Institute for the education of females." It is greatly for the interest of the town that this purpose should be realized with the least possible delay. By realizing it we shall not only improve our educational opportunities, but we relieve ourselves at once of a steady demand for increased expenses at the High School. In every way, therefore, Quincy is interested,—directly and immediately interested,—in the early establishment of the Woodward Institute. The thing can be brought about at once by the purchase of the fund-land North of the brook by the town for common or park purposes. It is then for the interest of the town to buy it, and for the interest of the fund to sell it, if only to get the school, and nothing else. If the town bought the proposed park grounds, and paid $14,000 for it in its own 6 per cent. notes put into the Woodward fund, the amount it would pay would be $840 a year. Would it not be worth while for the town to pay $840 a year to get the Woodward Institute now? The question ought to answer itself. Then, if the town does not want a park now, or is afraid of the cost of improving it, let it call the land a common, and lease it out as a cow-pasture for the next ten years. It will want the park presently; and meanwhile it will actually have the Institute. So to speak, it will then have both a bird in the hand and a bird in the nest.

QUINCY, May 22d, 1882.

For the Patriot.

Reminiscence of the War.

As I was looking over some papers a few days ago, I came across a letter which was written by one of the Quincy "Boys in Blue" during the late rebellion, and as Decoration Day is so near, when it will be the sad and loving duty of the G. A. R. Comrades to lay upon the graves of their fallen brothers their floral tributes, I thought perhaps it might be interesting to some of those who were with the writer of the letter when he fell in battle on the 22d of June, 1864, (near Petersburg, Va.,) and who hastily made a grave and buried him on that spot. Here he has no grave; but his name is with the names of the other brave men on the Soldiers' Monument in Wollaston Cemetery, and also on a marble tablet in the family lot in the old burying ground.

P.

FORT TILLINGHAST, VA.,
May 14th, 1863.

Dear Mother:—Your letter of the 1st inst. was duly received, and although I am quite unwell with the "dumb ague," I will try to write a few lines in answer.

You speak of M——'s death. It is very sad, but we must bow to the high will of him who placed us here, to do not as our own will dictates, but as he decrees.

I can see plainly that it makes but little difference whether a man dies on the "battle field" or in the peaceful quiet room at home; [illegible] the former case he is unattended by dear relatives and kind friends, but it matters not to the spirit after it has passed beyond the sphere of this cold earth. I have seen enough since I came away from home to make the warmest blood chill in their veins, or harden the softest of hearts. I cannot help wishing at time that this war might be brought to a close, but I would not wish to see this with anything like dishonor attending it. I am in hopes for better success to our cause in the future, but still I look for hard fighting and great loss of life on both sides during the coming summer.

We of the 14th have been very fortunate, we may be so in the future, but when we take up arms and make it our business to follow the fortunes of war we must be prepared for the worst. I must say that although I am not anxious to get into a battle, I shall not shrink back when duty calls. I shall try to do my duty as a soldier, worthy of the town, the state, and the parents that gave me birth.

Should I not live to return again to my home, it will be one of the fortunes of war, and we must give up to it. I can hardly write as I am all aches and pains; if I don't get rid of this dreadful ague I shall not be worth much out here; I can't bear to lay still and have others doing my duty, but it must be so at present. The soldiers have ruined everything here; camps have stopped vegetation all over Virginia; this is a wilderness of ruin. I wish I could get a chance to go home for a few days, but all furloughs are stopped for the present. Hoping to be better soon, I am affectionately yours,

W.

The following is an extract from a letter written by Sergeant George F. Kelly, of Co. M., 1st Massachusetts Regiment, Heavy Artillery, and conveys the sat intelligence of the death of W. on the battle field.

"It is now my painful duty to inform you that while I am writing, our boys are burying Orderly Sergeant William L. Burrell. When we found his body the rebels had stripped it of every thing he had on. All the Sergeants but myself are either killed or wounded. We have but twenty-five men left."

After reading all the advertisements of Spring medicines and blood purifiers, we advise the use of AYER'S SARSAPARILLA. Impurities of the blood, though their name be legion, tremble and fear before it. It is the king of all blood purifiers, and the best of all medicines for Spring disorders.

Sold by all druggists. Ask for AYER'S SARSAPARILLA, and do not be persuaded to take any other. Price, $1; six bottles for $5.

NOW IS THE TIME TO USE
Kingsley's Iron Tonic.
It builds up the system, gives health and strength to the frame, improves the appetite, and works wonders with feeble children or mothers. Be sure and get the genuine and try it. It is used by some of the best physicians and hospitals.
KINGSLEY'S IRON AND MANDRAKE PILLS are the best cathartic or Spring Medicine you can use. Has been tried for more than 15 years and proved. Druggists have both for sale.

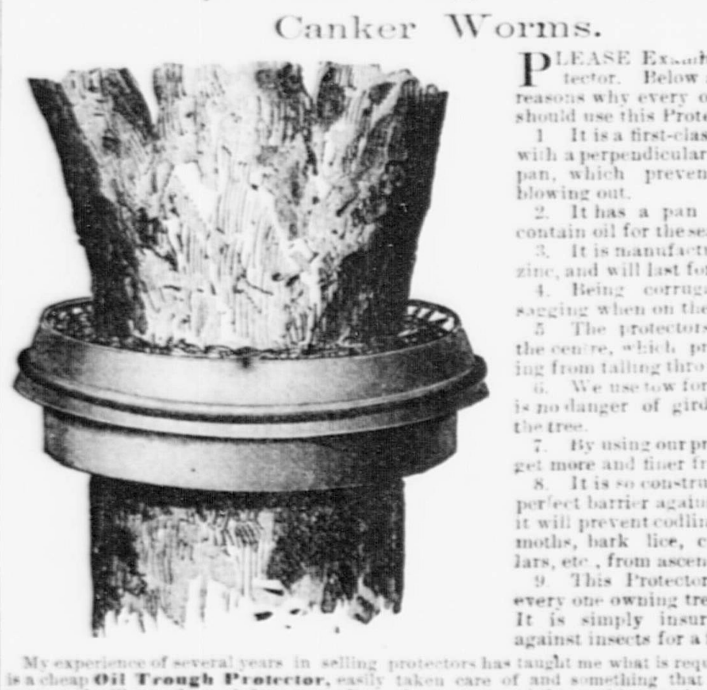
THOMAS' OIL TROUGH TREE PROTECTORS.

(Patented August 9, 1881.)

This Improved Protector effectually protects the trees against the

Canker Worms.



PLEASE Examine our new Protector. Below are some of the reasons why every one owning trees should use this Protector.

1. It is a first-class tree Protector, with a perpendicular front to the oil-pan, which prevents the oil from blowing out.
2. It has a pan large enough to contain oil for the season.
3. It is manufactured from heavy zinc, and will last for years.
4. Being corrugated prevents it sagging when on the trees.
5. The protectors are smaller in the centre, which prevents the packing from falling through.
6. We use tow for packing, so there is no danger of girdling or injuring the tree.
7. By using our protectors, you will get more and finer fruit.
8. It is so constructed as to be a perfect barrier against canker worms; it will prevent codling moths, tussock moths, bark lice, curculio, caterpillars, etc., from ascending the trees.
9. This Protector is so cheap that every one owning trees can apply it. It is simply insuring your trees against insects for a few cents a year.

My experience of several years in selling protectors has taught me what is required by the public is a cheap Oil Trough Protector, easily taken care of and something that cannot injure the trees, and will stop the grub from ascending. I am convinced that nothing can be fastened solid to a tree without doing more or less injury. We have applied our Protectors to hundreds of trees, where other protections have failed. Parties ordering, will please give their orders early to insure their being filled on time. Now is the time to put them on and prevent the codling moths, curculio, bark lice and tussock moth from ascending the trees.

The Price of our Protectors is

10 cts. per Inch in diameter, which includes applying to the tree and filling with oil.

Neatest, cheapest and most durable Protector in the market.

We are prepared to execute with promptness all orders. Address all orders to

PERRY DAVIS' VEGETABLE PAIN KILLER

A Never-Failing Cure for Burns, Scalds, Bruises, Cuts, Sores, etc.

After forty years of trial, PERRY DAVIS' PAIN KILLER stands unrivaled. It is safe! It acts immediately! It never fails!

Editor of the St. John (N. B.) News, says: In flesh wounds, aches, pains, sores, etc., it is the most effectual remedy we know of. No family should be without a bottle of it for a single hour.

From the Cincinnati Dispatch: We have seen its magic effects, and know it to be a good article.

From I. S. Potter, U. S. Consul at Crefeld, Rhenish Prussia: After long years of use, I am satisfied it is positively efficient as a healing remedy for wounds, bruises, and sprains.

W. W. Sharper, Valdosta, Ga., says: It is a panacea for all bruises and burns.

From R. W. Adams, Saco, Me.: It gave me immediate relief.

R. Lewis says: In forty years' use it never has failed me.

W. W. Lum, Nicholville, N. Y., says: I use your PAIN KILLER frequently. It relieves pain and soreness, and heals wounds like magic.

J. W. Dee says: For scalds and burns it has no equal.

PERRY DAVIS' PAIN KILLER is not a new untried remedy. For forty years it has been in constant use; and those who have used it the longest are its best friends.

Its success is entirely because of its merit. Every family should have a bottle ready for use. Much pain and heavy doctors' bills may often be saved by prompt application of the PAIN KILLER. Unlike most medicines, it is perfectly safe even in the hands of a child. Try it once thoroughly, and it will prove its value. Your druggist has it at 25c., 50c., and $1.00 per bottle.

For the Patriot.

A Tribute to Our Nation's Dead.

Far away in the South, in a grave unknown, lies my brother; one only of the many thousands who to-day lie sleeping where our lips may not press the turf beneath which they are sleeping, and we, for whom their life-blood was shed, can only bring the tribute of our falling tears and a few scattered flowers. Yet, mingled with our tears there shines a mellow radiance over their sacred sweet memory which time only makes more beautiful by intervening years.

We bring these sweet flowers, we kneel by the graves,
Of our loved fallen heroes, true, noble and brave;
For the nation their life-blood they gave,
Then in the green earth they found them a grave;
Silently sleeping, no longer they hear
The fierce roar of battle they met without fear,
But with unfaltering steps, with nothing like power,
Firmly they went forward, with courage and power,
True to their trust the weary and worn,
While thousands were falling ghastly and torn;
Bravely they bore without murmur the pain,
The deep bleeding wounds the deep dyed stains;
Quietly sleeping we leave them to-day,
Leave them to sleep the long hours away,
But deep in our hearts shall memory entwine,
Fresh laurels of sweetness to place on their shrines.

Fathers whose hair is now silvered with years,
Whose cheeks are now bathed in sorrowful tears,
Fathers whose thoughts wander back in the past,
Till the years seem like moments so quickly have passed,
Again you seem standing by the side of your boy,
Yet no words can express the sudden, deep joy,
The strength and the power you felt, and the pride
As he stood in his manliness close by your side;
Fathers again shall you stand by your boy,
Again shall there come a pure, deep joy,
Again shall, the pressure of hand meet hand,
Again shall you meet an unbroken band;
Silently sleeping we leave them to rest,
And cover them over with fresh beauty drest;
Softly the twilight at daylight's close,
Shall gently fold round their sleeping repose.

Mothers thy love is so deep who can trace,
In its rich, pure tenderness of sweetness and grace;
Mothers whose heart-throbs can never be told,
When she thinks of her darling lying still and cold;
Folded now are the hands you have pressed,
Quiet and still the brow once caressed,
Closed are the eyes pure thoughts made known,
Silent the lips that breathed love to your own;
Mothers thy tears may be falling to-day,
Tho' vainly you are trying to brush them away,
Tho' the weariness falls like the shadows of night,
And dark the mystery which vails your sight,
Yet beyond the dark shadow shines a gleam soft and bright.
The angel is watching, his wings bathed in light,
Weep not he is saying, for calmly he sleeps,
Only a few more heart-throbs and you shall meet.

Brothers there's a voice once answered your own,
Now silent and still the dear lips have grown,
But O! the sweet comfort which comes with the thought,
For liberty and right his life-blood was bought.
And tho' their forms may be sleeping to-day,
'Neath the warm southern sky on plains far away
Where no beat of the drum or note from the fife,
Can again call our heroes into noisy strife,
Yet when the blue sky shall swing open its gate,
And the last judgment our brave boys await,
Then shall they hear from the Master, "Well done,"
And a crown shall be given to each war-martyred son;
Quietly sleeping, no harsh voice can rouse,
The slumbers so deep which rests on their brows,
And deep in our hearts shall memory entwine,
Fresh laurels of beauty to place on their shrines.

Sisters who told by the quick, sudden start,
The cruel sad news had pierced open the heart;
Sisters who waited for their brother's return,
Only to suffer and the hard lesson to learn.
Not even to give one little caress,
Or smooth back the hair from the brow in distress,
Not even to pillow the pure aching head,
Or shield from the sound of the enemy's tread,
Not even to know the spot where he fell;
It may be in mountain, hillside or dell,
Yet softly the twilight at daylight's close,
Shall gently fold round their sleeping repose;
Quietly sleeping we leave them to-day,
Leave them to sleep the long hours away,
And deep in our hearts shall memory entwine,
Fresh laurels of beauty to lay on their shrines.

O! the thousands that are sleeping away,
Sleep where their friends cannot find them to-day.
And our tears, tho' they fall like the rain,
Can never bring back our loved ones again;
Yet softly the grasses shall over them wave,
Tho' we never may kneel by their unknown graves,
And lilies so pure, and violets blue,
We twine in our hearts for the tried and the true,
And gently their names we whisper once more,
It may be they listen on that far-away shore.
And when the starlight is silvering all,
And the flowers are folded by the garden wall,
Safely we feel the Holy One keeps,
A little while longer and we shall meet.

QUINCY NECK, May 27, 1882. M. L. W.

Farm and Garden.

The Late Planting of Corn.

There is quite a difference in the practice of farmers in the time of planting their field corn. In the Eastern States some begin to plant the last of April or early in May. Of course the corn is a long time in coming up, some of it rots and has to be planted over, is more liable to be pulled by crows and other birds, and the ground requires more cultivation to keep down the grass that gets a good start in May. With the varieties of corn that mature in a hundred days or less, there is no need of this early planting, but a possible gain in waiting for summer to grow this tropical crop. One of the best farmers of our acquaintance plants corn on the 6th day of June, or as near that date as possible, and has followed the practice with uniform success for many years. His ground of course is heavily manured, and thoroughly worked before-hand. The corn is up in about a week, and is cultivated soon after. The ground is warm, well drained, and the plant pushes along rapidly to maturity. He claims for his practice that he gets as good corn, and corn fodder, as the early planting would give him, while he saves labor and avoids the danger of the seed rotting in cold wet soil.

Pruning in June.

We have tried pruning in almost all months of the year, and on the whole prefer June. This being about the busiest month of the year, there is usually little time for pruning, and so the favorite time is early in spring, and many of our old orchards, in their rotting limbs and decayed trunks, bear testimony to the mischief wrought by the ill-timed use of the saw and axe. Small limbs, an inch in diameter or less, can be taken off at any time with comparative safety. But the thorough pruning called for in a long-neglected orchard is best done in the early summer. The sap is absorbed by the rapid formation of wood and leaves; the wood laid bare in pruning large limbs soon becomes seared, the healing process around the edges of the wound begins immediately, and in a few years the wound will be completely covered with new wood and bark. There is no chance for decay as when large limbs are removed in the early spring. There is far too little pruning done in the farm orchard. A dead limb should not be suffered upon the fruit tree. Good pruning leaves no stubs, but cuts close to the trunk or branch to which the pruned limb is attached.

Those who suffer from an enfeebled and disordered state of the system, should take Ayer's Sarsaparilla and cleanse the blood. Purge out the lurking distemper that undermines health, and the constitutional vigor will return

Woman's Column.

Mr. Darwin was one of the very first to sign petitions in favor of woman suffrage in England.

Adeline Wildes, M. D., a graduate of Boston University, has opened a free dispensary for women and children, at Meeting House Hill, Dorchester.

A daughter of the late president Johnson manages a farm near Albany, Texas, with such economy and success that a prosperous future is already insured to the president's two grandsons.

Miss Nettie H. McKelvey, Miss M. J. Howes and Miss A. W. Cowles have been chosen essayists by the Oberlin students for the oratorical contest next winter.

Mrs. Cynthia Hicks, who is seventy-eight years old, is the president of the Humboldt (Iowa) Woman Suffrage Society.

Woman Suffrage was a marked feature in the school election in West Denver, Col., last week. Out of seven hundred and sixty-one ballots it is safe to say that more than one-half the number were deposited by ladies.

Mrs. Charles Turner, a widow lady of Liverpool, has given the munificent sum of $200,000 for the erection of a home for incurables in that city, and will make ample arrangements in the shape of endowment for the maintenance of the institution.

Miss Belle Braden has recently been elected for the second time treasurer of the Waynesburg and Washington railroad in Pennsylvania. She is also paymaster, making regular trips over the road in the pay-car. She is probably the only lady in the country who is a railroad officer.

Miss Lizzie Howard has been appointed librarian of the Peabody Institute, in place of her father, A. S. Howard. Miss Howard has been assistant in the library for the past ten years, and is quite familiar with the duties of the position.

The Senate committee on woman suffrage have voted to recommend a joint resolution prepared by Senator Lapham, proposing a sixteenth constitutional amendment which declares that "The right of citizens of the United States to vote shall not be denied or abridged by the United States or by any state on account of sex.

Gov. Hoyt, of Wyoming Territory, where women have all the rights of citizenship. says: "Women don't want to hold office; they do not care for public life. During all my experience in Wyoming Territory, where women are citizens and hold the same civil rights as men, I have not heard of one woman who desired active public life."

Fashion Notes.

Sunflowers and lilies, peacock feathers and poppies, are in demand.

There is a threatening revival of gros grain as a dress fabric this season.

Stripes of white and black and white and color are a feature in new spring goods.

Long lace strings, or brides, are more fashionable on bonnets than ribbon strings.

Mountain fern, gold-tipped chestnut blossoms and scented wood violets are seen on the new spring hats.

Very fine [illegible] crape, combined with moire, in the same or another color, is in Paris used for evening dresses.

Several novel shades in dress silks are to be worn this spring, the prettiest of which are terra cotta, cadet blue and hussar.

Roses, daisies and lilies appear in the trimming of handsome evening dresses, in combination with cream and ecru lace.

The softest and richest of repped silk ribbons are among the samples sent over by French exporters for inspection; but the watered and satin ribbon will remain on the counters until early Summer, at least, and nearly all of the fancy ribbons have watered centres; their borders are of straw or silk lace. The lace ribbons are straight on one edge and follow the Spanish patterns exactly.

Household Receipts.

Many experienced housekeepers, in order to prevent the formation of a crust in the tea-kettle, keep an oyster shell in it. The shell attracts all the stony particles to itself.

Hash made of two parts potato, one part corn beef and one part beets, is an appetising dish for breakfast. The potatoes and beets should be boiled the day before; chop them and the beets fine, season with butter, pepper and salt, and some hot vinegar and mustard may be added if you choose.

To utilize the feathers of ducks, chickens and turkeys, generally thrown aside as refuse, trim the plume from the stump, inclose them in a tight bag, rub the whole as if washing clothes, and you will secure a perfectly uniform and light down, excellent for quilting, coverlets and other purposes.

It is always best to wash flannels, calico dresses and aprons before the white clothes are wet, especially if the day is cloudy and threatening. When it rains the white clothes can be rubbed, scalded and left in the rinsing water, and it is a small matter next day to wring and hang them out to dry.

A table-spoonful of black pepper will prevent gray or buff linens from spotting, if stirred into the first water in which they are washed. It will also prevent the colors running in washing black or colored cambrics or muslins, and the water is not injured by it, but just as soft as before the pepper was put in.

Walnut Leaf Hair Restorer.

It is entirely different from all others. It is as clear as water, and, as its name indicates, is a perfect Vegetable Hair Restorer. It will immediately free the head from all dandruff, restore grey hair to its natural color, and produce a new growth where it has fallen off. It does not in any manner affect the health, which Sulphur, Sugar of Lead, and Nitrate of Silver preparations have done. It will change light or faded hair in a few days to a beautiful glossy brown. Ask your druggist for it. Each bottle is warranted. Chas. N. Crittenton, New York, and Geo. C. Goodwin & Co., Boston, wholesale agts. S 24po

Correspondence of the Chicago Times, Aug. 10, '81.

The World's Epileptic Institute.

While passing through St. Joseph, and having heard a great deal about the World's Epileptic Institute located here, I concluded to pay the celebrated institution a short visit. We were met by Dr. Richmond, the proprietor, who has gained a reputation as broad as the land. He is a rather small, yet prepossessing man, of very affable and gentlemanly manners. He gave us a hearty welcome, and took great pains in showing us through his palatial and mammoth institution. It is a five-story building, 200x180 feet, with basement, and contains over three hundred rooms, and can accommodate five hundred patients, and each and every room is furnished in the most elegant and lavish manner. But we will begin at the office, which is a large room furnished with rosewood furniture throughout. In the office are thousands of photographs of those who have been benefitted by the Nervine. The walls are elegantly papered, and are profusely decorated with rich and costly pictures, relieved here and there by busts in stone and bronze of eminent men of this and other countries. In connection with the institute is a mammoth printing house and bindery, occupying six or seven large rooms, and a score of presses are kept running night and day turning out work for the doctor. The office is one of the finest and most complete in the West, and he has the rooms decorated, carpeted and trimmed up with as much care and luxury as is his own private office. On the first floor of this mammoth building is the doctor's private office, the printing department, bindery, tank room, packing, bottling, and consultation rooms, barber shop, drug store, etc., all of which are fitted up regardless of expense. The second floor has the hotel office, dining, billiard and cooking rooms, many guest chambers and several parlors. The third and fourth floors are all rooms, all of which are furnished with Brussels carpets and the finest furniture. The billiard room has six tables, all of which are free to the guests of the house and their friends. The bath room is large and neat, and is also free to guests. The entire building is surrounded on the east and south by an elegant five acre park, in which are lovely trees, beds of rich and rare plants, gravel walks and drives, delicious arbors, and a most beautiful summer house. There are also a number of fountains that add wonderfully to the beauty of the park, which is truly one of the most lovely and attractive in the western country, and the Institution has no equal for luxury and comfort in the world. Everything is perfect, and the visitor is at once charmed with the entire place and its surroundings. An idea of the immensity of the doctor's business may be given when we say that on the day we visited the Institution he showed us to his express room, and we saw the expressman take goods labeled to the following places, to say nothing of hundreds of orders from all quarters of America: Lyons, France; Geneva, Switzerland; Madrid, Spain; Brussels, Belgium; Cape Town, Africa; Shanghai, China; Yokohama, Japan; Bombay, India; Melbourne, Australia. The doctor employs hundreds of men and women in his Institute in the several branches, aside from the immense force required to conduct the hotel. It is worth a visit, and Dr. Richmond extends to all a cordial invitation to come and see him. He and his wonderful medical discovery have given to St. Joseph a good name all over the habitable globe.

SAMARITAN

NERVINE

SAMARITAN NERVINE

Cures Epileptic Fits, Spasms, Convulsions, St. Vitus Dance, Vertigo, Hysterics, Insanity, Apoplexy, Paralysis, Rheumatism, Neuralgia and all Nervous Diseases. This infallable remedy will positively eradicate every species of Nervous Derangement, and drive them away from whence they came, never to return again. It utterly destroys the germs of disease, by neutralizing the hereditary taint or poison in the system, and thoroughly eradicates the disease, and utterly destroys the cause.

SAMARITAN NERVINE

Cures Female Weakness, General Debility, Leucorrhea or Whites, Painful Menstruation, Ulceration of the Uterus, Internal Heat, Gravel, Inflammation of the Bladder, Irritability of the Bladder. For Wakefulness at Night there is no better remedy. During the change of life no female should be without it. It quiets the Nervous system and gives rest, comfort and nature's sweet sleep.

SAMARITAN NERVINE

Cures Alcoholism, Drunkenness and the habit of Opium Eating. These degrading habits are by far the worst evils that have ever befallen suffering humanity. Thousands die annually from these noxious drugs. The drunkard drinks liquor not because he likes it, but for the pleasure of drinking and treating his friends, little thinking that he is on his road to ruin. Like the Opium Eater, he first uses the drug in small quantities as a harmless antidote. The soothing influence of the drug takes strong hold upon its victim, leading him on to his own destruction. The habits of Opium Eating and Liquor Drinking are precisely what eating is to alimentiveness, as over eating first inflames the stomach, which redoubles its cravings until it paralyzes both the stomach and appetite. So every drink of liquor or dose of opium, instead of satisfying, only adds to its fierce fires, until it consumes the vital force and then itself. Like the gluttonous tape-worm, it cries, "Give, give, give!" but never enough until its own rapacity devours itself. Samaritan Nervine gives instant relief in all such cases. It produces sleep, quiets the nerves, builds up the nervous system, and restores body and mind to a healthy condition.

SAMARITAN NERVINE

Cures Nervous Dyspepsia, Palpitation of the Heart, Asthma, Bronchitis, Scrofula, & Syphilis, diseases of the Kidneys, and all diseases of the urinary organs. Nervous debility, caused by the indiscretions of youth, permanently cured by this invaluable remedy. To you young, middle-aged and old men, who are covering your sufferings as with a mantle, by silence, look up, you can be saved by timely efforts, and make ornaments to society, and jewels in the crown of your Maker, if you will. Do not keep this a secret longer, until it saps your vitals, and destroys both body and soul. If you are thus afflicted, take DR. RICHMOND'S Samaritan Nervine. It will restore your shattered nerves, arrest premature decay, impart tone and energy to the whole system.

HALL'S VEGETABLE SICILIAN HAIR RENEWER is a scientific combination of some of the most powerful restorative agents in the vegetable kingdom. It restores gray hair to its original color. It makes the scalp white and clean. It cures dandruff and humors and falling-out of the hair. It furnishes the nutritive principle by which the hair is nourished and supported. It makes the hair moist, soft and glossy, and is unsurpassed as a hair dressing. It is the most economical preparation ever offered to the public, as its effects remain a long time, making only an occasional application necessary. It is recommended and used by eminent medical men, and officially endorsed by the State Assayer of Massachusetts. The popularity of Hall's Hair Renewer has increased with the test of many years, both in this country and in foreign lands, and it is now known and used in all the civilized countries of the world.

MEMORIAL ADDRESS

DELIVERED BY

CHARLES F. ADAMS, Jr.,

AT THE DEDICATION OF

Crane Memorial Hall,

QUINCY, MAY 30th, 1882.

Nearly two hundred and forty years ago, in the early days of Massachusetts and while Cromwell was still Lord Protector, there came over to New England, among many others, a man named Henry Crane. Little is known of him except that, of English blood, he settled in Dorchester, and was the father of a numerous progeny. Six sons have perpetuated his name in many places throughout that continent which their common ancestor helped to settle. The fifth of these six sons was born on the tenth of August, 1665, and was named Ebenezer.

In November, 1689, this Ebenezer Crane, being then twenty-four years of age, married Mary Tolman, a daughter of Thomas Tolman of Dorchester, and five years younger than himself. The Tolmans were always prominent in the annals of their town, and they yet live upon land which has been in the possession of the family since the settlement of the country. For over fifty years a Tolman was town clerk of Dorchester. Ebenezer Crane, however, was soon separated from his young wife; for, what with French and Indian wars, those were troubled times. Married in November, 1689, in August, 1690, his name is found in the muster-roll of a company of soldiers, seventy-five in all, who were enlisted in Milton and Dorchester, and sent out as part of the unfortunate Quebec expedition of 1690, under command of Sir William Phips. Of the two thousand men composing the land force of that expedition, only about two hundred were lost, but of those two hundred no less than forty-six, it is said, belonged to the Dorchester company. They may have been stricken with the small-pox, or they may have been in some vessel which foundered at sea, but not the half of those who went forth ever returned. Ebenezer Crane was among the more fortunate twenty-nine who found their way back, and presently he moved over to the North Precinct of Braintree, as Quincy was then called. His death, in 1725, is, however, recorded in Milton.

Those were the days of patriarchal families. His father had ten children; Ebenezer Crane had twelve. Tenth among the twelve, and sixth among eight sons, was Thomas Crane, who born in Braintree in 1710, married Deborah Owen, also of Braintree, or Quincy now, in 1732. He was twenty-two and she seventeen, and in the August following their marriage, three months before the first child was born, they were both admitted as members of the church here, the Rev. John Hancock, father of the patriot of a generation later, being then its pastor. Thomas and Deborah Crane had but five children, the third of whom, a son, was born on the 11th of September, 1737, and christened Joseph. Presently, 1757, this Joseph Crane, being then twenty years of age, married Polly Savil, who was three years younger than himself; for early marriages, as well as large families, were then in vogue. The sixth child of this couple was a son, whom they called Thomas. Born in May 1770, the second Thomas Crane, in November, 1796, married Sarah Baxter, a daughter of Daniel and Prudence Baxter of Quincy. They had six children. The third of the six was a son, born on the 18th of October, 1803, whom they named after its father; and it is to the memory of the Thomas Crane, thus born, third of the name and fifth in direct descent from the original Henry Crane, that this structure has been reared.

There is one thing very noticeable in tracing through a century and a half the descent of a genuine New England family like the Cranes. It is curious to see how pure the English blood was kept. The names are all English names,—Henry and Ebenezer and Joseph and Thomas. The mothers—Marys and Pollys and Sarahs, with one Prudence—are Tolmans and Savils and Baxters, standard Dorchester and Braintree names from the beginning, names with which the town records are full. There is no admixture of any foreign element. It is pure, old New England stock.

The Cranes were not rich. Indeed, before the year 1825 few New England people were rich, and the Cranes do not seem to have been at best more than well to do. They lived in the southern and western part of the town, and the homestead, which was removed only about ten years ago, passed into the hands of one of the older branches of the family. Though connected soon or late, by marriage, with almost every name familiar to the annals of Quincy, I cannot find that the Cranes were ever town officers, or deacons, or delegates to the General Court, or in any way prominent in local affairs. From generation to generation their lives were the usual lives of common hard-working New England rustics; they were born, they married and had children, and presently they died. And these events, and these only, are recorded concerning them; unless, indeed, as in the case of Ebenezer Crane, at some time their names found a place on the muster-rolls of the French or the Indian or the Revolutionary war.

Such was the life of Thomas Crane, the father; born in 1770, just as the Revolutionary troubles were about to begin, and married in 1796, four years after the old North Precinct was set off from the town of Braintree and called Quincy. A few years after his marriage to Sarah Baxter this Thomas Crane left Quincy, and made his home for a time on George's Island, in Boston Bay, where Fort Warren was afterwards built and now stands. That island then belonged to one Caleb Rice, and contained about thirty-five acres of land, rising on the ocean side to a bluff some fifty feet above high water mark. Not until 1825 did it pass into the hands of the city of Boston, and work on Fort Warren was begun in 1833. During the earliest years of the century, while Thomas Crane lived there, George's was a farm and place to which stock was sent for keeping; and his house was also a house of call for such excursionists as, during the season, in those earlier and simpler days, had occasion for a place of refreshment in the bay. Here, on the 18th of October, 1803, that son was born who, nearly seventy-two years later, on the 1st of April, 1875, died in the city of New York.

Thomas Crane the younger was a typical man. His career, as you will presently see, was not in any respect dramatic. It affords no episodes to which a biographer, much less an orator, could skilfully lead up, and then dwell upon them, sure of the sympathy of his audience. He was simply a self-educated, self-made son of New England, well-intentioned and clear-headed who, a youth, went out from his home into the great world, and there amassed a fortune, preserving, amid all temptations, his New England birthright traits of simplicity, thrift, straight-forward honesty and deep religious feeling. He did not infuse himself into great movements with which, becoming forever a part of them, he identified his career; on the contrary he was a quiet, domestic man, silent, strong and practical. Satisfied with the position he had won, and doing his honest day's work in it, he had no ambition for office or worldly distinction. Thomas Crane, therefore, does not stand forward and arrest attention as an imposing individuality; and it is the very fact that, being just what he was and doing what he did, he does not so stand forth,—it is this fact which makes him a typical, a representative man, a man whom it is well to commemorate. He represents almost ideally what was strongest and, upon the whole, best in that remarkable race of men to which he belonged.

It has been said very often, and with sufficient truth, that the three great staples of New England are ice and rocks and men. New England, since the year 1800, has indeed been for this continent what Asia once was to Europe, the nursery of nations. In its case the biblical injunction to be fruitful and multiply and replenish the earth and subdue it, has been strictly complied with; and there has gone forth from it a column, almost countless in number, of men and women of the pure English blood and the rough New England breeding, who have carried their native thrift and energy, and the social and political and religious teachings of their birthplace, through all the broad belt of country lying west of them, until they found themselves stopped by the waters of the Pacific. From Mason and Dixon's line on the South, to the great lakes on the North, they penetrated every nook and corner between the Falls of Niagara and the Golden Gate. They leavened the whole lump. It is now safe to say that this New England race—this Greater Britain, as English writers have called it—is destined to play no small part in the future history, not of this continent, (in that the predominance of its part is already settled,) but no small part in the history of civilization itself. The future is theirs. Of this migrating column Thomas Crane was one. More than that, he was, and to the last remained, in his own person and character, representative of whatever was best and strongest and most individual in it. In commemorating here the individual, we also commemorate the mass.

Those who composed the great New England migration were the direct result of two centuries of the surroundings of others who had preceded and led up to them. They had been undergoing the educational process,—so to speak, they had been at school for two hundred years before they were born. Men and women of this native growth, they were then transplanted to a richer, a more generous soil. But though they changed their skies, they did not change their minds; and where they went they carried New England with them. To understand the men, therefore, we must understand the surroundings amid which they grew up; and, in the case of those who were born and educated before the year 1825, that—at any rate, here in Quincy—is no longer an easy thing to do. The fact is—and it is none the less a fact because a singular and a startling one—that the Quincy of 1825 is further removed from us, than was the Quincy of 1825 from the Braintree North Precinct of 1660. The changes of the last sixty years have vastly exceeded those of the preceding century and a half. Born in 1803, and leaving his home in 1829, the younger Thomas Crane grew up in another world from that we live in,—a world remote to us, even though many who walk our streets still easily recall it. What, then, was that Quincy of the first quarter of the century?

In 1829 the present order of things, in communities known as civilized, had not yet begun. In England a rough miner and self-educated mechanic was laboriously puzzling out the locomotive engine; here, in Quincy, Gridley Bryant had three years before opened the original Granite Railway; but not for two years yet was the first Massachusetts railroad chartered; not for nine years was the Sirius to cross the Atlantic; not for fifteen years was the first telegraph wire to be strung. The world was in the stage-coach period. The steamboat had indeed been introduced, but it still took two or three days to go from Boston to New York; and when, in 1826, John Quincy Adams hurried on from Washington to Quincy to his father's death-bed, he noted in his diary that, leaving Washington at five o'clock in the morning of the 9th of July, he heard of John Adam's death—which had occurred five days before—when he got to Baltimore, and he reached Boston at nine o'clock on the evening of the 12th. Travelling with all the haste he could, he had accomplished his journey in eighty-eight hours, or at an average speed of about five miles an hour. Ohio was then the West; and the valley of the Mississippi, hardly entered upon by any one, had not yet seen the first indication of the coming inroad from New England.

Quincy in those days was very much what it had been from the beginning,—a sequestered New England country town, inhabited by a race of one blood and language, whose fathers had lived there before them in just the way they were living there then. It was a quiet, sleepy, conservative place. In 1803, when Thomas Crane was born, the entire population of the town did not exceed twelve hundred souls; and when he moved away, twenty-six years later, it was but two thousand. They were all native Americans. There was not a foreign face to be seen or a foreign accent to be heard. The blood was pure English; the names were all English; but the education was not English. That was wholly of New England,—the education of the church, the tavern, the town-meeting, and the common school.

As from the beginning, the town still clustered near the church, which indeed was the nucleus about which it had slowly grown up. The parish was the precinct. Unlike most of its sister towns, Quincy, however, even then boasted two religious societies: the original Puritan congregational parish, the established church of town and state; and the Episcopal church, which had been planted here a whole century before. No other denominational society had yet organized itself, nor was any other organized until 1832; and in 1829, as nearly as can be ascertained, the mass had never yet been celebrated in Quincy.

The meeting-house, that which was in fact the single and common place of worship, stood upon the village green and training-ground, close to where this edifice now is. The old wooden structure, the walls of which had then sheltered, and within which in winter had shivered, three generations of his forefathers, was removed in the year before Thomas Crane left the town. Close to its entrance up to the last had stood the horse-block, just as it had stood there from the beginning; and all about it on the Sabbath were hitched the rude carriages and wagons which had brought the congregation from their homes. In that dull, monotonous life, the going to church was the event of the week, and the gossip of the meeting-house and the discourses of the ministers were the staple intellectual nutriment. They supplied the place, so far as the place was supplied, of lectures and concerts and newspapers and current literature now.

Long before Thomas Crane was born, however, the old Puritan theological heat had burnt itself out in Quincy, and the doctrine preached from the pulpit here was then hardly a living one. It did not take hold of the people. They went to meeting because their fathers had gone there, and they had been brought up to it, and because it made a break in the week; but as a living and guiding force the pulpit had in Quincy ceased to make itself felt. It was a failing tradition. Nor did the sister Episcopal church fill the seat thus vacated. On the contrary, always and everywhere an exotic in New England, that church here was then in a state of utter decrepitude. The life hardly lingered in it, and it had none to impart. Those who thirsted could not hope to quench their thirst from that source. The church edifice stood in its little burying-ground,—the old churchyard after the English wont,—but within its walls during the first quarter of the century, hardly more life stirred than stirred within the graves which surrounded it. In silence its pulpit awaited a later revival.

As there was in reality but one church, so also there was but one school in the town. There was no West Quincy, or Atlantic, or Wollaston, or even South Quincy or Quincy Point then,—outlying districts of the town as large as the town itself. Atlantic was known as the Farms, Wollaston was a cow-pasture, West Quincy a wilderness called the Woods, Quincy Point a region designated as the Old Fields, which until 1812 had no road through it, or any connection with the country beyond the Fore-river. Thomas Crane, the father, lived near a creek leading out of that river, and which still bears his name; but during his life his farm never had a public way through it. It lay by itself, as did the farms about it, —outside, as it were, even of the little Quincy world, and secluded from it.

Thus there was then small occasion for great school-houses in all sections of the town, for there was not many children to occupy them. None the less, while the voters annually appropriated from $400, in 1804, to $700, in 1828, to a single grammar school at the centre, they also voted sums, varying from $5 to $120, to each of the outlaying districts to provide for the summer education of its youth. The simple building, which served both as a town hall and as a central school-house, until the last day of the year 1815, was placed on the unfenced training-ground, facing the Plymouth road. Then destroyed by fire, the better building, which in 1817 succeeded it, cost but the modest sum of $2100. That building stood on the southern verge of the little cemetery opposite, or graveyard as it was most properly called, for a yard indeed it was. Our fathers were not a sentimental race. There was no Decoration Day then. That little graveyard held the ashes of six generations of villagers,—the rude forefathers of the hamlet,—but until 1809 it stood unfenced and uncared for by the roadside, a thoroughfare and a common in which cattle grazed among tombstones and lay between graves.

Thomas Crane, however, had to do with the school-house in Quincy, and not with the graveyard upon which the windows of that school-house looked. During the first quarter of the century, though there was but a single school-house in the town, that single school-house after a fashion sufficed for existing needs. Some children had indeed to walk several miles a day,—the Crane children at least four miles; but they were sturdy country boys and girls, and it does not appear that they or others were the worse for it; the probabilities, on the contrary, are that they were a great deal the better. Within the school-house, when they got there, were gathered, during the winter months, all the children of the town, 204 scholars, as the Committee reported in 1820; of whom 79—among them doubtless young Thomas Crane—belonged to the cyphering-school, so called. It was no cause for wonder, therefore, that the Committee further reported that the "room was so crowded that the scholars were obliged to wait one for the other for seats, notwithstanding the master gave up his desk, and used every other means in his power to accommodate them." To remedy this evil the Committee then went on to submit a plan for certain alterations, at an estimated cost of $200, by which 250 scholars were to be brought together in one room and under one master, "with an assistant when necessary." This remember was in Quincy in the year 1820. Two hundred and fifty children in one room, crowded into "seats calculated to accommodate two scholars when writing, and three when they are not writing!" Such, in the better class of towns, was the New England country schooling during the first quarter of the century. Such was the only schooling young Thomas Crane ever had.

In this common room were gathered children of all ages, from the overgrown lad, already a man, to the little girl learning her letters; and during a portion of the school-days of young Crane that room must have been presided over by Master William Seaver, whose name is as deeply cut in the educational annals of Quincy as, according to all tradition, the rod he so freely used, after the fashion of his time, cut into the backs of his refractory pupils. If the use of the rod would indeed have saved the child, not many of the youth of Quincy, between 1812 and 1830, ought in life to have gone astray. None the less it should be added that his old pupils always retained a kindly feeling towards Master Seaver, who taught here for twenty-eight years, and saw the old system go out and the new system come in. Up to 1829, however, the primitive New England system was wholly unreformed. The great logs of wood blazed in open fireplaces at both ends of the unpainted, barrack-like room, while the children were crowded on rude settles which might have been handed down from the pre-Revolutionary period, so hacked and disfigured were they by the jack-knives of succeeding generations of boys.

The entire school appropriations for 1803 was but $430, and in 1829 it had only risen to $1400, of which Master Seaver received $500 as salary. These sums seem to us small sums, and they were small; yet they were all the town could afford. The people then were poor and few. In the election of 1803 there were but 87 votes cast, and in 1828 only 123; the latter was a Presidential election, also, and a citizen of Quincy was one of the candidates. The election of 1828, it is true, was not warmly contested in Massachusetts, the vote of Quincy, being nearly unanimous; but the largest vote ever cast in the town before 1830 was but 217. Poor as they were few, these people were economical because they had to be economical. A saving thrift was ground into them by their necessities. In public as in private every cent of outgo had to be watched. In the houses wheaten bread was a luxury rarely seen. Cornmeal was the staple of life; molasses was the condiment; the barrel of salted meat was the stand-by. But the public expenditures will perhaps afford the best scale of comparison. In 1810, when Thomas Crane, the father, moved up to Quincy Point from George's Island, the entire appropriation made by Quincy for public purposes—and those purposes included the parish as well as the town—was but $3200, or $2.50 on the average to an inhabitant. In 1829, when Thomas Crane, the son, went to New York, and when the parish had been separated from the town, the appropriation was $3500, or $1.75 to an inhabitant,—only the seventh part of what it now is. The instruction then afforded in the public schools was, perhaps, not of the best, when judged by present standards; but in 1827 it cost the town exactly $3.00 a year for each child taught, instead of over $16 in 1880. In 1814 a report was made on maintenance of the poor; and the average cost of it in three neighboring town was stated at 83 cents per week for each person. Such were the simplicity and economy of that period as compared with this. The poor were no poorer than now; that they could not be. Comparatively, however, they were far more numerous, and actually no one was rich.

But the community was not poor only; it was wholly without what would now be called appliances. Those composing it had houses and rude tools and unproductive land; that was about all. As a community it was, as we would consider, cut completely off from active communication with the world outside, and thrown back upon itself; while within itself little was to be found in the way of intellectual nutriment beyond dry husks. There was no Public Library, no Adams Academy, no High School in the town;—as we have seen, not even a public graded school. President John Adams, keenly recalling the hard, up-hill struggle of his own youth, had indeed, in 1822, given to Quincy that library of his own, which now at last, after sixty years of wandering and neglect, finds a fitting resting place in the alcoves of the Crane Memorial Hall; but the books in that library were neither accessible, nor adapted to the needs of a country boy craving knowledge. In the village there was a private association which owned a few books of the day, and to this young Thomas Crane was a subscriber. Doubtless he mastered the little store of learning thus made accessible, but I cannot find that in the house of Thomas Crane, the father, though he was a man, for those times, well to do, there was a single book for his children to read or learn from, except the Bible and Pilgrim's Progress. Neither did the modern newspaper then exist. Take up any one of half a dozen Boston papers now daily spread broadcast over the town, and it is an education in itself; the world of to-day, intellectual, political, social, geographical, is condensed and photographed in its columns. Everything is there popularized and brought within easy reach of the poorest. Then go back and examine, in the files of the Thomas Crane Library, a newspaper of the year when young Crane left Quincy. It is not the same thing, it is scarcely even a suggestion of it. For sale nowhere; sent only to subscribers, it is the newspaper of the politician, the merchant and the professional man,—and very poor and meagre at that. There is nothing popular or instructive about it. It was not meant for the million, and it never reached them. The people's newspaper was, in 1829, yet to be invented. So also of correspondence. Beyond the narrow circle of the educated gentry it was an unknown art. A post-office had indeed existed in Quincy since 1795; and during the youth of Thomas Crane it found an abiding-place in the building which stood where the former Hancock House now stands, and there it remained for six-and-thirty years. Even I can remember when post-office and tap-room were one, and the thin mail-bag was flung on the whiskey-reeking bar, over which its contents were presently distributed. Before 1829, however, mails were infrequent, and the rates of postage enormous, and no letter or paper ever reached remote families like the Cranes. They lived, perforce, in and by themselves.

Such was Quincy; such was the ordinary New England country town at the time the New England column began to move. The surroundings were hard. Those who broke their way successfully through them did so by virtue of sheer, native strength. Thomas Crane the younger did this. It was no inconsiderable thing to do; and because he did it, and did it successfully, his Memorial Building stands here in his native town to-day. Here it was that he passed his youth; here it was that he developed into manhood; here he received those impressions which shaped his riper character. That the circumstances were especially favorable, or his surroundings altogether good, no one will maintain who has made a study of them. We are altogether too much disposed, in looking back on the successful careers of the rough-hewn, self-taught men of that generation, to see only Arcadian character of the earlier times. We are apt to assume that at least they began life with simpler, purer, more patriarchal and virtuous surroundings than the present,—that they were not subjected to our temptations, even if they did not enjoy our advantages. This is all false. It was a rugged, stubborn, gnarly race, that of New England which I have endeavored to portray,—accustomed to self-care and self-rule, laborious, thrifty, money-saving; but, judged by our standards, they were far from a refined people, and neither abstemious nor self-contained. They were harsh rather than virtuous; more austere than moral. They had their besetting sins.

Chief among these besetting sins was intemperance. I have already named the tavern as being—with the church, the town-meeting and the public school—one of the educational influences of the earlier period. Few who have not studied deeply the history of that period have any conception what a part in it the tavern played. It was the rough club-house and political debating school,—the predecessor of the caucus and the ward room; it was also to many—to altogether too many—the yawning gateway of Hell. Rum was the bane of New England; and it remained the bane of those who went forth from New England. John Adams, writing in his diary in 1796, exclaimed, in view of what he then saw going on among the workman on his farm: "If the ancients drank wine as our people drink rum and cider, it is no wonder we read of so many possessed with devils;" and as late as 1841 the town of Quincy voted to give its alms-house paupers "a temperate use of ardent spirits when they worked on the road or farm." No man, however, had a chance for success in life who did not keep himself free from this curse; and of those who went out from New England to seek their fortunes, it is safe to say that rum ruined, body and soul, the vast majority. In 1825 that temperance movement, which has since wrought such a wonder of reform for New England, had not begun to make itself felt; and, indeed, the first of those societies which, in the strong language of the day, were to prevent Americans from becoming "a community of drunkards," was not organized in Boston until a year later, in 1826. The road young Crane had to tread was, therefore, not a safe one. It was, on the contrary, dangerously beset; and, like all the rest, he had only himself to rely on.

There was but one real safeguard against the danger. It was found in the simple morals and strong religious feeling which prevailed at so many hearthstones. Those who went forth thus shielded were saved; the rest were lost. The harsh general tone of the church and the magistrate counted for little that was good; indeed, it led rather to a greater license in reaction. It was the innate or cultivated moral sense and religious quickening which saved. Fortunately for Thomas Crane, with an apparently inborn self-respect, he also had from an early age a strong religious tendency. Whence he derived it cannot be ascertained, for, as I have already intimated, Quincy was not a town remarkable for its theological fervor. The strong, sulphurous doctrines which gave its moral force to Calvinism certainly were not heard from the Rev. Peter Whitney's pulpit. At home young Crane had no peculiar advantages. The religious yearning was there, however, and as he grew to man's estate he was conscious that it was not satisfied in Quincy. His father had died in 1818, not yet forty-nine. Though a substantial farmer and a man well off, for the times, he left a wife and six children to divide his small estate,—the oldest of the children being not yet of age, while young Thomas was only fifteen. A strong, robust, well-knit lad, the choice of a means of earning his living was before him. He could not well be a lawyer, a minister, or a doctor,—a member of one of the three learned professions as they were called. He had not the education, nor had he the means or time to get it. He must earn his bread at once; and he might make shoes, or work on a farm, or cut stone to do it. He tried his hand at shoe-making for awhile, but the confinement injured his health; and fortunately for him, fortunately for his native town, the lad's natural inclinations then carried him to the more robust, the hardier calling. He became a stone-cutter, and as a journeyman learned his trade.

It was now, during those most dangerous years of life which end youth and precede maturity,—the period of false and callow manhood,—it was during these years that young Crane's religious sense began to stir and befriend him. In his case it was simply the form which intellectual quickening took. The boy had a head of his own, and a brain that worked. Had he lived later he would probably have taken to some one of those schools of philosophy and thought which have, with such regular recurrence, marked the periods of the century. He would have got the intellectual food he craved by following Bentham or Mill or Carlyle or Spenser, or possibly Emerson or Parker. He was, however, either beyond their reach or before their time; and so his brain-hunger turned on the only thing at hand,—the Bible and religion, the old New England stand-bys.

Eastern Massachusetts was at this time in something of a religious ferment. Universalism, the most liberal creed of the day, was striking its roots into the soil. Murray and Ballou were at the height of their fame; their tracts were distributed broadcast; large meetings were being held in all the towns. I do not know that this revival reached in any active form the quiescent village of Quincy, but if the seed which fell here fell mainly by the wayside, some of it at least came in the path of Thomas Crane, and bore fruit an hundred-fold. Father Hosea Ballou, as he was affectionately called, then preached to a congregation which met in School Street, in Boston. However or wherever he first heard him, in listening to Mr. Ballou the young Quincy stone-cutter now found that nutriment he craved. He could get to hear him but in one way. There were no public Sunday conveyances then: a journeyman stone-cutter could not afford to indulge in horse or wagon; the distance from Quincy Point to School Street was ten good miles. Young Crane walked them. A religious feeling strong enough to induce a man hardly more than a boy to tramp twenty miles of a Sunday to listen to his favorite preacher, was worth something. He who did it has the making of something in him. If more of those who, during the first forty years of the century, left Quincy to seek their fortunes, had felt moved to do as much, not so many of them would at a later day have disappeared in failure.

Years passed on. Having mastered his calling as a stone-cutter, the young man began to look abroad from Quincy for a wider field. He had no money, no connections, not much education; his capital was simply a strong, healthy body, a clear head and his skill as a stone-cutter. With these, backed by frugal, temperate, honest habits, he, in 1829, went out into the world. It was a good stock in trade. No connections, no opening before him ready made to his hand, carried him to New York. He went there just as thousands and hundreds of thousands, first and last, have gone there,—a young man seeking his fortune, a workman in search of work. He went there just as Quincy boys have gone there before and since; and just as they are going there and elsewhere now. His elder brother had preceded him and was already in New York; and the way they met is a curious illustration of how different those days were from these, and how few and little used the means of communication were. Though both were in New York neither of the two brothers knew where the other was, and they finally found each other at the door of the Universalist Church, either in Prince or Doane street, to which, doubtless, Thomas Crane had directed his steps on the first Sabbath after his arrival.

There, however, at twenty-six years of age, he was in the place thenceforward to be his home. Instead of looking aimlessly about for short-cuts to fortune, he went to work at once at his trade, and began to earn day wages hammering stone. At that time, and during the next few years, several attempts were made by associations of journeyman stone-cutters to start yards in New York upon a co-operative plan. With one of these on the east side of the city, the new-comer from Quincy presently identified himself. His, however, was too active a mind, and he had too large a brain, to permit him long to remain a journeyman, and as early as 1835 he was a master workman; already he had enrolled himself among the captains of industry.

It was forty-seven years after he went to New York that Thomas Crane died,—nearly half a century; and it was a half a century of such general growth and development as the world had not before seen. In 1828 it was but three years since Governor De Witt Clinton had opened to navigation the Erie Canal. When it was thus for the first time brought in direct communication with the great lakes, New York was a city of less than 200,000 inhabitants. In 1831 the first link of what is now the New York Central Railroad was opened to travel. In 1844 the telegraph went into operation. Of more immediate concern to Thomas Crane, however, was that great fire which broke out in New York on the 16th of December, 1835, and which, burning for three whole days, laid in ruins the busiest parts of the town. All these events, and especially the last, had a direct bearing on his fortunes. The canal, the railroad, the telegraph and the fire combined to make out of the quiet city of 1828 the bustling metropolis of to-day. New York, as we see it, was to be built, and it was Thomas Crane's work in life to help supply the granite with which to build it. His opportunity was there, and he availed himself of it. Not much more can be said of any man. To be equal to the occasion in life when it presents itself makes human success. During nearly thirty years of as active construction as any great city ever saw, there were few buildings of any magnitude erected in New York, in which granite was used, to which Thomas Crane did not contribute, and which did not contribute to him.

At a very early day he began to buy out his associates in the stone-yard. It was the old story. They were impatient and improvident; they chafed at delay and the slow movement of things; they saw, or thought they saw, better chances elsewhere. So they made short-cuts to fortune, and doubtless remained poor all their lives. One by one they sold their interests to the clearer-headed, more patient man, who was strong enough to bide his time. It was simply another case of the survival of the fittest. Solid judgment, shrewd honesty and temperate habits did the work. Among them all Thomas Crane was the fittest to survive, in that he had most of these qualities; and accordingly survive the rest he did. Worldly prosperity soon flowed in upon him. Literally he built his house upon a rock. Granite, not speculation, was the basis of his growing fortune. He made his contracts, ever growing larger and larger; he increased the size of his yards, and bought new ones. More and more stone came to them from the quarries here at Quincy and at Millstone Point. A larger number of workmen handled his tools. In 1837, when the great financial storm burst, he suffered with the rest. He did not, however, succumb. Once that crisis was weathered, he stood firm on his feet; and he was firm on them all the rest of his life. The way grew clear. The prodigious growth of New York was now impending, and he was one of those sagacious enough to forsee it. His stone-yards and his granite contracts became henceforth only the basis of his growing prosperity. He bought lands in the path of the city's development, and it grew up to them and overran them. It overran his stone-yards. Thus his wealth increased with the wealth of New York, and enlarged and took new directions, under the guidance always of that same clean-cut business judgment. He was a bank director, an insurance-company director, a street-railway director, a man of note on 'Change. Long before his death his measure of success in a business walk was full, and beyond that his ambition did not go. As I have already said, he did not care for outward or worldly distinction. Had he cared for it, with his strong judgment and shrewd common sense, he would probably have worked his way to high office in the State; for he was of the class of men who are less often seen than wanted in the Senate Chamber and Cabinet. I never met Mr. Crane, and can therefore speak of him only from the report of others. But I do, from personal contact, know something of those who in recent years have played prominent parts in many public events; and I do not hesitate to say that the qualities which Mr. Crane possessed, and which led to the measure of success he coveted, are those qualities which also win success in the other and more showy walks of life, but which also, in those who essay to tread those walks, are not infrequently conspicuous for their absence. Had fortune or inclination called Thomas Crane to the position, he would have administered a department of the national government with the same good judgment and success with which he managed his stone-yard. The qualities were all there; it was the occasion and the call which were wanting.

The man's ambition did not turn that way. His tastes were domestic; his devotion was to his calling. Not that he lacked public spirit, or was indifferent to the great questions of the day. On the contrary, he carried out with him the teachings of his New England home, and never forgot them. The church to which he belonged, and of which he was long a trustee,—the old Orchard Street Church, as it was familiarly called, under the pastorate of Mr. Crane's intimate personal friend, Dr. Thomas J. Sawyer,—the church, well-known throughout New York and the Universalist denomination, had in it a strong New England leaven. Prominent among its members was Horace Greeley, and with him and his teachings Mr. Crane deeply sympathized. The nature of his political affiliations may be inferred from the name of a son born to him in 1850, and whose premature and sudden death in 1869 fell upon the father with a crushing blow; this son the father christened after Mr. Greeley's great political chieftain, and the man who may be said to have embodied in himself the Whig party,—Henry Clay. But it was during the Antislavery struggle that Mr. Crane found himself most strongly drawn to Greeley and the "Tribune." He felt then deeply, and went all lengths. To be an Antislavery man in New York City before 1861 was not popular. Thomas Crane, however, sold his granite, not his political principles; and a zealous, outspoken Antislavery man he remained from the begining to the bitter end.

Not that he took an active part in city politics. On the contrary, he was one of a minority there, in numbers contemptible. More than that he belonged to a class of men who, to the great misfortune of the city and the country, were long since driven out of New York city politics or made powerless in it. It was in his church and denominations that his public spirit found its freest expression. He was a pillar of the Universalist cause, and the treasurer and financial manager of its Relief Association. Later, when the Universalist denominational school, Tufts College, was founded, he was a subscriber to its funds, and he held the position of one of its trustees from the time it was organized until he died. Indeed, his death, it is said, was hastened by the fatigue of a journey made in declining health to attend to his duties in connection with it. Of its library also he was a benefactor.

Of Mr. Crane's other and private life through those forty-six years after he left Quincy, it remains to speak. It was not uncheckered, though in the main a happy one. Three years after going to New York, in 1832, he married Sarah S. Mann, of Gill, in Connecticut,—the first of his race to marry a woman not Massachusetts born. The following summer he was a childless widower, his young wife having been swept away in her twenty-first year, hardly more than a girl, one of the earliest victims of the cholera when it scourged New York in 1833. A little more than three years later, in November, 1836, he married Clarissa Starkey, of Troy, who was to remain his wife for nine and thirty years, and be the mother of his eight children. It is she who now, in conjunction with two surviving sons, erects this monument to the memory of the husband and the father.

Having his home always in New York, a portion of Mr. Crane's summers for many years was passed in Quincy, and to Quincy he paid frequent visits to the end. It was characteristic of the man that he never outgrew his feeling for the place. He loved to come back to the scenes and the friends of his boyhood. He was fond of the water, and liked when down in the bay to land on George's Island, revisiting his birthplace and the scene of his first recollections, for he was already a boy of seven when his father moved across to the mainland. It all seemed to recall the glad confidence of life's morning. Even after he had purchased that rocky country seat at Stamford, the gradual transformation of which into a garden became one of the great pleasures of his later years, Quincy Point still retained its hold upon him. His tastes, too, were simple. A homeish man, he cared nothing for display, and to the end retained the habits of his youth. His greatest trial was the loss of children; for, a deeply affectionate father, he had four daughters born to him, not one of whom survived the years of infancy. Two sons also he lost, who had grown to man's estate. Thus Thomas Crane passed from youth to manhood, and from manhood to old age,—an active business-man, a public-spirited citizen, a devoted husband, a loving and a sorrowing father. At last, when for nearly two years he had passed the age allotted to man, after a short decline, the long, well-spent, successful life drew to its close. On the first day of April, 1875, he quietly died in his own bed and among his own people.

Here in Quincy his monument stands and will stand, and here it is fit and proper it should stand; here, if he could have been consulted, he would most have wished to have it stand. It stands close by the familiar way over which, with brother and sisters, he walked as a boy to the village school close by,—the way which, a young man, he trod as he went to that church in the city where he heard God's word as he needed it,—the way which, later, when he returned to his birthplace in the full tide of mature and successful life, carried him back to those places he loved so well, in which his youth had been passed. Quincy was to him always a haven of rest and refreshment. It was to Quincy that he liked to go back from the noise and bustle and dust of the great city; it was in Quincy that he would most have wished to be remembered. And he will be remembered here. His name, written as it were in water where he lived and did his work, will now long be in Quincy a household word. And it is right also that it should be so; for, take him for all in all, Thomas Crane stands easily first to-day among the many children Quincy has contributed to the great New England migration.

He was the most shining example of those qualities of intelligence, energy, persistence, honesty, temperance and God-fearing morality which made that New England migration the force it was and the yet greater force it is destined to be. As the most shining example that this town produced, it is, therefore, fit and proper that this monument, reared by pious hands, should stand here, a conspicuous memorial for coming generations. As I said when I began, I repeat now,—it is more, far more, than a monument to an individual. There is a sermon to the young in its every stone. It stands as a reminder of those sterling, homely qualities (qualities which all possess, and yet so few know how to utilize) which made him—whose name the building bears and whose effigy, carved by the hand of genius, looks down from its walls—the man he was. It is no monument of human greatness, of conquests and brilliant deeds. For the mass of those who shall enter its doors it is better, much better than that. Not all men can be great; and the ways of greatness are not the ways of happiness. We can, however, all be temperate; we can be industrious; we can be patient and persevering; we can cleave to that which is true and honest and of good repute. All this Thomas Crane did; and because he did it he achieved success and happiness in life, and his monument stands here to-day the monument of a son of whom his birthplace may well be proud, and whose name her children will long hold in close remembrance.

To each civilization there belongs its special modes of commemorating the dead. As you pass out of the gate of San Sebastiano at Rome, and follow the famous Appian Way, at a distance of two miles or so from the city walls you pass the famous tomb of Cecilia Metella, built of great blocks of hewn stone, securely set on a vast and solid foundation. The dearly beloved wife of a great Roman patrician, her husband erected that sombre, dreary mausoleum to protect forever her ashes, while it perpetuated the memory of her name and of her virtues. There it has stood for nearly twenty centuries; and there to-day it stands, an empty memorial of a buried past, useful in its massive ugliness, not even to the dead.

> "This much alone we know,—Metella died,
> The wealthiest Roman's wife; behold his love or pride."

Now let us turn to what Tennyson has called "the gray metropolis of the North," the ancient city of Edinburgh. There, close to where was Kirk-a-Fields, may be seen a quaint quadrangular building standing by itself, and known as George Heriot's Hospital. It is a school made familiar to all through the pages of Walter Scott, founded by the goldsmith of James I. of England, who in 1603 followed his master from Edinburgh to London, and there amassed great wealth. Dying twenty years later, his thoughts reverted to his native city; and after making full provision for such relatives as he had, he left the residue of his fortune to found a school in which the children of Edinburgh freemen should be brought up and taught. For two centuries and a half George Heriot's Hospital has made its founder's name a household word in the city of his birth.

Here in New England, fortunately for us, our monuments to the noted dead—the memorials erected to perpetuate their memories—partake rather of the cheerful, useful character of George Heriot's Hospital, than of the sterile majesty of Cecilia's tomb. Through our schools, our libraries, our churches and our college halls the dead are commemorated. In this very region, once known as Braintree, of which Quincy was a part until eleven years before Thomas Crane was born,—in this very region, now divided into four separate towns, there are to-day four public libraries, three seminary endowments and a church which perpetuate the memories of their founders, or of those in whose name they were founded.—"Being dead he yet speaketh." Those words should be cut deep over the portal of each of these buildings. The mortal remains of the founders—those of Thomas Crane, as of John Adams and Sylvanus Thayer — moulder in the dust. No monument, for aught we know or they would care, protect them, and long since they have dissolved into their elements. Their work goes on.

Neither can I now see any reason why this building, in itself an education in art, should not stand here as long as George Heriot's Hospital has stood, or shall stand, in Edinburgh. The lapse of two centuries will but soften and lend charm to its symmetry; and I can well imagine, that when the twenty-first century is growing old, and Quincy, a city in itself, shall be part of the greater city covering all the shore of the bay,—I can well imagine that then, amid a wealth and population and knowledge and art such as we cannot imagine, strangers will pause in the crowded street to look with delight at the quiet, vine-covered Memorial Hall, standing by itself against a back-ground of trees. They will ask its history and its meaning; and just as the name of George Heriot, the Edinburgh goldsmith, comes to us with a remote, far-away echo,—laden as it were with memories centuries old,—so I fancy may then the name of Thomas Crane, the Quincy stone-cutter, come to them. It may speak of a by-gone civilization, of a past that seems to them unreal and quaint and primitive; but in Quincy, as in Edinburgh the name of the benefactor will be familiar in the mouths of the children.

The Quincy Patriot.

SATURDAY, JUNE 3, 1882.

The Crane Memorial Hall.

This munificent gift to Quincy was formally dedicated on Tuesday last. The day was one of the finest to be found at any season of the year, and our citizens turned out largely to enjoy the occasion. It being Decoration Day, early in the morning the members of Paul Revere Post were busy decorating the graves of all soldiers and sailors in Quincy. Soon after were noticed Masons, firemen, and others wending their way to their various headquarters to prepare to join the procession, which was to form at 9 o'clock, on Hancock street.

Long before that hour the streets showed an unusually lively appearance, and when the procession started, the streets were full of carriages and pedestrians. About ten o'clock the line marched up Hancock street in the following order:

Police.
City Band of Boston, 27 pieces.
Chief Marshal, Col. A. B. Packard.
Aids.
South Shore Commandery, K. T.
E. C., W. S. Wallace, 92 men.
Rural Lodge of F. and A. Masons.
W. M., Fred. Jones, 129 men.
Most Worshipful Grand Lodge, of Mass.
M. W. G. M., Samuel C. Lawrence.
Co. D, Independent Fusileers of Boston.
Capt. Snow, 63 men.
Paul Revere Post 88, G. A. R.,
I. M. Holt, Commander, 60 men.
Town Officers,
Orator, Clergy and Invited Guests.
Union Band of Quincy,
Fire Department,
John W. Hall, Chief Engineer, 155 men.
Clan McGregor,
George Farquharson, Chieftain, 46 men.

The procession moved through Hancock, Elm and Washington streets to the Crane Hall, where an immense assembly had gathered to express their thanks to Mrs. Crane and her two sons, —Albert and Benjamin F.,—the givers of the beautiful hall to be dedicated.

The Crane party, from New York, consisting of Mrs. Crane, her two sons, and five others, two gentlemen and three ladies, arrived by the 8.37 train, and were met at the station by a committee. The town was looking its best after the late heavy rains, and the grounds about the Memorial Hall had been graded and planted just in time for the occasion. There had not been an hour to spare. Within the building work had been going on up to the last moment. When the Crane party entered, however, everything was in place, the floral decorations were in admirable taste, and the elaborate and beautiful interior was a picture worthy of long remembrance.

The reception began at 9 o'clock and was the feature of the day. Nothing could have been better, or gone off more succesfully. No formal effort had been made to get people there and there was no attempt at parade, but the day was delightful; every one came, every one was kindly disposed, and nothing but pleasant things were said. The interior of the building all through the reception was well filled, but never crowded; there was no pushing and not an instance of rudeness. In the centre of the inner hall was a large portrait of Mr. Crane, adorned with smilax and flowers. In the rear of the hall was the Crane party, near whom was Mrs. B. B. Newcomb, Mr. Crane's sister. Mr. C. A. Foster introduced the ladies and gentlemen as they passed by. Both Mrs. Crane and her sons were especially gratified at the large number of Mr. Crane's old friends and cotemporaries who where present, each of whom had some pleasant thing to say as he or she passed by, and they repeatedly took occasion later to speak of this with much feeling. Altogether the affair was by much the pleasantest, because the least formal and the most natural and spontaneous, thing of the sort of which we have any recollection in Quincy. It is not easy to see how it could have been improved; and the most gratifying thing about it was that this also was the impression it left on the members of the Crane family.

The procession was brought as completely as possible close to the arch doorway in front of the building where they had the pleasure of listening to the imposing formula of the Masonic dedication, which was performed by General Lawrence and his suite; the devotional services being conducted by Prof. Leonard; the singing by the Weber Quartette. The Masonic ceremonies were most interesting, especially to Mrs. Crane, who stood throughout them and could not be induced by reason of fatigue to withdraw or sit

The column was again formed and marched to the junction of Adams and Hancock streets, and then to the Unitarian church, the largest public building in seating capacity in town. But this was found too small to well accomodate all who desired to listen to the dedicatory exercises. The exercises were opened by singing by the Weber Quartette followed in prayer by Rev. E. Norton. After another beautiful piece had been sung by the quartette, Mr. Albert Crane, Esq., presented to Chas. F. Adams, Jr., Esq., the key to the Thomas Crane Hall, and made the following brief and appropriate speech:

Mr. Chairman and Trustees of the Thomas Crane Public Library, Ladies and Gentlemen:

In behalf of the family of the late Thomas Crane, I have the honor to say that the library is finished, and that we have come here to-day to dedicate and formally transfer it to the Town of Quincy, as a memorial of my father. We have been especially gratified by the prompt acceptance of our proposition to build, by the generous unification of all your collections of books with the structure which will now preserve them, and the co-operation of the committee throughout. And now that the structure is ready for occupancy and use, I hereby formally deliver to you, as Trustees of the Thomas Crane Public Library, and as authorized to accept it, by this key as a symbol of control and ownership, to have and keep forever for the purposes specified in the act of incorporation, the full possession of this building, tenderly consecrated to the memory of Thomas Crane by the affections of his family, and doubly consecrated in their hearts by the generous sympathy of the citizens of his native town.

On accepting the key, Mr. Adams most fittingly thanked the family for the magnificent donation to the town, as follows:

On behalf of the Board of Trustees of the Thomas Crane Library of Quincy, it devolves upon me to accept from you, Sir, as representing the family of your late father, the transfer of the Crane Memorial Hall. In doing so I am sure I voice the common sentiment of all the inhabitants of Quincy when I say that this noble benefaction comes to us under circumstances making it peculiarly grateful. Quincy has heretofore not been unaccustomed to receive benefactions at the hands of her children. They have, however, come to her from those who have remained her children to the end,—a part of the common family, as it were. In the present case this is not so. Your father left this town, his native place, more then half a century ago, and never again became a resident in it. His children were born in another state, and no ties ever bound them to Quincy. When, however, you looked about for a place where you should erect a memorial to him you chose this his native town.

The Crane Memorial Hall, therefore, must always have a double significance,—a significance to us as well as to you. As a monument of conjugal and filial devotion it will not fail in its purpose. To us of Quincy, however, it is more than that. It is a standing reminder of that affection,—that strong bond of feeling which those who have gone forth from New England, from Massachusetts and from Quincy still retain for their native place. It comes to us as a gift unexpected and from afar. It will be prized and preserved accordingly.

On behalf of the Trustees of the Library, on behalf of the people of Quincy, who, one and all, will profit by the gift, I accept the transfer.

Then followed the memorial address by the same gentleman, which was a masterly production; full of historical facts and reminiscences,—carrying his hearers back to the boyhood days of Thomas Crane, and vividly picturing the trials, the temptations, and the difficulties that our early ancestors labored under. There were no railroads, no steamboats, no telegraphic comunication, and few newspapers. Time did not permit the orator to give much more than one-half of the interesting facts he had gathered for the occasion; but, fortunately, we are able to present it in full to our readers to-day. It will be found on the first page, and is worthy of being carefully read and re-read. Our young men will find in it much that is interesting and valuable to them.

After another selection had been finely rendered by the Weber Quartette, benediction was pronounced by Rev. D. M. Wilson, and the assembly scattered. The Fire Department went to the old library building, where Mr. Loring A. French looked after their wants in good shape. The Grand Army boys dined at their hall. The Masonic lodges marched to Faxon Hall, where an excellent dinner was awaiting them; Tufts of Boston, being the caterer. The tables, four in number, extended the entire length of the larger hall, and were bountifully spread with all that goes to make up a first-class dinner. Fully two hundred and fifty Masons took dinner there.

The exercises in the afternoon were of the usual character on Decoration Day. The Grand Army of the Republic formed a line in front of their headquarters in the following order: Union Band, Boston Fusileers, Paul Revere Post, No. 88, Orator of the Day, Town officers invited guests, and citizens generally; and marched through Hancock, Temple, Coddington, and Sea streets to Mount Wollaston Cemetery, where the soldiers' monument was beautifully decorated with flowers and wreaths; and the usual exercises were performed. The line was then reformed, and marched to the Town Hall, where the assembly was called to order by Commander I. M. Holt. The Union Band then performed one of their fine pieces, which was followed by prayer by Rev. Samuel Kelley. The Commander then introduced the Orator of the Day, Rev. H. Evan Cotton, who delivered an excellent oration, which we have the promise of for publication next week. The exercises closed with benediction by Rev. Edward Norton. The attendance at the hall was larger than usual, owing no doubt to the excellent weather; and the close attention given to the exercises was certainly pleasing to all who took part.

NOTES OF THE DAY.

The day was one of the most quiet and orderly ever known in Quincy on so public an occasion. It was free from drunkenness and rowdy acts. Of the vast crowds upon the streets, with but one or two exceptions, none were seen who appeared to have made fools of themselves by too free use of intoxicating liquors. Certainly those citizens, who have taken a prominent part in bringing about this new era, have cause to feel proud of the result.

The different organizations appeared in good style and attracted much attention.

The Boston Fusileers, by their soldierly bearing, were much admired.

The South Shore Commandery was a fine body of men, and by their becoming regalias were much noticed.

The Rural Lodge turned out largely, and being composed of many prominent citizens, was considered the best organization in town. The Most Worshipful Grand Lodge came in for its due share of attention.

The fire department in their red shirts made a strong appearance, and by their general good behavior received high encomiums.

The G. A. R. boys always find a welcome hand, and on this occasion they turned out in good numbers and were received with pleasure.

The Clan McGregor, although not so numerous as the others, was preceded by a musician with the Scottish bagpipe, and led by a chieftian in the highland costume, attracting the attention of the crowds.

The Granite Engine Company was the only fire company that was escorted by a band; the East Stoughton Band having been engaged.

The ex-W. M. French Hose Company's headquarters were beautifully decorated with flags. A few other buildings were also adorned with the stars and stripes.

☞ We learn that the Masters Loud are to play at Faxon Hall on Wednesday evening. Persons having dolls, which they would loan for the Reception, would greatly favor by leaving them at Mr. John A. Pratt's, Chestnut street. Anything antique, or unique would be particularly desirable.

☞ The committee has voted to purchase a third size Amoskeag steam fire engine, of the latest design and with all modern improvements. The materials will be of the first class, excelling in quality and finish any ever delivered from this well known manufactory. The engine will weigh about three tons when ready for duty.

STREET LIGHTS. A lengthy but very valuable report from our Road Commissioners upon street lights, will be found on the next page. It certainly deserves a careful reading. The expenses of lighting our streets are enormous, and are growing fast.

For the Patriot.

Quincy Point Items.

The yacht "Winsom," recently purchased by Mr. C. F. Adams, Jr., arrived at the Point last week, in charge of Capt. Studley, who speaks in great praise of the craft. One run of one hundred and five miles was made in fourteen hours. The yacht is quite a large one, being some fifty feet long by sixteen feet beam and drawing five and a half feet of water without the centre board. The interior is handsomely furnished with velvet cushions, curtains of fine material, mirrors and lochers; has a stateroom, water closet, glass racks, etc. The cabin is finished in rosewood and mahogany, and has an open grate stove for cool weather. The only objection to the boat is the rather small "forecastle," otherwise it appeared comfortable and convenient.

The Ladies' Aid Society held a sociable Thursday evening at the residence of Mrs. L. A. Gordon. The attendance was quite large and the usual good time was had.

We hear that one of the drivers of the main line of coaches, not being able to urge his horses fast enough with a whip, used a "good stick" with a long brad in it; the S. F. T. P. O. C. T. A.* will not allow that kind of torture, and we should not think the owner of the horses would either.

Some of the members of the Baptist Society held a social gathering Thursday evening at the residence of Mr. Charles Whiton.

The Point people speak in high terms of the oration by Mr. C. F. Adams, Jr.

The celebrations of the "Glorious Fourth," which have been held at the Point for several years, have been noted for their excellence and for the great amount of pleasure they have afforded to a large number of people. To say that they should be continued would be but to express the sentiment of a large portion of the community, and we hope the committee of last year will take an active interest in the matter this year, and carry it forward to that successful conclusion reached on each previous occasion.

The gentlemen who composed the "4th of July Committee of 1881," are requested to meet at the residence of Mr. H. M. Federhen, Monday next, at 7.30 o'clock, P. M.

The Road Commissioners have concluded to pay a portion of the expenses of watering Washington street; now let the people to be benefited contribute their share, and we may again enjoy a summer free from dust and its many inconveniences.

The Quincy Point Temperance Association held its regular meeting Wednesday evening. The exercises consisted of a reading by Miss Susie Coolidge, a song by Miss Mertie Phillips, and a very interesting illustrated talk on "Optics" by Mr. W. T. Barry. Next Wednesday evening a portion of the time will be occupied by Mr. H. M. Federhen, in describing the mining and cutting of diamonds.

The married men of the Point defeated the single ones at a game of base ball Decoration Day.

Friday evening of last week the "United Six" gave another one of their very pleasant parties at the Neck School-house.

The concert given in the Baptist Chapel Sunday evening was very interesting. Rev. G. B. Lawton gave a graphic description of the two paths in life, drawings upon a blackboard illustrating the course and ending of each. The church was well filled by an attentive audience.

Score victory No. 2 for the "Amy." Dorchester regatta, May 30th. Prize, $15.

A large number of the friends of Mr. Henry Kittredge visited him at his residence on Washington street, Monday evening, to spend a few hours renewing old associations, previous to his return to the West. The time was thoroughly enjoyed by all, and was replete with many pleasant incidents, among which was the present to Mr. K. of a handsome gold and onyx seal ring, the gift of several of his chums of former days.

Rev. C. D. R. Meacham will preach in the Baptist Chapel to-morrow. At the close of the service last Sunday afternoon, a gentleman present offered to pay for an addition of a few hundred copies of the sermon to which he had just listened, if Mr. Meacham would loan his manuscript, but it proved to have been an unwritten sermon. H.

MEMORIAL SERVICES. On Sunday evening Union Memorial Services were held at the Stone Temple, and a large congregation assembled to enjoy the exercises. Paul Revere Post met at their hall and marched in a body to the church, and occupied seats in the main aisle. Rev. D. M. Wilson, pastor of the church, conducted the exercises, which consisted of singing, prayers and addresses appropriate to the occasion. The singing was very fine, being composed of the union of choirs. J. B. Stetson, as ususal, displayed his masterly ability on the keys of the rich-toned organ. Rev. Father Kelley offered a fervent prayer, and at its conclusion was followed by Charles H. Porter, Esq., in a pleasing, and at times touching, discourse on the reminiscences of those trying events of the rebellion. The thoughts of many of the G. A. R. boys travelled back to the old scenes on the battle fields, where fell many of their comrades, over whose graves they were soon to place a tribute of love and respect. Brief, but able and interesting addresses were also made by Rev. Edward Norton of the Congregational Church, Rev. C. M. Westlake of the M. E. Church, West Quincy, Rev. S. Kelley of the National Sailors Home, and Rev. D. M. Wilson, in which glowing tributes were paid to those who fought for the flag. These addresses were all highly appreciated, and the whole congregation joined in singing. The services throughout were pleasing and satisfactory.

Atlantic.

During the past week the Road Commissioners have had a force of men at work upon Atlantic street, improving the roadway.

It is said that sidewalks are to be built upon our principal streets.

The wire for the telegraphic fire alarm is in position and about ready for business. The route selected is an excellent one and gives general satisfaction.

Gentlemen interested in the organization of the yacht club, now propose to erect upon the beach, at the foot of Atlantic street, a building to be used in part as a club house; dressing apartments for bathers will be connected, and also a floating pier for use of the "yachters." The residents here are contributing very generously to the fund necessary to construct the above, and it is hoped that "something nice" will be the result.

The Chemical Engine Company of this village made a very creditable appearance in the parade on Decoration Day, and ended the day's enjoyment by a supper at their house.

Capt. Coombs is at work upon a new house situated upon Billings street.

Not a vacant dwelling house can be found in Atlantic.

The road to Squantum should be provided with a police patrol, as it is certainly not safe under the present circumstances. O. K.

Hough's Neck.

Pleasant and lively at the beach "Decoration Day." Great Hill house entertained detachments from the Brockton Bicycle Club, and other visitors.

Mr. Mears' twin cottages are already let, together with Ocean View for the season.

Linden House is open for the season and already one of the best rooms is occupied for the summer.

It was gay at the Linden Decoration, Quincy Bicycle Club, together with detachments from Dorchester Club spent the most of the day at the house and presented a neat appearance in their new grey uniforms.

Alderman Reynolds and family with Mr. V. Snell from Brockton spent Decoration at the Linden.

Messrs. Marsh and Henry are enjoying themselves at Whicher's cottage.

Mr. J. J. Wyeth's family have moved to their cottage by the sea.

Mr. Cobb's house is fast being completed. T.

East Milton Items.

Last Saturday morning Mr. David Gordon, one of the oldest inhabitants of the town, passed away suddenly, after a brief illness. He leaves a wife, daughter and son to mourn his loss.

Arthur Gardner, a well-known and popular young man of this place, accompanied by his nephew Arthur Merritt, left his home and friends in Milton last week to take up his abode for the present in Oakland, California. May his health so improve that he may soon return to us again.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred. Hamblin entertained the Sewing Circle last Wednesday evening, at their residence.

THISTLEDOWN.

AFFLICTION. Mr. and Mrs. Edwin B. Pratt have been severely afflicted by the loss of their eldest daughter, a young lady of eighteen years who died on Sunday last. Her death was very sudden, she having been sick but a few days; the Wednesday before her death she attended school. The friends of the family sympathize with them in this great affliction. The funeral took place on Wednesday, and her remains were conveyed to the family burial place in Randolph.

SINGULAR AFFAIR. A valuable horse belonging to William O'Connor, on Elm street, Quincy, was found in his stall, on Tuesday morning, with one of his hind legs badly broken. How the accident happened it is not easy to determine, but it had the appearance of a serious kick from another horse or by a blow with some blunt instrument in the hand of some malicious fiend. Dr. Cutting was immediately called, who soon put the poor animal out of suffering by bleeding.

On Thursday afternoon James McDowell of East Braintree, unmarried and about 35 years of age, when attempting to get aboard of the inward South Shore train, which was just leaving the Weymouth depot, lost his balance and falling, the rear car passed over his right leg and completely severed it from the body below the knee. Dr. Forsythe and Dr. Tinkham was called and the knee pan being all crushed, it was decided to amputate the remaining portion above the knee.

PERFECTING THE TELEPHONE. By using what is known as a metalic circuit—two wires instead of one—conversations have been carried on with ease over 480 miles of country. Experts affirm there is no reason why conversation cannot be carried on between New York and San Francisco, and have no hesitation in saying that within a year conversation between Boston and Chicago will be a matter of hourly occurrence.

A BOOK OF GEMS. We have been made the recipient of a charming little book of poems, from the pen of Mrs. Dr. Blake, the talented daughter of Mr. P. McGrath of this town. In her youthful days Mrs. Blake was a contributor to these columns, and, being an easy and pleasant writer, her favors were always happily received.

It is said the lock-out in the Pennsylvania iron trade on the 1st of June will be one of the largest ever known. In the Pittsburg district alone 40,000 men will be idle, with a loss of $2,000,000 per month in wages.

House cleaning loses more than half its terrors when you use PYLE'S PEARLINE. Be sure you are not deceived by the vile imitations which flood the market, but see that the name of JAMES PYLE is on each package.

Weymouth Items.

Six candidates expressed their belief in the Lord Jesus Christ, by being baptized by immersion last Sunday evening, at the Baptist Church. The Rev. P. A. Nordell on this occasion selected for his eloquent and able discourse the first verse of the 5th chapter of the epistle of Saint Paul the Apostle to the Ephesians. A large Congregation being present.

A large number of the members of Post No. 58, G. A. R., on Sunday morning, formed in line on Lincoln Square and by invitation marched in column to the Union Church, where memorial services were held, the Rev. L. H. Frary officiating. A large audience was in attendance. The pulpit and organ were appropriately decorated with flags and flowers. The organ was excellently played by Miss Susan M. Blanchard, the singing being under the direction of Mr. John J. Loud. The solos were very ably sustained by Mrs. Jennie Worster and Mrs. Eva Baker; also, Mr. O. W. Allen, who was in splendid voice and has seldom been heard to better advantage. In the afternoon the Post at 3.30 formed in Columbia Square, South Weymouth, and by invitation proceeded to the Rev. W. M. Bolster's Church where appropriate services were held.

Reynolds Post, No. 58, G. A. R., have 325 members. On Decoration Day 280 were in line, visited and decorated 135 of their late comrades' graves; 44 of that number are in the cemetery at the Landing. F. H. T.

District Court, Quincy.

It was ten years on Thursday last since the East Norfolk District Court first commenced its labors. Since that time Judge Bumpus and his associate justices have had many offenders of the law, from the various towns that compose the district, brought before them for punishment. Of the many cases, probably three-quarters, at least, was caused directly or indirectly from the use of intoxicating liquors. What an easy time the officers would have if no intoxicating liquors were sold in this district.

The following persons have been before the Court this week:—

Edward Doyle, of Randolph, for being drunk. Plead guilty and fined $1 and costs.

Henry Jones, of Weymouth, for being drunk. Fined $1 without costs.

John Cronin, of Weymouth, for being drunk. Fined $1 and costs.

Thomas F. Cary, of Randolph, for being drunk. Fined $1 and costs. Being unable to pay he was carried to the House of Correction.

William Shields, of Randolph, for malicious mischief. He was discharged on payment of costs.

UNION REGATTA. At the union regatta of the Dorchester Yacht Club on Decoration Day, the Amy and Dandelion were among the winning boats. The Elf was doing well when the Druid turned turtle, and had she not been obliged to stop and rescue the crew, would probably have brought another prize to Quincy. A large number of yachts started but owing to high winds and a heavy sea running, but few returned to cross the line; they being the best, and their owners not afraid of wind or water. AVAST.

Grand Army of the Republic.

DEPARTMENT OF MASSACHUSETTS,
General Order No. 2.

IN Accordance with an honored custom, and in compliance with the rules and regulations of the order, Tuesday the 30th day of May, was observed as Memorial Day.

The commander desires, first, to congratulate the Post and its friends that unanimity, promptness and interest characterized all the exercises of the day. He desires also to thank all those who by their services assisted to make the day so complete a success, and especially the ladies who so bountifully furnished the tables with rations, and so acceptably presided at the same.

To the clergy of the town, to Rev. H. Evan Cotton for his eloquent and instructive oration; to Rev. Samuel Kelley, the soldier's friend, for his valuable assistance as chaplain of the day. To those who gave flowers for decorating the graves; to those who assisted in bearing the expenses of the occasion. To the Independent Boston Fusileers, Capt. Snow and staff, for their gallant escort during the day; to the comrades of Post 88, for turning out in such large numbers: to the visiting comrades, and those soldiers and sailors, not members of the order, who united with us in the services of the day.

To all these he tenders his thanks and those of the Post.
Per order,
I M. HOLT,
Commander.

The Mortgage Law.

The new bill entitled, "An Act to Relieve Double Taxation," or what is commonly known as the mortgage law, causes some misunderstanding and some disappointment to mortgagors because they find it has not removed all, or nearly all of the taxation from their shoulders and thrown it upon the mortgagee. The new law does nothing of the kind. It leaves the matter with the borrower and lender to decide for themselves. If any one has borrowed money and agreed to pay all taxes, he must continue to do so. The new law does not relieve him of the responsibility. His only remedy is to go to the mortgagee and say manfully: My dear sir, I am paying you a big interest and the town a high rate of taxation on your money. Now that the State has made a law to prevent double taxation, which will remove your liability of paying taxes on your mortgage loan, therefore you can afford to loan at a less rate per cent., and in most cases the lender will agree to; but if the mortgagee is not disposed, the borrower can find others who will be glad to, providing he has good property without encumbrance.

Any gentleman having ten or twenty thousand that he desires to invest, can now loan it on mortgages and not be obliged to pay taxes on the same; or be obliged to send it out of the State, as some of our citizens have in the past, to get clear of paying taxes upon the same. He can loan it to whom he pleases, and without any attempt to cheat or defraud the town where he lives, providing he lets it on mortgages. For this reason the mortgagee can and will loan money at a reduced rate, and we would advise all who are paying exorbitant prices, to reduce the rate per cent., and agree to pay the taxes, which is only what they have been doing in the past. Under the present law no responsible man, with good real estate collateral ought to pay more than five per cent. for his money.

EXCURSION. The excursion committee of the Massachusetts Press Association have planned a very pleasant trip for the party. It is hoped that the members will all endeavor to participate and enjoy not only the lovely scenery and the pleasure of being travelling companions, but renew friendship. There excursions have always been very enjoyable, and we hope to be of the party and trust that we shall meet all of our old friends. The following is the programme:—

The party leave Boston, on the New York and New England Railroad, on Friday, June 23d, at 7 P. M. On reaching Providence the Rhode Island Press Association will join and take part in the excursion. Arrive in New London at 10 o'clock, and embark on the magnificent steamer, "City of Worcester:" arrive in New York at 7 next morning. At 8.35 A. M. take the elegant steamer "Albany" for a sale up the Hudson to Rondout. At 2.15 P. M. they will take the cars on the Ulster & Delaware Railroad, and enjoy the lovely scenery to Phœnicia, thence by Stony Clove Railroad, unsurpassed for romantic surprises, to Tannersville Junction, where stages will convey the party to the mammoth "Hotel Kaaterskill," the largest mountain house in the world; will arrive at the hotel about 6 P. M., and will enjoy supper 3000 feet above the level of the sea. Here they will spend Sunday and Monday. Tuesday morning take steamer at Catskill Landing for a sail down the Hudson to Newburg, where the party will spend the night. Wednesday morning they will leave Newburg by ferry to Fishkill, and take the 9.48 train for Boston, dining at Hartford, arriving in Boston at 7 P. M.

MYSTERIOUS DEATH. A little five-year-old son of C. Ripley, cabinet maker at Milton Lower Mills, went into a stable near his father's residence to play. He had not been there over five minutes when he was heard to scream. A woman living near by, went into the stable when she found the little boy lying on the floor about two feet from the door unconscious, and a two prong pitchfork lying by his side. The injured boy was taken home, and everything possible done, but he died, having remained unconscious from the time he was found. On examining the right side of his head, a small hole was found, which extended into the brain to the depth of three or four inches. Just how the little fellow met his death remains a mystery. It is supposed that the boy tickled a horse in a stall with the pitchfork, and the animal kicked the top of the handle and drove one of the prongs into the boy's head.

SPOILED SPORT. On Tuesday some cock-fighters were enjoying this brutal sport, in an out of the way place between Quincy and the Blue Hills, when several officers, who had got wind of the affair, broke up the cocking main and captured eighteen birds. There were over one hundred persons present, Quincy having a fair representation. The officers were secreted and allowed three fights to take place before they put a stop to the sport. No arrests were made, because the officers had a man in disguise in the crowd who ascertained the names of the principal participants, and it is said that each one of them will, in the course of a few days, be invited to call on Judge Bumpus in the East Norfolk District Court.

☞ A telephone company, which has laid an underground cable along the line of railroad between the towns of Attleboro and Mansfield in this State, dug the trench necessary for the reception of the wires with a plow attached by a beam to a locomotive. The task was quickly and successfully accomplished.

For the Patriot.

Washington Letter.

WASHINGTON, May 30, 1882.

Trouble is anticipated in the House this week. After a stubborn disagreement of eight days, the two parties are no nearer a compromise than when the deadlock first began. There is a well-founded report that the Republican majority will to-day resort to extreme measures to cut the parlimentary knot that has so long failed their purpose. Their programme is the adoption of an amendment to the rules, with a view to prevent dilatory motions, or, in other words, fillibustering, when the consideration of the right of a member to his seat is before the House. The speaker is expected to rule in favor of the consideration of the amendment, and, if the Democrats attempt to fillibuster, he will make a point of order against any dilatory motions, that they cannot be entertained pending the consideration of a proposition to amend the rules of the House. The solution of the whole difficulty it seems, will depend upon the decision of the Speaker.

As soon as the Senate disposes of the Japanese bill, it will take up the bankruptcy bill, the Eads ship railroad bill, and the bonded spirit bill. Each of these bills will be urged for precedence. Only four of the annual appropriation bills, viz: Post office, Indians, fortifications and agriculture, have yet become laws. The diplomatic bill is still in the hands of a conference committee appointed a month ago. There is an immense amount of indispensible legislation relative chiefly to appropriations, and dependent on the intitiative action of the House, which must be accomplished before Congress can adjourn. To-morrow both houses will adjourn for Decoration ceremonies.

The President and most of the Cabinet are absent in New York.

Society has for the present given up indoor entertainments for excursions and picnics. Mount Vernon, Cabin John's bridge, and the Great Falls of the Potomac, are the objective points of many of these excursions. They are all delightful and easily accessible places. ADAMS.

Disgracing their Association.

BOSTON, May 31st, 1882.

To the Editors of the Patriot:

Coming down Sudbury street, in Boston, on Decoration Day, late in the evening, I saw a couple of persons in the uniform of Firemen marked "Vultures, Quincy." From the unsteadiness of their gait I decided they had before called on the "Harpies," and from the character of the place where I saw them go in, just above Portland street, I am afraid their condition was worse when they came out. If men will disgrace themselves and make their families share in their misery, they at least should not wear the uniform of their association at such times, and if they do the offence should cause their expulsion if they have associates who respect themselves. I am happy to state I saw no "Grand Army man" doing discredit to his record of glory.

PRELIMINARY REPORT
— OF THE —
Road Commissioners of Quincy,
UPON STREET LIGHTS.

THE Commissioners find that the estimated cost of lighting and repairing the present number of street lights for the current year will amount to three thousand seven hundred and eighty-nine dollars and sixty-one cents, made up as follows, viz:

To Globe Company for material to repair; light, and make repairs on 84 gasoline lamps,	$753.60
To Quincy Gas Co. gas for 93 lights,	1116.00
To Globe Co. for repairs on gas lights,	111.60
To lighting and superintending,	1112.40
To two lights on Neponset bridge,	26.00
To 65 private kerosene lamps,	670.01
	$3789 61

The town appropriated only $3100 for this purpose. It is obvious, therefore, that the Commissioners will be unable to continue the street lights upon the existing scale without more money. It is, of course, an easy and simple matter for the town, in its customary way, to vote the needful deficit, but before asking it to do so, the commissioners would like to set before the people the facts in the case, and point out to them just where that policy of street lighting is leading them, so as to enable them, after weighing all practicable alternatives, to decide intelligently what course they prefer to adopt. This item of municipal expense began in 1867. At the annual meeting on March 4th in that year, it was voted, "To pay the expense of lighting the public streets with gas or other illuminating fluids for the year ensuing wherever lamp-posts have been established or lanterns attached to buildings; also, to pay the same wherever lamp-posts or lanterns may be hereafter erected, with the approval and consent of the selectmen, provided that the said lamp-posts and lanterns shall be put up at the expense of individuals, and the light extinguished at eleven o'clock P. M." In the next auditors' report may be seen the first fruits of this legislation, in the form of "Street Lights, $668.13."

From this time the growth of this exotic has been strong and even startling. For instance, taking a period of ten years, we can calculate its rate with approximate accuracy:

In 1872 was spent for street-lights,	1809.80
1873 " " " " "	2008.04
1874 " " " " "	2165 37
1875 " " " " "	2426.31
1876 " " " " "	2075.03
1877 " " " " "	2725.33
1878 " " " " "	3078.24
1879 " " " " "	3423 60
1880 " " " " "	2807.49
1881 " " " " "	2363.58
1882 " " " " "	3132 36
	$28,015.15

From these figures it seems that in ten years some twenty-eight thousand dollars of the town's money has disappeared in what must seem to many as an utterly inadequate and comparatively worthless service, for which we have to-day nothing to show.

In 1879 the town seems to have taken alarm and to have attempted to impose some check upon this alarming leak in its exchequer by repealing the act of March 4, 1867, quoted above, and voting in lieu of it that "Whoever erects and maintains lamp-posts or lanterns for street lights, as prescribed in said vote of March 4, 1867, shall have the same lighted at the expense of the town, in such manner and under such regulations as the Selectmen may prescribe, provided, however, that no person shall receive for lighting any lamp more than ten dollars for any one year, nor shall the Selectmen contract or pay for lighting any lamp a greater sum than ten dollars for any full year." The immediate result of this action seems to have been a reduction in the payments for the next two years; but in 1882 we find the tide again creeping up to the high water of 1879, and in 1883 we are threatened with a flood which will submerge the highest mark of the highest year. The town seems to have intended to impose upon individuals the cost of keeping their posts, lamps and lanterns in repair, but that impost has been, as usual, quietly shifted back upon the patient public, and we find it now very difficult to insist upon the exact letter of the law. It has, therefore, become common custom to let the lights go to rack and ruin if the town does not repair them.

All this is natural and inevitable. It is the universal experience in these cases. The town history bristles with similar episodes. A taste for luxury grows by what it feeds on, and the public is far less vigilant than the individual, in curbing the incorrigible nature of such expenses to swell beyond measure. The figures seem to show that the town may reckon on this item doubling about once in ten years, so that in 1893 it may expect to pay for lighting its streets nearly as much as it now pays for the entire repair of its highways. The ninth article of the By Laws expressly orders all town officers, "if in any case the amount specifically appropriated for any purpose prove inadequate, to cause the matter, if urgent, to be brought before a special meeting of the town, but in no event to authorize or incur any expense without the sanction of the inhabitants of the town first had and obtained." And the town at its last annual meeting referred the whole matter to the Commissioners, with orders to report upon it in print. They consider it their duty, therefore, to suggest to the town the various alternatives open to it, and in the order in which they appear themselves to their judgment.

The most effectual and wholesome, if possibly the least pleasing plan would be to discontinue the practice altogether of lighting any lamp not the property of the town or actually pertaining to town property, such as the lights on Neponset bridge, those in front of town-house and perhaps a few others. This would be in the nature of the stringent and painful retrenchments which wise men are wont to make in their luxuries when they find that their expenses threaten to exceed their present income. But if this seems too radical a cure, the trouble may be paliated by reducing the supply of light in any one of these ways:—

1. The commissioners may be authorized in their discretion, to cease lighting or paying for any light which seems to them on the whole calculated rather to subserve a private convenience than the public welfare.

2. The nightly period of illumination can be reduced.

3. The town can do without street lights at all, with very few exceptions, without considerable inconvenience, during certain entire months of the year.

4. Or finally the commissioners may decline to light any lamps not kept in suitable repair by the owner, and light all those now lighted by coal gas with some less expensive material.

In conclusion, as in duty bound, the commissioners submit the whole matter to the town, and will cause an article to be inserted in the warrant for the next town meeting, which will enable the town to deal with the whole subject as may seem to it expedient.

EARS FOR THE MILLION!
FOO CHOO'S BALSAM OF SHARK'S OIL.
Positively Restores the Hearing, and is the Only Absolute Cure for Deafness Known.
This Oil is abstracted from peculiar species of small White Shark, caught in the Yellow Sea, known as Carcharodon Rondeleth. Every Chinese fisherman knows it. Its virtues as a restorative of hearing were discovered by a Buddhist Priest about the year 1410. Its cures were so numerous and many so seemingly miraculous, that the remedy was officially proclaimed over the entire Empire. Its use became so universal that for over 300 years no Deafness has existed among the Chinese people. Sent, charges prepaid, to any address at $1.00 per bottle.
Hear What the Deaf Say!
It has performed a miracle in my case.
I have no unearthly noises in my head and hear much better.
I have been greatly benefited.
My deafness helped a great deal—think another bottle will cure me.
"Its virtues are unquestionable and its curative character absolute, as the writer can personally testify, both from experience and observation. Write at once to HAYLOCK & JENNEY, 7 Dey street, New York, enclosing $1, and you will receive by return a remedy that will enable you to hear like anybody else, and whose curative effects will be permanent. You will never regret doing so."—Editor of Mercantile Review.

WHEAT BITTERS

THE BEST AND The Richest BLOOD, BRAIN and NERVE

-F-O-O-D-

CAREFULLY PREPARED, THOROUGHLY TESTED, ACCEPTABLE AND RELIABLE.

The Phosphates of the Wheat are its most valuable food property, and are, when properly prepared, the most acceptable nutriment with which to build up the system.

The Blood, Brain and Nerves are the forces which bear the strain of every day work and life, and in order to save sickness it is wise to

BUILD FOR HEALTH.

Wheat Bitters are prepared, not by fermentation but by solution and are richest in the Phosphates, while the starch and impure matter are eliminated. These make in themselves a basis, to which is added the best and choicest medicinal qualities, necessary to make it a tonic and bitter. It is at once healthful, pleasant to the taste and must not be confounded with the thousand and one cheap alcoholic bitters which are sold as cure-alls. Medicine is doubly effective when used with food, so as to nourish while it corrects.

Sold by druggists, $1.00 per bottle.

PERUVIAN AN IRON TONIC SYRUP

Cures Dyspepsia, Nervous Affections, General Debility, Fever and Ague, Paralysis, Chronic Diarrhœa, Boils, Dropsy, Humors, Female Complaints, Liver Complaint, Remittent Fever, and all diseases originating in a bad State of the Blood, or accompanied by Debility or a low State of the System.

Summer Complaints.

At this season, various diseases of the bowels are prevalent, and many lives are lost through lack of knowledge of a safe and sure remedy. PERRY DAVIS' PAIN KILLER is a sure cure for Diarrhœa, Dysentery, Summer Complaint, Cholera, Cholera Morbus, etc., and is perfectly safe.

Read the following:

[illegible], N. Y., March 22, 1881. Perry Davis' Pain Killer [illegible] for cramps and pain in the stomach. Joseph [illegible].

[illegible], N. Y., Feb. 2, 1881. The very best medicine I know of for dysentery, cholera morbus, and cramps in the stomach. Have used it for years, and it is sure every time. Julius W. Dee.

[illegible], Iowa, March 17, 1881. I have used your Pain Killer in severe cases of cramp, colic and cholera morbus, and it gave almost instant relief. L. E. Caldwell.

Carrollton, Ga., Feb. 28, 1881. For twenty years I have used your Pain Killer in my family. Have used it many times for bowel complaints, and it always cures. Would not feel safe without a bottle in the house. J. B. Ivey.

Saco, Me., Jan. 28, 1881. Have used Perry Davis' Pain Killer for twelve years. It is safe, sure, and reliable. No mother should allow it to be out of the family. H. I. Nayes.

[illegible], N. Y., Feb. 19, 1881. We began using it over thirty years ago, and it always gives immediate relief. Would hardly dare to go to bed without a bottle in the house. W. O. Sperry.

[illegible], S. C., Feb. 22, 1881. Nearly every family in this section keeps a bottle in the house. Dr. E. Morton.

U. S. Consulate, [illegible], Feb. 8, 1881. I have used your Perry Davis' Pain Killer almost from the day it was introduced, and after years of observation I can say I regard its presence in my household as an indispensable necessity. L. S. Potter, U. S. Consul.

Burton-on-Trent, Eng. I had been several days suffering severely from diarrhœa, accompanied with intense pain, when I tried your Pain Killer, and found almost instant relief. H. J. Noone.

21 Montague St., London, Eng. During a residence of twenty-three years in India, I have given it in many cases of diarrhœa, dysentery, and cholera, and never knew it to fail to give relief. R. Claridge.

No family can safely be without this invaluable remedy. Its price brings it within the reach of all. For sale by all druggists at 25c. 50c. and $1.00 a bottle.

SATURDAY, JUNE 3, 1882.

MEMORIAL DAY.

BY J. WARREN NEWHALL.

The veteran host, our nation's royal braves
Once more come forth with steady, martial tread
To visit yet again the hallowed graves
Where rest Columbia's immortal dead.

They go to deck with fresh, fair flowers of Spring,
The turf beneath which Freedom's soldiers sleep;
They march to bear the fragrant offering
That tells how sacred is the trust they keep.

Ah, 'tis a noble mission, aye, sublime,
Thus to perpetuate heroic deeds,
And justly honor, through all coming time,
That fame which acts of valiant worth succeeds.

'Tis well thus unto consecrated ground,
With sad and reverent bearing to repair
And strew with choicest flowers each hallowed mound,
While plaintive music trembles on the air.

No idle pageant, with its hollow show
Of honor o'er its flaunting banners spread
Is this,—the living heroes sorrowing go
To pledge anew their memory of the dead.

'Tis well that in this sad, memorial rite
The sons of patriot sires should bear a part;
'Tis well to teach them how to guide aright
The great pulsations of the nation's heart.

As to the Carthagenian chief his boy was brought
And sworn eternal enmity to Rome,
So let the sons of loyal sires be taught
Hatred to treason in fair freedom's home.

O ever may Columbia's record be,
While through Time's faithful glass the swift sands run,
"At the blood-baptized altar of the free
A grateful nation mourns her fallen sons."

Farm and Garden.

Pansies.

Pansies prefer shade, but do not put them under a tree or they will grow spindling. Neither plant them in raised beds where the intense heat of summer sun will rapidly absorb the moisture. Choose rather a bed cut in the lawn, or better still the shady side of a house, remembering always that the shade and moisture are essential to the successful cultivation of pansies. If you desire all the flowers you can get, remove some of them every day; there will always be some to take their places. If you wish seeds, remove all but the largest and best formed flowers. Like produces like. So large flowers cannot be raised from poor seeds, but there is no reason why people cannot save their own seeds. The first of June is early enough to plant in open ground.

Advice Worthy Your Attention.

Cellars should be made clean before continued hot weather comes on. All decaying vegetables should be removed, together with all other filth. If potatoes, turnips, cabbages, beets and other vegetables are allowed to remain in the cellar to decay, poisonous gases will be formed and disseminated throughout the dwelling house above. Many cases of sickness in summer and autumn might be traced to filthy cellars as their cause. Half a day's work by any one will clear a cellar of all filth and make it neat and clean. It is easier to keep the cellars clean than it is to pay the expenses of sickness of one or more members of the family.—Lewiston Journal.

APPLE TREE BORERS. Look out for the borers after the apple trees blossom. Soft soap around the trunk and roots, applied three times in the season at three weeks' intervals after blossoming, is recommended. But if you are careless, and allow the eggs to be laid, you must dig out the worms with a knife just before haying, or your trees will be ruined. A flexible wire is useful in the latter operation for following the borer's track and transfixing him in the act.

☞ Hon. Henry L. Pierce bought two Jersey cows at the great sale in New York recently, for one of which he paid $2525 and for the other $2000.

Anecdotes.

"Have you not mistaken the pew, sir?" blandly said a Sunday Chesterfield to a stranger who had entered it.

"I beg pardon," answered the intruder, rising to go out, "I fear I have; I took it for a Christian's."

A little fellow lately asked his parents to take him to church with them. They said he must wait until he was older.

"Well," was his shrewd response, "you'd better take me now, for when I get bigger I may not want to go."

A Methodist itinerant preacher once breakfasted at a house where johnny cakes were served. Observing a feather protruding from his cake he remarked.

"Sister, your johnny cake seems to be feathering out."

"Yes," responded the lady unabashed; "I told John no longer ago than yesterday that he must either get a cover for the meal barrel or move the hen-roost."

Poole, the tailor, was making a holiday at Brighton, and one morning, on the pier, he met one of his noble customers.

"Good-morning, Mr. Poole," said the peer.

"Good-morning, my lord," replied the tailor, who then passed on.

"Stay, Mr. Poole; I wanted to show you this coat," replied the aristocrat. "It doesn't fit me at all."

Poole was a man of ready wit. He stopped, looked carefully at the coat, and then drawing a piece of chalk from his pocket, said: "Your lordship is right; the coat wants to be taken in here, and let out here, and shortened here, and just a bit lengthened here;" and at each "here" he made a heavy chalk mark. "Now, my lord," he continued, as he saw a curious crowd had gathered round, "if you will just take that coat up to London, marked as it is, my manager will see that it is altered to your satisfaction."

His lordship did not again commit the impertinence of "talking shop" to Poole.

The public has long since awarded to Ayer's Hair Vigor the foremost place among reliable Hair Restoratives. It is effectual, agreeable and absolutely harmless. It makes the hair fresh and luxuriant, and old age scarce and unfashionable.

Many of the Bitters advertised as tonics are simply cathartics. Wheat Bitters is not a cathartic.—E. P. RUSSELL, M. D.

Temperance.

[Furnished for publication by the W. C. T. Union.]

Diseases from Alcohol.

A diseased state of the body is the first result of taking alcoholic drinks. Intoxication is the sign of serious disease. It shows that the brain is poisoned. The stomach soon becomes badly diseased. Dr. Richardson says that the digestive apparatus and the nervous system receive great harm from alcohol.

Alcohol not only hurts the liver, but through the bad blood which comes from the diseased liver it invites and increases all other kinds of disease. Cholera is frequently brought on in this way in cholera seasons.

In Park Hospital, New York, in 1832, out of two hundred and four cases only six were temperate persons. They all recovered, while one hundred and twenty-two of the others died. Mr. Huber says, "In Fiflis, Russia, every drunkard has fallen." In yellow fever epidemics it is the filth from bad sewers, or from no sewers, that makes bad air, which takes hold of the drinker first, because of the bad condition of their blood, about which we learned in a previous lesson. Dr. Cartwright, of New Orleans, says that in one season in that city five thousand drinking men died with yellow fever before it touched a sober man.

If we look around almost anywhere we find people dying with familiar diseases which have been brought on by the poison of the drink. Dr. Richardson, "as a cause of disease it (alcohol) gives origin to great populations of afflicted persons, many of whom suffer even to death without suspecting the cause."

He also gives the names of many of the diseases most frequently caused by the use of alcoholic liquors. Among these is consumption, which comes especially to men who call themselves moderate drinkers, men who drink much and often, but do not show it. They may never have been intoxicated in all their lives, and they think alcohol agrees with them. There is no remedy whatever for alcoholic consumption."

"In faith we wait and long and pray,
To see that time, by prophets told,
When nations, new-born into day,
Shall be ingathered to thy fold,
We cannot doubt thy gracious will,
Thou mighty, merciful, and just!
And thou wilt speedily fulfil
The word in which thy servants trust."

Woman's Column.

Mrs. Shelton, of Santa Clara County, first introduced bees into California in 1853.

A meeting of women ministers was held in Boston, one day this week.

The newspapers of Oregon stand on the pending suffrage amendment twenty-three in favor, five opposed and four neutral.

Twenty-five women physicians who took part in the military operations of Russia in 1877, have been decorated by the emperor with the order of St. Stanislas of the third class.

Dr. A. C. Buckel has not only established herself professionally in Oakland, Cal., but is a practical teacher of natural history and biology. Both classes are in a prosperous condition.

A committee of two from the Brooklyn Woman's Club called on Mayor Low recently and presented him with a petition containing over 1,200 signatures asking the appointment of women on the board of education.

Mrs. L. E. Elliot is a young widow left with two children to support and educate, and instead of sitting down and pining at her fate, she has bravely stepped forward and opened a ladies' fancy shoe store in Dayton, Ky.

Mrs. Nellie Grace edits the largest paper at Eureka Springs, Arkansas. She issues a daily and a double sheet weekly. Another lady owns and conducts the largest saw mill, and another is developing a lead mine besides superintending a large farm.

This and That.

☞ A reason given why a piano was not saved at a fire was because none of the fireman could play on it.

☞ "The true family is the type of the true state." "It is the absence of the feminine from the conduct of the governments of earth that makes them more or less savage. There are fathers of the state, but no mothers."—Rev. S. J. May.

☞ "Poor fellow! he died in poverty," said a man of a person lately deceased. "That isn't anything!" exclaimed a seedy bystander. "Dying in poverty is no hardship; it's living in poverty that puts the thumbscrews on a fellow."

☞ If one can't be wholly good, he ought to be without too great inconvenience. "I stoled your money," wrote a thief to his employer. "Remorse naws my conscience, and I sent some of it back. When remorse naws agin I will send some more."

☞ This is the man who has had a notice in the paper. How proud he is. He is stepping higher than a blind horse. If he had wings he would fly. Next week the paper will say the man is a measly old fraud, and the man will not step so high.—Denver Tribune Primer.

☞ A gentleman gave a party in honor of a distinguished missionary lately returned from his field of work. The ladies appeared in very decollette dresses, and as the host feared the style might shock his reverence, he apologized for it, saying that fashion demanded it. "Oh, I don't mind it at all," replied the missionary; "I have been ten years among the savages."

Walnut Leaf Hair Restorer.

It is entirely different from all others. It is as clear as water, and, as its name indicates, is a perfect Vegetable Hair Restorer. It will immediately free the head from all dandruff, restore grey hair to its natural color, and produce a new growth where it has fallen off. It does not in any manner affect the health, which Sulphur, Sugar of Lead, and Nitrate of Silver preparations have done. It will change light or faded hair in a few days to a beautiful glossy brown. Ask your druggist for it. Each bottle is warranted. Chas. N. Crittenton, New York, and Geo. C. Goodwin & Co., Boston, wholesale agts. S 24po

In the Whole History of Medicine

No preparation has ever performed such marvellous cures, or maintained so wide a reputation, as AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, which is recognized as the world's remedy for all diseases of the throat and lungs. Its long-continued series of wonderful cures in all climates has made it universally known as a safe and reliable agent to employ. Against ordinary colds, which are the forerunners of more serious disorders, it acts speedily and surely, always relieving suffering, and often saving life. The protection it affords, by its timely use in throat and chest disorders, makes it an invaluable remedy to be kept always on hand in every home. No person can afford to be without it, and those who have once used it never will. From their knowledge of its composition and operation, physicians use the CHERRY PECTORAL extensively in their practice, and clergymen recommend it. It is absolutely certain in its healing effects, and will always cure where cures are possible.

For sale by all druggists.

A Gentleman.

What is a gentleman? Is it not one
Knowing instinctively what he should shun,
Speaking no word that can injure or pain,
Spreading no scandal and deepening no stain?
One who knows how to put each at his ease,
Striving instinctively always to please;
One who can tell, by a glance at your cheek,
When to be silent, and when he should speak?

What is a gentleman? Is it but one
Honestly eating the bread he has won,
Living in uprightness, fearing his God,
Leaving no stain on the path he hath trod,
Caring not whether his coat may be old,
Prizing sincerity far above gold,
Recking not whether his hand may be hard,
Stretching it boldly to grasp its reward?

What is a gentleman? Say, is it birth
Makes a man noble, or adds to his worth?
Is there a family tree to be had
Spreading enough to conceal what is bad?
Seek out the man who has God for his guide;
Nothing to blush for, and nothing to hide;
Be he a noble, or be he in trade,
This is the gentleman Nature has made.

Miscellany.

ORATION

Delivered on Decoration Day

AT TOWN HALL, QUINCY,

BY REV. H. E. COTTON.

The spirit of the passing hour, or year, or generation, writes with mingled feelings and emotions its record of events, but however deeply graven those lines may be in the memories or experience of the time, no one looks on them as the infallible, unbiased verdict of history; no one takes these unanalyzed, undigested data as the completed estimate of a nation's life. However impressive and perfect the blocks cut by the present may seem, and year by year add its influential share, it is ever in the past that the historic structure of any country is built, and it is ever by the hand of the future that the materials are put in their rightful place. When the living witnesses of any great events or epochs of time, after leaving their individual opinion or testimony of what has taken place in their day, are dead, then some master brain from the disjointed material, writes out the unimpassioned record which is to go down on the pages of time.

The historian of a country is its highest artist; before him is the fair untouched canvass; around lie the crude colors. He must be imbued with the spirit of the great masters in order that his personal touch may be harmonious with their standard work, and then patiently, laboriously, step by step, must his picture grow; first the rude charcoal sketch, getting things into their places, then a more careful outline of the salient points, then the dead color laid on in rough blotches; and yet, with the skilled eye for the coming step of greater detail, and continuously from detail to still more minute detail, until the perfected result is reached; and from the seemingly puzzling and complicated mass of material, the picture, or the history, towards which many a mind has contributed its shade of color, manipulated by the one dispassionate mind, stands out a record fit to take its place beside other master pieces in the gallery of national life. You cannot make history out of nothing, the pigments must be all there, ready for the writer.

If this day recalls to many here the vivid memory of a great epoch in our own life, it thereby places us in the rank of witnesses and recorders of those sad events; not historians. Year by year the number lessens; year by year hastens the coming of the sage who is to select and delineate what we shall leave in the archives of truth, or falsehood, or imagination. Shall we then regret that over this or that name, famous in the records of the war, a partisan strife of words is now waged, and motives of every kind impugned? Shall we then regret that the right or the wrong of sectional views have still their advocates, that the leader of the rebellion has even written his own view of the whole question? Personally we may resent an attack on our own individual hero, or view of the truth, but for the future we must be thankful for the mass of material, from which the history of our war is to be written; feeling sure that Time the calm arbiter of all opinion will use these manifold colors aright, concealing no untruthful tint, discriminating between that narrowness and that loseness of thought which characterizes all interested estimates, the toneing down, the over praise or the over blame into harmonious perspective, never hesitating to use the crude color when occasion demands it. And that as against the names of Washington and Arnold, our own day, endorsing an older record has used the pure light of patriotism for the one and the blackness of treason for the other; so the future historian, taking his colors as they stand, sternly massed on the palette of to-day, will light up the names of Lincoln and Garfield with the crown of martyrdom, and paint with stygian darkness unalloyed the names of Booth and Guiteau.

Only twenty years or more intervene between us and that terrible test of our constituted principles; we cannot be its historians, save as old comrades meet to live over some of the thrilling memories of the field and camp, or to tell to a younger generation the stirring deeds of that great campaign; or as you gather year by year to call the ever lessening roll of that Army of the Republic, grand in number and in deeds.

Tenderly and confidently we place it all, written story and unwritten tradition, in the safe guardianship of time, until some yet unborn Gibbon, or Motley, or Bancroft, shall come with gifted genius and balanced judgment to untie the tear-stained, passion-torn, dimly-remembered records, and to write for all ages the history of our great rebellion. But we must turn to the ever active present, with its responsibilities and its duties, with its significant foreshadowings of the future, for there lie some of the colors which are to form the light and shade of the history of our own time, threads already filling the varied shuttles which are to weave a woof for good or ill in this young country.

Every age, and narrowing it down, every nation has had its great problems to solve. They may be a product of their own peculiar life, or they may be foreign to the soil; they may be new, or they may be old difficulties; but apart from all the experiences and experiments of others, each has to fight it down for itself; each has to find the remedy that suits its own special wants, and if that proved to be universal in its efficiency, then that country has bestowed a blessing on humanity, and earned a world wide influence.

If I call your attention to-day to the subject of socialism, it is because it has become the great problem of this century, and because it has found some congenial soil in this free land of America. In what distant ages the germs of this disease were planted it is difficult to say. It has borne but a stunted and easily repressed growth, until the conditions of our advanced thought and progress have forced it into a product difficult to overcome and to master, interwoven as it is with many a strong principle of right and justice.

Look at the history of Europe for the last one hundred years, and see how the communistic idea has grown into greater proportions year by year, and has brought forth the most pernicious fruit. France, Germany, Russia, stand out foremost, and now Ireland adds its dastardly deed of crime to the records of this mysterious movement in the minds of men. In those countries the growth no doubt can be traced to a lack of personal liberty in thought and action, which was the result of a conservative adhesion to the opinions and teachings of the feudal system, and also the outcome of the old Procrustean laws of despotic government, but it is a significant thing that in this land of extreme liberality, any foothold should be found for the doctrines of Nihilism or the Commune. The causes that lie back of this movement in Europe are not so difficult to understand, but why this so called offspring of Republicanism should have found any opportunity to thrive in this Republic, opens up to us serious questions in the future.

The despotism of government abroad; the drain made upon a man's time and labor by the military spirit; the short-sighted policy of suppressing public opinion; of persecuting the loud-mouthed demagogue until he becomes a martyr with the people, instead of the fool and madman that his published words would teach; the overplus of population, and the consequent precariousness of living; the lower status of women; the open or subtle oppression of each class by the one above it; all these, with many other minor and local causes, have fostered this desire in the hearts of the people for a greater liberty of thought and action. We cannot look into the depths of all this as it stands recorded in the history of Europe, though not as yet thoroughly analysed, without seeing that there is a true and a right principle at the bottom of it all, without regretting that the leaders and the advocates of all the lawless and criminal classes of humanity have seized the opportunity to further their own ends, and by inflammatory speech and murderous deed, have hurried the patience of the masses into getting their rights by means of mob passion and brute force.

To right one wrong by committing a greater wrong, is a doctrine destructive to any reform; is one that returns with fell interest on the lives of those who attempt to carry out such a principle of evil. Monarchies may have abused that divine right of government which lies in the executive, be it king or president, and set a like example to all the grades of office, public and private, below them; but it is to the calm deliberate majesty of the people, working by the written law of the land, or by the unwritten law of divine justice, implanted in the heart of man, that men look for reform and for right. The common sense of the people, not the incendiary torch in one hand and the assassin's steel in the other, is the power that is both effective and beneficial. And, when a church, or a state, allows the authority of God, the Supreme Governor of the Universe, to be weakened, or ignored, or set aside; degrading the Sabbath from a day of worship and thanksgiving and rest, to a day of animal enjoyment, of thoughtless pleasure, of all forgetfulness of the future life, in the gratification of earthly tastes; then inevitably there must come a disrespect for constituted authority. The Emperor of Germany's words were significant when in face of the attempts made on the lives of his brother kings and on his own, he said that the people must first be taught the fear and the love of God, and then respect for earthly authority would follow.

A man may worship and reverence his Creator without observing Sunday in the usual way. As an individual, that is his look out, not yours nor mine; but as one of a community, or of a nation, or of the great humanity, with a duty to his fellows and the immense power of influence, he ought to observe the day in the accepted way; else a thousand others without his purity of thought and life, or innate reverence, may follow his example to riot and excess. I cannot help touching on this point, because I believe it to be one of the prime causes of the worse features of the communistic tendencies of the age; because, to take away the moral sanity and order of that day, would eventually place all that is pure and elevating in life, as well as religion, in the social insanity that ever lives in the scums of our depraved humanity; because to substitute that solemn and peaceful hush that comes one day out of seven, over the industries, the contending ambitions, the restless lives of this vast country, by the advocated adoption of a European Sunday, would be to produce a greater extravagance in living; a greater craving after the pleasures which tend to sensualism and lawlessness; a drain in added labor and want of rest, which would bring to this land and its people a premature decay and death. Break the sacred, refreshing stillness of the Sabbath, and crime and strife will with discordant clangor toll the bells that once rung out the harmonies of peace and worship.

The Socialism of Europe has been fostered by such influences, until every country is honey-combed with its doctrines, and its significance has a practical interest to us, when week after week the motley tide of emigration increases in power and number.

From all quarters of the world, with their peculiar habits of thought and costumes, educated under ultra, narrow, or liberal, or superstitious principles, they come to be finally amalgamated into the United States. Is this influx of other nationalities destined to over-turn this republic, as ancient Rome was ruined by her foreign conquests? Are we to furnish another wretched example of the instability of a democratic form of government, by repeating the experience of Rome, the longest lived Republic the world has witnessed? Are we to become like a broad river, which at first, a mere rivulet, starts from the side of a mountain, and bursting through all obstacles by its own native strength, at last reaches the level plain, where corrupted by the foreign streams which have augmented it, it flows more and more sluggishly onward, losing its early purity and vigor, until its waters become foul and almost stagnant? I fully believe if we ever do fail as a united nation, the influence of foreign emigration will not be the rock on which we shall be wrecked, because the conquests we make are those of peace, because these foreign representatives come not as unwilling captives, but as men and brothers wanting the freedom to rise above all the accidents of birth, station, or poverty, and willing to merge their own nationality into the one where they have found a home. But will they not find here some of the old problems of life, some of that same human nature, cropping out into abuses, into tendencies, as despotic as the iron heel of a king.

Antagonism between capital and labor, whether that capital be brains, money, aristocracy, or monopoly, fosters the most pernicious forms of Socialism. There are tendencies to-day in this country which have made it possible for this doctrine to take root amongst our free institutions; the centralization of the inhabitants into cities, the constant drain from the country and agriculture of the younger generation into the neighboring large city; the desire to grasp that one chance out of the many thousands, of being rich, which the ups and downs of city life offers; the inevitable increase of the artisan class, there living, dependant on the capriciousness of a prosperous season; their precarious condition in hard times; the forming of trades-union, first as a means of mutual help in sickness and want, then perverted by the restless, and discontented, and lazy, into a means of offence against all capital, and as a means of support to the puffed up, indolent conceit of the demagogues, who manipulate the funds and the feelings of their hard working brethren.

Here in New England we are losing some of the sturdy, strong limbed characteristics which made the farmers of Lexington and Concord representative men of the nation, and are getting instead the ill-fed forms, the restless, nervous habits, the shattered health of men poisoned by the confinement and the evils of a city life, ready to join any movement which falsely promises to better the uncertainties of their condition. It is only sufficient to see how the large cities here in the East, and I presume as near West as Chicago, are drawing in their yearly increase of population from the adjoining country, in order to realize some of the above results, and the problems they offer to the political economist, who would utilize all that is good in Socialism, and destroy or minimise what is injurious. And no less powerfully does the centralization of money in individuals influence this difficulty.

That a man or a small syndicate of men should have the power to ruin others, simply by the immense wealth controlled, is a serious drawback to the intelligent advance of this country. That men whose wealth might make them the greatest benefactors of their race, should falsify their given word and honor, and for the sake of adding still more to what they cannot possibly spend, by the manipulation of stocks and bonds which they control, ruin the trust funds of the widow and her children, is a crime calling for greater punishment than the stealing of bread to feed a starving family. That the respectable and educated defaulter should be pardoned out in a few months, while the ignorant and too often crime-educated thief serves out his full time with hard labor, is enough not only to throw discredit on our judicial system, but also, to produce the worse features of Communism. That men can lock up the grain or the meat supply of this country and grimly wait until its scarcity ensures them a round profit, not to the loss of those who can pay, but to the starvation of the poor working classes; that a few consolidated railroads can monopolize the carrying trade of this continent and at their option ruin the producer; that mills and factories, in order to pay their 8 or 10 per cent. stockholders' dividend, should cut down the wages of their workmen; I believe to be wrong in political economy as well as in God's sight.

I know that wages are high, that this country is the paradise for well paid labor, but I also know that the prices and the cost of living is higher here than elsewhere; that many American products and manufactures are sold cheaper to European customers than to those at home; that the profits made on goods are beyond reason and justice, and that when there is to be any reduction, it comes out of the pockets of the poor rather than the rich.

These are no pictures of imagination, they are every day facts, they are the things which have enough truth in them to produce a communistic party in this country, and if it is a strange subject to bring before you on this day, it is because the time may come when the eternal principles of truth and justice may be at stake between the selfishness of wealth and the fanaticism of poverty, and a younger generation may be called upon as you once were, over twenty years ago, to preserve that divine blessing of liberty which is the corner stone of this Republic.

But is there no brighter side to all this? Is there no equivalent power of good running counter to this tide and the evil consequences it is destined to work out, if unchecked? We cannot look to the National Capitol for it; if it were advisable for any government to regulate all these evils, surely ours, in the present corrupt condition of its prominent parties, would be incompetent for the task. The safeguard of this country consists in its ability to furnish every citizen with land of his own, with that sense of proprietorship which makes men conservative against radical changes, and against doctrines which look to the overthrow of individual possession, in behalf of a community of goods.

Into the broad fields of the West the great tide of emigration can be turned, and men who may have approved the the doctrines of the French Revolution or Fenianism, will, under the potent influence of being property owners, become better citizens as their land yields a bountiful increase for their labor. The artisan out of work, and too ill to continue his mechanical tread-mill, can find in the culture and majestic operations of Nature, the peace and the content he needs. Agriculture, the first primeval duty of man, still has untold blessings in store for the new country who uses and improves the great opportunity given it. And backing this principle as a twin alley of law and order, is the common sense of our people.

Preeminently there is an innate gift inherited from that sturdy independence of our forefathers, which judges and weighs the questions which come up in our national life; the power of a sensible, manly analysis which has made practical philosophers of many a man amid the suroundings of village life, or on the frontier prairies of the West, amid the silent yet potent influences of Nature, or amid the constant traffic, and sharp contact of the great cities. Politicians have ever tried to control this latent strength, but however powerful the Philistine influence and their cords, the will of the people, when the emergency arises, has ever come to the front and, Sampson like, hurled down the abuses, the corruptions, the hidden treachery, and the open assault of those who would undermine or overthrow our great institutions; constantly establishing the fact that the sense of the great body of the people in this land is for truth and justice, not for falsehood nor wrong.

An English writer of reputation and influence has lately said that we, as a country, had not as yet produced any very great thinkers, or thoughts. We are willing to acknowledge that. We are a race of workers, not yet thinkers, and we are working what is to last for ages, and bear fruit for future generations; but we start with a better basis than those older countries to which we go for deep thought and mental research. The practical basis of equality, the practical working out in opportunity of the theory that every man has a right to rise to the top irrespective of any falsely established hinderances. Emmerson, Longfellow, not to mention others, are the early promise of the future thinkers of America; with such a beginning, we can well afford to await that future, when, as the artists of to-day draw their inspiration from the old Italian masters, so other nations may yet learn lessons from the thinkers, born and bred under the influence of a land of Freedom. It is no shame to us that our native literature does not yet crowd the library shelves of Europe, or in that outcome of the study of an older architecture, the beautiful structure dedicated to-day to the cause of learning, that the books of foreign writers so greatly outnumber the works of our own.

If our New England ancestors or the Virginia settlers, with a primeval forest before them, and a wonderously rich but uncultivated nature around them to subdue, had stopped to think of being literary men and of producing great works in literature, philosophy, and science, the Indian might still have lorded it over the waters of the Chesapeake Bay; might have even cut his pictorial comment of the white man's efforts on Plymouth Rock itself. No race of men simply culling what the surface of nature had to give, and failing to explore the depths of her treasure house, failing to develop and improve her great resources for their own use and the benefit of future ages, have ever succeeded, or been allowed for any length of time to abuse or ignore the opportunity given them. And to you who are gathered here to-day, a remnant of that great army who went out a score of years ago to preserve what those early settlers and ancestors first initiated, and to prevent the great mission given this newer and wider world from being irretrievably set back by the personal ambition and bigotry of a handful of politicians.

The results you then won are become an indelible part of this country's progress towards her appointed task; the memories of toil and deprivation, of pain and sorrow, are sweet, because you did your duty on the only true ancestral foundation of a united, not a divided country, and you leave to a younger generation, the spirit and the courage to do their part as faithfully whenever the call shall come. That summons may come if the evil tendencies I have spoken of are unchecked; if the forces of order and reason prove too weak to master the common enemy. But, whatever the future need may be, the present does call this growing generation to the nobler and worthier warfare waged throughout this land. The battle of work still goes on, the subduing the forces of nature to the necessities, the comforts and pleasures of our common country. The rapidly advancing years shall find us still an army of workers; shall find this land giving to every man the opportunity to carry out that divine law of work which is ever the elevating, ennobling blessing bestowed upon our humanity. Nature will ever become the willing servant of man, and from the workers will spring the thinkers whose theoretical wisdom and thought shall be but the complement of the practical sense governing this land through the silent and potent will of the people.

If I believe the duty of this people to be the development of the great resources of this country; if I believe that before a steady honest and manly development all permiscuous influences and poisons will be dissipated like the miasma mists which so often cloud the early morning of a sunlit day, or of a glorious nation, it is because nature, whether it be the material world or humanity itself, ever has divine blessings to bestow on all who bring into subjection the outer or the inner life of man, ever covers with flowers planted by man, the scenes of toil and strife and discord.

And so the observance of this day has a wider influence than the one which so personally and so sadly reminds you of the brave lives and the human energies sacrificed in a war between brothers. When in the coming years there shall be no living member of this once Grand Army of the Republic to deck the graves of the dead; when all the actors in the great war shall have passed into another and more perfect life, then shall that future historian write the faithful record of it all, and as this day's institution comes before him, it will not be as a Northern or Southern act of remembrance, to foster perchance bitter memories or boastful triumphs of the days of civil war, but it will rank one in feeling, one in principle, one in patriotism with the three great national days, as eternal landmarks in the history of this country, and around each will gather the memories and the observances of a united nation. Washington's Birthday, the earthly standard of the ideal manhood. Decoration Day, the union of national love and individual patriotism. The Fourth of July, the symbol of liberty and equality. Thanksgiving Day, the capstone of all prosperity, peace and success; the reverent acknowledgement of a divine Providence.

To Paris by Rail.

"From New York to Paris by rail in fifteen days and a half, the land journey only to be broken once by a two hours sea passage"—such is the latest proposition submitted to the consideration of capitalists by American engineering enterprise. The plans for this gigantic undertaking have been drawn out by a Mr. Gregory, well known in transatlantic railway circles, whose readiness to carry them out, so soon as the necessary funds shall be placed at his disposal, may be taken for granted. His line of route, starting from the commercial capital of the States passes through Canada, New Georgia and Alaska to Cape Prince of Wales, whence the passengers are to be conveyed by steamer to East Cape, on the opposite Asiatic coast of Behring's Straits and distant about forty miles from the north-western extremity of the American continent. From East Cape the iron road to be constructed will cross Russian territory in Northern Asia until it joins the Siberian railway system, already in direct connection, through Moscow and St. Petersburg, with all the European capitals. Mr. Gregory calculates that the distance between New York and Paris, the American paradise, can be traversed by this route in 372 hours and at a cost of about thirty pounds to each passenger.—London Telegraph.

Salt for Bronchial Affections.

The value of salt as a cure for bronchial affections and ordinary sore throat can only be properly estimated by those patients, who after having become walking receptacles for troches, pectoral and cough syrups, find instant relief by swallowing a single pinch of salt. The disagreeable tickling of the throat, the hacking cough, even bleeding at the lungs is ameliorated by one or two pinches of salt. Try it, ye lovers of nostrums and patent medicines, and your throat disease will yield before its simple touch like magic, your body be strengthened, and your purse be none the lighter for the expenditure.—Exchange.

When the baby cries for "bread" it is the most natural thing for a mother to give it a "rock."

The Quincy Patriot.

SATURDAY, JUNE 10, 1882.

Silver Wedding.

One of the largest and most enjoyable gatherings of the season took place on Monday evening, at the residence of Mr. Rufus Foster, on Chestnut street, about two hundred being present. The occasion that called so many together was the twenty-fifth anniversary of the event which united two willing hearts. Twenty-five years had the genial Rufus and his amiable spouse travelled together in the holy bonds of wedlock, and it was deemed a fitting occasion to celebrate, and they were made the recipients of many useful and elegant presents. Among these gifts was a handsome extension table, and silver and cut glass articles from the firm of T. E. Moseley & Co., of Boston, and the employers of that establishment; Mr. Foster has been connected with this large establishment the past thirty years, and these beautiful presents spoke of the respect and esteem that he commands in his business connections with the firm and its employes. An elegant silver service and many other valuable presents were donated by the children and friends in Quincy.

Mr. Stephen Morse, Jr., made the presentation speech in his usual pleasing and happy manner, beginning with the two first verses from Longfellow's "Psalm of Life." Mr. Foster responded to Mr. Morse in a very feeling manner, thanking his friends for their testimonials. For just once in his life Rufus was a little embarrassed.

A poem composed for the occasion was then read by Mr. Smith, which was full of wit and humor, much of it relating to their every day business affairs. Rev. Mr. Wilson made a few happy remarks, and was followed by Rev. Mr. Kelley.

The company were entertained with some superior music, both instrumental and vocal. Refreshments, consisting of ice cream, cake and fruits, were abundantly supplied, and the evening was passed in a delightful manner. A God-speed the remainder of their happy union, was the wish of all who availed themselves of the opportunity to congratulate Mr. and Mrs. Foster on this happy occasion.

A Necessity.

It is a pity that Maple place could not be extended to Chestnut street. The extension would be but a few rods and it would be a great benefit to the citizens of the town generally. Now that the new Crane library is completed many of our ladies will wish to visit it often and will also want to call at the post office and see if there isn't a letter; therefore the two should be as conveniently situated as possible. All who come from Granite street and vicinity; South Quincy, etc., would find but a short walk from the post office to the library if Maple place could be extended. If only an alley way, fifteen feet wide, it would be a great convenience. Nothing conduces more to the growth and advancement of a town than short streets in the centre, the more the better,—but in this particular case it should be done for the convenience of a large body of people living at the South part of the town. The library has been removed from them, therefore other advantages should be offered. The most of them visit the post office and if a short cut to the library, through Maple place could be had, it would be a public blessing.

But it looks doubtful if this can be accomplished unless steps are taken at once. A cellar has been dug, and probably in a few weeks unless steps are immediately taken to prevent it, a building will be erected direct on the spot where a road or alley way should be located.

We do not blame Dr. French, the owner of the property, for making the most profitable use of it he may see fit, but we do believe the town needs this land, and if it is not purchased to-day, before a building is erected upon it, it will be obliged to at some future time, at a greater expense.

Quincy Directory.

We propose to issue in a few weeks a neat Directory for the town of Quincy, and intend to make the work valuable to the citizens as well as the business men. A gentleman who is thoroughly competent, being a resident of the place, has been employed to furnish the names of all the streets and their location, names of citizens and where they reside, correct names of societies, and in fact everything necessary to make a Directory complete and accurate. We shall take pride in presenting the work to the public in a neat and attractive form, and hope it will be favorably received by giving it a liberal support.

PROBATE COURT. At a regular session of Probate Court held on Wednesday the following letters of administration were granted upon the estates of Atherton Tucker of Milton, John Vose of Milton, and James Morison of Quincy. Ellen W. Morison was appointed guardian of Emily Morison of Quincy. Asa French and E. C. Bumpus, special administrators of the estate of Minot Tirrell of Weymouth, made report, and the same was allowed. They charge themselves with $445,764.78, which has been turned over to the heirs and the account allowed. The estate is in securities of the best kind, all paying good dividends. Among the larger investments are government bonds of the value of $109,165.70; Union Bank stock, Weymouth, $23,690; State Bank, Boston, $16,605; Bank of Republic, $70,800; Shoe and Leather Bank, Boston, $23,868; Old Colony Railroad, $25,000.

NEPONSET BRIDGE. This old structure built in 1805, is deemed by the Road Commissioners of Quincy, to be unsafe, and they advise in their report, to be found in this issue, an immediate rebuilding. They recommend filling in solid 350 feet next to the shore, and the other 270 feet next to the draw to have new piles driven. The cost for the pile structure is estimated at $6,750; solid filling at $13,250; total $20,000. The Commissioners think the county of Norfolk may reasonably be expected to bear a part of the expense. Our citizens should read carefully their report.

MONUMENTAL. The Plymouth Memorial says, "A handsome granite monument, to the memory of the late Dr. T. Gordon, and Hon. J. H. Loud, has been erected in Oak Grove Cemetery, under the superintendence of Mr. Lewis Eddy. It is from the yard of McGrath Brothers, at Quincy, and cost upwards of $500."

Brief Locals.

☞ Thursday was the first real hot day of the season.

☞ A good double house on Pond street is advertised for sale.

☞ Sunday was showery with thunder and lightning in the morning.

☞ In April, 1869, beef sold in Quincy at about the same price as now.

☞ A horse belonging to the McDonnell Brothers, died on Monday night.

☞ There will be no Sunday School or evening service at First Church next Sunday.

☞ Mrs. Butler has been appointed Executrix of the estate of Dr. L. F. Butler.

☞ A nice place on Mill street is offered for sale cheap, if applied for immediately.

☞ Probate Court will be held in Quincy on Wednesday next, at 9 o'clock in the morning.

☞ Owing to a delay in the manufacturing of some of the apparatus, the fire alarm will not be tested this week.

☞ All persons indebted to the firm of N. J. Kidder &co. are requested to settle the same immediately with George H. Locke.

The new steam fire engine is to be named Quincy No 1; The builders guarantee a good serviceable fire stream through fifteen hundred feet of hose.

☞ There will be a conference of visitors of the Associated Charities on Tuesday, June 13th, at 3 P. M., in the School Committee's room, Town Hall building.

☞ On the first page will be found in full the excellent oration delivered at the Town Hall, on Decoration Day, by Rev. Mr. Cotton. It is worthy of a careful persual.

☞ Fruit and flowers for the Boston hospitals may be sent, on Wednesday afternoon and evening of next week, to the house of Mr. A. M. Swallow, Hancock street.

☞ There is one place in Quincy where beef of the best quality will be kept, no matter what the dealers in Boston may charge for it, and that is at G. F. Wilson's.

☞ A large party of the Merry Mount Lodge, Ladies and Knights of Honor, visited the Roxbury Lodge on Monday evening last, and a very enjoyable time was had.

☞ Dr. A. H. Gilson of this town, has been elected a member of the Massachusetts Dental Society, the Merrimac Valley Dental Society, and also a Fellow of the Boston Dental College.

☞ Do not fail to read the advertisement of land corner of Goffe and Academy streets. At the price asked, no such offer has ever been made the people of Quincy. Don't wait for outside capital.

☞ We have thought for several years that Col. A. B. Packard's estate was one of the handsomest in the centre of Quincy; and now, since the Haywards have been painting the house and fences in showy colors, it certainly takes the palm.

☞ We would call the attention of readers to the advertisement of Winslow's Quincy and Boston Express. Mr. Winslow has his headquarters at 25 Merchants Row, Boston, and is prepared to purchase anything the Boston markets afford promptly and at the most reasonable rates.

☞ The Floral Festival of First Church will be celebrated next sunday at 3.30 P. M. The usual elaborated preparations have been made. Mrs. Kate Gannett Wells, and Rev. C. R. Elliot of Dorchester First Parish will deliver addresses. The public are invited.

☞ Joel F. Sheppard, who lately bought out D. Howard Bills, coal dealer, Quincy Point, had, during last week, seven vessels arrive with full cargoes. Four of which were for Mr. Sheppard's business in East Braintree and three for Quincy Point. The whole aggregating 2,800 tons.

☞ A horse belonging to Mr. George J. Jones was hired last Sunday evening, about six o'clock by a young man and he with several others went for a drive. The animal was brought home about one o'clock in a very sick condition and after suffering terrible agony for a couple of hours died. The animal was probably injured by over driving. It is quite a loss to Mr. Jones as it was one of his best horses.

Boston Correspondence.

Leavitt's Minstrels, comprising seventy-five members, opened the season at Oakland Garden last Monday evening.

The aquatic Jumbo, the largest whale ever exhibited in the world, is on exhibition on Federal street. The whale is sixty-two feet long, and weighed fifty-two tons when caught.

The Point of Pines, Chelsea Beach, will open June 17th, and the steamers will make hourly excursions from Foster's wharf, Atlantic avenue, direct.

Downer Landing will open for the season, June 15th.

The annual parade of the Boston police regiment occurred last Wednesday afternoon. The different divisions turned out full ranks, averaging thirty-two men each. The men appeared in their fall uniforms, with helmets and white gloves, and made a fine appearance. After the parade the regiment marched to the Common, where they were reviewed by Police Commissioners Jenks, Burley and Wales, and his honor Mayor Green, all of whom praised the fine appearance and improvement made by the men. The display closed with an inspection, after which the regiment was dismissed. Music was furnished by the Boston Cadet Band, Mr. Thomas Henry leader.

Collector Worthington has appointed Joshua M. Howes of Yarmouth, to a clerkship in the warehouse department: and Francis A. Hobart of Braintree, as store keeper.

A curious old bell is to seen at the store of Flitner & Co., Commercial street. It was made ten years before the landing of the Pilgrims at Plymouth, and is thought to have been brought to Boston shortly after that period. The supposition is that it was taken from a convent near the Mediterranean Sea.

The first race for the five-mile championship of the Mass. Bicycle Club is to take place on the Beacon Park track at four o'clock this afternoon. The "three fast men" of the club, Ablx, Corey and Claflin, are entered. T.

☞ Prudent people will do well to notice the card of the Home Savings Bank, of Boston.

Quincy Point Items.

The centre board sloop yacht "Secochet," recently purchased by Mr. Edward Whicher, arrived at the Point last week, and is being repaired, altered and painted. This yacht is thirty-nine feet long, thirteen feet one inch beam, and draws five feet seven inches without the centre board. The cabin is very large and high, and contains four births, table, ice chest, and water closet; the forecastle is quite roomy, and has two "bunks" for the crew. As a whole the craft looks comfortable and able.

We hear an affair very similar to a prize fight took place Tuesday evening at the Neck. We would advise those who took part in it and those who witnessed it, to let it be the last scene of the kind, for there is no telling where such proceedings may stop, or into what complications they may lead.

The many friends of Rev. Daniel Chubbuck were painfully surprised to hear of the sudden death of his estimable wife, which took place Wednesday morning. The lady was at Cambridge visiting friends, and was there stricken down by that terrible disease, pneumonia.

Next Monday evening there will be a strawberry festival given in the Baptist Chapel; there will be singing by the Baptist choir, and "Gideon's Band" has been resurrected for the occasion.

A daughter to Mr. and Mrs. Joseph A. Lapham was born Thursday evening.

Rev. C. D. R. Meacham will preach in the Baptist Chapel to-morrow.

One hundred and eighty-five vessels passed through the Point bridge draw during the month of May.

A subscription paper will be circulated next week to procure money to pay for watering Washington street. We hope the people will be liberal.

A wheel came off of Robinson's new coach America, Thursday, and gave the passengers quite a shaking up.

Monday evening the Vulture Engine Company held a meeting and also played the engine.

Wednesday evening the Quincy Point Temperance Association held its regular meeting, and quite a large audience was present. The exercises consisted of a reading by Miss Lulu Totman, a declamation by Mr. Tinkham, remarks by Mr. Lawton, and a description of the mining and cutting of diamonds by Mr. H. M. Federhen. Next Wednesday evening Mr. Walton Hall will describe the methods employed in the manufacturing of cordage and duck.

We hear that at the meeting of the Board of Engineers held Tuesday evening it was voted "not to approve of the list of members sent in by the Vulture Engine Company, and to lock up the engine house." We understand that some of the reasons given for this action are, first, the roll sent in gave the ages of the men in most instances as twenty-one years, when the Board well knew many were much younger and others much older, and thought an official communication should have less nonsense and more business in it; second, the action of some of the men Decoration Day; third, the roll bore names of men whose previous conduct did not meet the approval of the Board. Officer Furnald was assigned the duty of locking up the house. This state of affairs is regretted by the Point people who in years past have taken so much interest in this company, which still comprises many good men in its ranks who discountenance bad behavior. We hope to see the movement that is now being made to organize a new company which will prove a credit to the Point, entirely successful.

Any communication from the Point Correspondent will be found in the Point column. The article in last week's PATRIOT signed "Shawmut" did not come from H., if it had it would have been signed H.

A number of the gentlemen who were members of last year's 4th of July committee, met at the residence of Mr. H. M. Federhen, Monday evening, and organized a committee this year by choosing Mr. T. H. Newcomb, Chairman, and F. H. Smith, Secretary. The advisability of having a celebration the coming Fourth was discussed, and it was unanimously voted to have that day properly observed at the Point. The procession of the "Horribles" and the Athletics will be omitted, and a game of base ball between the married "boys" and the single ones substituted for the latter. There will be another meeting of the committee next Monday evening, when a full programme will be decided upon.

By the capsizing of one of Mr. Robinson's carryalls, Mrs. Randlett was thrown to the ground and somewhat injured, though not seriously we are pleased to say. H.

Hough's Neck.

Go to Nut Island and see the baby seal.

It has been quite lively at the beach the last few days. The warm weather soon makes the people hasten where they are sure of a warm reception but a refreshing breeze.

Guests at the Linden continue the same as last week. Mears has two new arrivals,—Dr. Edwards and son from Hyde Park.

The Linden House wharf is back in place, and with a new addition is now two hundred and fifty feet long.

Most of the cottages are receiving a renovation and soon will be occupied. Desirable houses are nearly all taken.

A perfect "Jumbo" of a store has been added to the Linden.

Our gentlemanly townsman, Mr. Hodges, the baker, has started his route at the beach and patrons will find him as obliging as ever. He is to put a nice case of goods at the Linden House, where a first class assortment may be found.

Mr. Eaton, the ice man, has again thawed out and his smiling face is again to be seen on the beach. He will be sure to be welcome and won't be left out in the cold.

Mr. Edgcomb is to erect a new cottage on Rock Island and have it ready to occupy by the Fourth of July. T.

PRIVATE SALES. Among the private sales in this county we find published in the dailies the following.

Charles T. Derry has sold one-third of an acre of land with buildings on Brackett street, to Emily E. Garbarino, for $1,200.

The Weymouth Savings Bank has sold 11,340 feet of land, corner of Warren and Winthrop avenues to Evelina E. Slack for $1,200.

George E. Porter has sold one undivided sixth part of 31400 feet of land and buildings at junction of Hancock and Adams streets, to Susan B. (Porter) Ilsley, for $1,500.

The Strawberry Festival.

The ladies connected with the Congregational society had another of their pleasant entertainments last Wednesday evening. The sale tables were well patronized, and many useful things were to be had at very reasonable prices.

The weather was just right for ice cream and strawberries and those that did not come "early and often" found themselves buying ice cold "water."

The novel feature of the evening however was the Doll's Reception, and it did great credit to the ladies in charge. Probably the three or four hundred children who attended the reception never had so pleasant a time,—and it was sometimes with great difficulty that they could be persuaded to move on and make room for others. There were over two hundred dolls in attendance from the "bride" in her wedding dress to the poor outcast, who at last was finding rest in the hospital. There was the drawing-room, kitchen, and in fact a whole house. The smallest doll was three-quarters of an inch in length and was jointed so that all parts moved, and was in a cradle one inch in length. Then the sizes increased up to about the size of a child of two years. Of course the "oldest inhabitant" was there; a doll and bedstead over 100 years old. There were others fifty and sixty years old. There were two dolls from Japan that caused much attention. One of them had a movable head and was very lifelike.

One family was represented by a delegation of fourteen and another by fifty. In the latter family it is hoped that none were "left out."

The cornet playing of the Loud boys was excellent. The smaller one was suffering with a swollen lip, but notwithstanding that he did splendidly.

The affair was a complete succes and it will not be long before the square will be ornamented with a new and beautiful fence.

The ladies in charge wish to extend their thanks to all who in any way contributed to the success of the sale and reception.

Weymouth Items.

The prize recently offered the catcher of the largest cod previous to the first day of July, we understand, must be caught from the yacht "Nellie."

The East Weymouth Advance has changed hands and now is under the management of Messrs. Clarence Spooner & Alfred A. Webster. The first publication of the above paper was issued Feb. 14th, 1879, by Mr. C. F. David.

An old landmark gone. One of the oldest houses at the Landing, situated near Hunt & Co.'s store on Front street, has been taken down.

Petts & Straffin's ministrel troupe gave one of the best performances last week ever given of its kind at the Landing. By some mistake of the agent the place of their exhibit was not announced consequently a thin house was the result.

Weymouth now supports five printing establishments. Newspapers are issued weekly from three of them.

As the hot season is fast approaching men of leisure are now securing places at the sea side for the next few weeks. We understand that most of the best rooms at all of the hotels at Nantasket have been secured, and nearly all of the cottages have been let. Hough's Neck, in Quincy, which for the past few years has been much desired by pleasure seekers is becoming noted. The small cottages are daily being called for and in a short time, no doubt, all will be taken. We understand that Mr. James Mears the proprietor of Hotel Mears, has offered for sale on very reasonable terms a large number of valuable house lots near the seaside.

The religious interest still continue at the Baptist Church. Last Sunday evening two candidates for immersion were baptized.

From a notice posted in Weymouth we copy the following:—"Rt. Hon. John Foster Gray (2d Webster) Weymouth orator, will speak near Orcutt's store on Friday evening, June 9th, subject,—The Battle of Bunker Hill. At the conclusion comic songs will be sung with dancing accomplishment. Engagements can be made for July 4th for any town on the South Shore by early application. A collection will be taken."

Wollaston Heights.

Quite a number of sales of houses have been recently made to parties who intend to reside in them. This makes the demand for houses to rent greater than ever, in fact, none such are to be had. There is a talk of several new houses soon to be built for private parties. Rumor has it, that a distinguished government official will be of this number.

Our churches were never more prosperous. The Sabbath schools show a growth in numbers and in interest. Next Sabbath evening the children's concert occurs at the Congregationalist Church. Subject, "The growing disregard of Sabbath ordinances." Singing by a Quartet. All are invited.

For the Patriot.

Henry H. Faxon, Esq.

DEAR SIR:—From some of your remarks the other day, you and the Selectmen would seem to class myself with rumsellers, or liquor dealers, which I think is a great injustice, for I believe myself to be as temperate in every sense of the word as Mr. Faxon is or ever was. No man or woman ever saw me intoxicated from my childhood up. For more than thirty years no person has known me to drink a glass of any intoxicating liquor, not even a glass of strong beer.

The persons that you suspect of getting drunk at my place may be compared to a shot gun; it is not of much use without the powder. As the powder must go into the barrel first to have the desired effect, they must visit the rum holes in other parts of the town and take in the powder and sometimes such a charge that it explodes before they get where the shot is; then we are accused of selling shot that explodes. We do not believe that our preparation is injurious to the human system, unless to very young children; and we had a case one year ago where a young child, thirteen months old, lived month after month and could keep nothing on its stomach except my wine and got well and fat upon it.

It has been used in the Church seven years and I have not yet heard of any of the members that were tipsy by using it. If you will only stop the powder sales in various parts of the town, I will take care that my shot shall injure no one. As regards the intoxicating element of our domestic wine, it is very much like the milk that you and others buy, except in color and taste,—the milkman uses only one-third water and we use about two-thirds water.

As to selling either of the articles on Sunday our moral right is just as good as his, and we believe the lawful right should be as good. If it is not sinful to drink wine in the Church on Sunday, it is not sinful to sell it on Sunday, or even make it. We have heard of persons who fear a gnat but face a camel; there are many such people in these days. There are a few people who seem to think the world is progressing, but so far as my observation has been, I think it progresses the wrong way. For the last ten years the officers and directors of banks and railroads, who have been chosen into office on account of their superior honesty and piety, have proved themselves to be very much from what their friends expected. We have yet to learn that men or women who profess more honesty or piety than their neighbors, really have any more.

REPORT
— OF THE —

Road Commissioners,

Concerning the Present Condition and Most Economical Method of dealing with

NEPONSET BRIDGE.

For some years past it has been evident that Neponset bridge was no longer a safe or suitable structure, having due regard to the increased strain of modern traffic. Temporary repairs are no longer sufficient or economical. The competent judges of late years, whose attention has been called to the matter, have agreed that when it becomes necessary to rebuild the bridge, a considerable portion should be replaced by a solid filling. Concurring in this view, after careful inspection, the commissioners herewith submit in detail a scheme of reconstruction for the consideration of the town.

Neponset bridge is a pile structure seven hundred and fifty feet in length and thirty feet wide, one hundred and thirty feet of which, including the draw, has been recently rebuilt by the City of Boston; the remaining portion, about six hundred and twenty feet long, is in the town of Quincy. It was erected about the year 1805, and, when new was considered a good bridge. Agreeable to the instructions of the town the Board have made a thorough examination into its present condition.

We find, first, that many of the original spurshores, or outside braces of the bridge, have been broken off, and others are not in a condition to render any support to the bridge.

Second, that all the original cross braces under the bridge are gone.

Third, that the stringers, or timbers supporting the planking, are in many cases badly decayed.

Fourth, that near the channel, the principal piles supporting the centre of the bridge have settled from one to three feet.

Fifth, that the girder caps at this point have been bolstered up to such an extent, that it is no longer practical or safe to make repairs in that way.

Sixth, the top planking, although tolerably sound, is, considering the feeble nature of the supports beneath, totally inadequate to support with safety the loads to which it is at times subjected.

Seventh, the railing on the sides of the bridge is, in many places, so shaky, that one could easily push it into the river; in fact so little sound lumber remains that the Board are at a loss how to proceed to repair it.

In short the bridge is positively unsafe in its present condition.

The Board have, therefore, no hesitation in advising and urging upon the town the immediate rebuilding of a new pile structure two hundred and seventy feet in length next the draw, and the filling solid of the remaining three hundred and fifty feet in length on the south side of the river.

This plan has been approved by competent experts and is sanctioned by the State Board of Harbor Commissioners.

The estimated cost of the pile structure is $6750; solid filling, $13,250; total cost $20,000.

Of this large expense, it is fair to say that the commissioners think that the County of Norfolk may reasonably be expected and requested to bear a part, and they have reason to think that some contribution to the outlay may be looked for from that source.

J. Q. ADAMS,
H. T. WHITMAN,
W. L. FAXON,

Civil Service Reform.

A meeting of the Civil Service Reform Association of Quincy was held at the Lyceum Hall, on Saturday evening last. The subject discussed was a motion brought forward by Dr. William Everett, to strike out the following Article from the Constitution of the Association:

"Article 5. Neither the name nor the influence of the Association shall be used on behalf of any party, nor for procuring office or promotion for any person. And they shall not be used in opposition to any person's election or appointment, except by vote of three-fourths of the members present at a meeting called for such expressed purpose by the concurrence in writing of not less than three-fourths of the members of the Executive Committee."

This Article Dr. Everett severely condemned as fettering the Association to a condition of political passiveness, when the cause of civil service reform loudly demands the political efforts and activity of all civil service reform associations and of all friends of the movement. The notion that in the process of time and without the formation of a political civil service reform party, the people were to be educated to the demand of the occasion and carry through spontaneously the reform needed, Dr. Everett declared to be the veriest of fallacies. Unless the "spoils" politicians are opposed by an organized party which makes civil service reform the paramount issue of the politics of the day, it is idle to expect the accomplishment of the reform needed.

The appointment of Col. Worthington as Collector of the Port of Boston, an appointment made in the boldest defiance of the principles of civil service reform, and in the utter disregard of the platform professions of the Republican party, could only be accepted as an insult from the Executive of the nation to the civil service reformers of the country. Dr. Everett further declared that in the Congressional elections he should vote for no candidate who was not a tried and proved civil service reformer, and expressed his convictions that the failure of both the great political parties to grapple with the question of civil service reform, had made it necessary for reformers to disregard the party nominations. The present representative from the Second District, Mr. B. W. Harris, he declared to be highly unsatisfactory from the standpoint of civil service reform. The remarks of the speaker were in that vein of eloquence which habitually characterizes his public utterance, and at their conclusion he was warmly applauded.

Mr. Henry H. Faxon declared his entire concurrence in the remarks of Mr. Everett, and took occasion to condemn as cowardly that subserviency to party which prevented voters from "scratching" from their tickets the names of weak or unworthy men. He further stated his belief that the Hon. B. W. Harris was far from being a suitable Representative of the Second District.

Mr. Theophilus King, Jr., on taking the floor stated that he had hoped for a long time past, that the party in power would take up the question of reform and give to it the needed solution. But he had reluctantly come to believe that reform could not be achieved without a political change, and for his own part he was ready to abandon the party which failed to carry out the wishes of the people, and to combine with others to form a new Republican party which should be true to its principles, and care for something higher than the spoils of office.

Mr. Josiah Quincy, Jr., made a short and vigorous speech, in which he severely denounced the Worthington appointment. Mr. Worthington was a man who "had the courage of his convictions, bad as his convictions were," and he had assailed and ridiculed through his newspaper organ the whole civil service reform movement. Mr. Quincy wanted no better test of fidelity or infidelity to the cause of civil service reform than the approval or disapproval by Massachusetts Congressmen of the Worthington appointment. Understanding as he did that Mr. Harris had signed the recommendation to the President for the appointment of Worthington as Collector, he could not conceive how any voter, friendly to civil service reform, could support Mr. Harris as a candidate for Representative to Congress.

Mr. Sigourney Butler expressed his agreement with the views advocated by the previous speakers, and his belief that it was time to come out from the old parties and to deal with the living issues of the day. The "young voters" had been much talked about by the politicians of both parties, but in place of having living questions given them to consider and their support demanded for measures of real importance, they had been confronted with only past and defunct absurdities of the politics of an era now gone by.

The Association then adjourned to meet again this Saturday evening, at the Lyceum Hall, at which meeting the discussion of Dr. Everett's motion will be continued and a vote taken thereupon. It may not be unnecessary to state that the Association welcomes to its meetings those who are interested in the cause of civil service reform, whether they have yet joined the Association or not.

☞ The great hero and liberator, Garibaldi, the fame of whose labors and achievements in the cause of freedom and liberal government has spread over the whole civilized globe, died of bronchitis, at his farm in Caprera, last Friday evening. His age was 75 years, and his name will go down in history among the list of the world's heroes and patriots.

☞ Potatoes are advancing, and the price of many other necessary articles. $1.80 is the price demanded for potatoes of the first quality.

☞ Beef has not been so high, the Chicago Inter-Ocean thinks, since the time when the children of Israel made a calf of pure gold.

☞ It is more than probable that the Senate will adopt the two-cent rate for letter postage. It is a move in the right direction.

For the Patriot.

Washington Letter.

WASHINGTON, June 6, 1882.

The President has returned from New York, and resumed his nocturnal work at the White House. You know, perhaps, that President Arthur attends to much important official work after midnight, and does not go to bed before three o'clock in the morning. In this way he secures perfect quiet and freedom from callers, and he has also the coolest hours of the twenty-four for the refreshment of sleep. He does not arise until about 10 A. M. This would not be considered smart in a farmer, but it will do well enough for a President, as for any one in Washington, where very little business is transacted before 10 o'clock. The department clerks are expected to be at their desks a little after 9 o'clock, but Congress does not assemble until 12 M., and the early morning hours of the Capital City are unvexed except by the cries of news boys and hucksters, and the rumble of market wagons. With the return of the President there has been a revival of rumors relative to an important change in the Cabinet. There is a report in circulation to-day that Mr. Conkling will soon succeed Mr. Frelinghuysen as Secretary of State, and the latter be sent as Minister to England. It will be remembered that Mr. Frelinghuysen declined the mission to England, when nominated for that position by General Grant, although he may, of course, be willing to accept it now. It is well known that the President earnestly desires to have the companionship and counsel of Mr. Conkling, and many of Mr. Conkling's friends and admirers have urged him to reenter public life, and it looks by no means improbable that by the fourth of July, when the despicable little assassin shall have been hung, Mr. Conkling will hold the Cabinet portfolio held by Mr. Blaine one year ago.

THE WORK BEFORE CONGRESS.

It has been given out that it has been determined by the managing committee of the House Republicans to suspend, for a brief period, the unseating of Democratic members, in order to proceed with the public business, which has been suffering for the last two weeks. The remaining Republican contestants, it is argued, should be content with this course, because they now know they are bound to get in, and whenever they do they will be entitled to draw the back pay from the 4th of March, 1881. Unless the most extraordinary diligence is practiced, the appropriation bills and other absolutely necessary business cannot be disposed of before the fourth of July, if attention is given to nothing else between now and that time. The prospects for an early adjournment of Congress are not, therefore, so promising. At the beginning of the present session there were before the House committee on elections twenty-two contested cases. Of this number five have been reported and acted upon by the House, seven have been reported but not acted upon, one has been ended by the death of the contestant, and nine are pending in committee.

Attorney-General Brewster says he will go into court to-day, and assist in the prosecution of the star-route cases. He appears to be satisfied with the jury that has been selected, although he is not acquainted with any of them. He expresses the hope that they will consider carefully the importance of the question upon which they are to judge, and render a decision according to the facts presented.

Judge Davis, president pro tempore of the Senate, has returned to this city from a brief trip to Delaware, where he went to visit a former colored servant who was dangerously ill.

ADAMS.

Resolutions.

At the regular meeting of the Quincy Branch Irish National Land League, held on Sunday, June 4th, the following resolutions were unanimously adopted:

WHEREAS, It has pleased Almighty God to remove from our midst our brother Richard Gleason, therefore be it

Resolved,—That while humbly bowing to the Divine will of our Heavenly Father who doeth all things well, we feel by his death this society has lost a good member, and the Irish cause a true friend.

Resolved,—That we tender our heartfelt sympathy to his wife and family in this hour of their affliction.

Resolved,—That as a tribute of respect to the memory of our deceased brother, a page of the Secretary's book be dedicated to his memory, and that the Secretary be instructed to furnish a copy of these resolutions to his wife.

THE LABOR STRIKE. The greatest labor strike ever known in this country, occurred on the first instant, and is now in progress. Early in April the workmen employed in the iron and steel works at all the principal points in the country where these commodities are produced, submitted to their employers a revision of the scale of wages to take effect June 1. The proposition was refused in every instance. After a time the operatives presented a second scale, the main feature of which was a request for 50 cents a ton advance for puddling. This being also refused, the workmen fell back on their original demand, giving notice at the same time that except as it was complied with they should strike on the first day of June. True to their promise, they did so; and the result is the largest labor strike ever known in the country, comprising as it does over 150,000 men, most of them skilled workmen. All but two of the mills in Chicago have been obliged to shut down. At Pittsburg, the fires in every iron mill except one have been put out. A similar state of things is reported at Chicago and Youngstown, and other iron centres.

What the ultimate result may prove to be, is of course impossible to more than conjecture. The effect upon the market, however, must be to very appreciably advance the price of iron, and possibly to seriously retard building and other business enterprises. If the strike should be of long duration, this must assuredly be the case.

THOMAS'
OIL TROUGH TREE PROTECTORS.
(Patented August 9, 1881.)
This Improved Protector effectually protects the trees against the Canker Worms.

PLEASE Examine our new Protector. Below are some of the reasons why every one owning trees should use this Protector.

1. It is a first-class tree Protector, with a perpendicular front to the oil-pan, which prevents the oil from blowing out.
2. It has a pan large enough to contain oil for the season.
3. It is manufactured from heavy zinc, and will last for years.
4. Being corrugated prevents it sagging when on the trees.
5. The protectors are smaller in the centre, which prevents the packing from falling through.
6. We use tow for packing, so there is no danger of girdling or injuring the tree.
7. By using our protectors, you will get more and finer fruit.
8. It is so constructed as to be a perfect barrier against canker worms; it will prevent codling moths, tussock moths, bark lice, curculio, caterpillars, etc., from ascending the trees.
9. This Protector is so cheap that every one owning trees can apply it. It is simply insuring your trees against insects for a few cents a year.

My experience of several years in selling protectors has taught me what is required by the public is a cheap Oil Trough Protector, easily taken care of and something that cannot injure the trees, and will stop the grub from ascending. I am convinced that nothing can be fastened solid to a tree without doing more or less injury. We have applied our Protectors to hundreds of trees, where other protections have failed. Parties ordering, will please give their orders early to insure their being filled on time. Now is the time to put them on and prevent the codling moths, curculio, bark lice and tussock moth from ascending the trees.

The Price of our Protectors is
10 cts. per Inch in diameter, which includes applying to the tree and filling with oil.

Neatest, cheapest and most durable Protector in the market.

We are prepared to execute with promptness all orders. Address all orders to

EARS FOR THE MILLION!

FOO CHOO'S BALSAM OF SHARK'S OIL.
Positively Restores the Hearing, and is the Only Absolute Cure for Deafness Known.

This Oil is abstracted from peculiar species of small White Shark, caught in the Yellow Sea, known as Carcharodon Rondeletii. Every Chinese fisherman knows it. Its virtues as a restorative of hearing were discovered by a Buddhist Priest about the year 1410. Its cures were so numerous and many so seemingly miraculous, that the remedy was officially proclaimed over the entire Empire. Its use became so universal that for over 300 years no Deafness has existed among the Chinese people. Sent, charges prepaid, to any address at $1.00 per bottle.

Hear What the Deaf Say!

It has performed a miracle in my case.
I have no unearthly noises in my head and hear much better.
I have been greatly benefited.
My deafness helped a great deal—think another bottle will cure me.

"Its virtues are unquestionable and its curative character absolute, as the writer can personally testify, both from experience and observation. Write at once to HAYLOCK & JENNEY, 7 Dey street, New York, enclosing $1, and you will receive by return a remedy that will enable you to hear like anybody else, and whose curative effects will be permanent. You will never regret doing so."—Editor of Mercantile Review.

Guitean and the Devil.

"Who is this you've brought in?" said the Devil,
As he basked in the sulphurous glow;
Then he smiled as he said to his warden:
"I'll be hanged, if it isn't Guiteau!

"Go get me my book—bring it quickly—
And I'll see what his sentence shall be;
I mean the black book of worst torments,
That I keep for such monsters as he.

"There—I'll find all the tortures most fearful,
That the wickedest men undergo,
But there's nothing that's bad enough in it
For the torture of this fiend, Guiteau.

"But I'll mark all the worst in the book, sir,
You'll find them on page forty-one;
And I'll throw in a few extra hints,
Just to furnish the spice for the fun.

"His fondness for bullets we'll humor
By using his mouth for a mould;
So pour in the melted lead slowly,
And so let it stay till its cold.

"Take a pair of those red-heated pinchers,
And tear every tooth from his jaw,
And be sure that he gets in a quarrel
With my affable mother-in-law.

"In the carnival ball-room of Hades,
A white-heated floor we'll provide,
And there, minus stocking and shoes,
He can give us the racquet and glide.

"And the furnace you'll use for him, warden,
The biggest and hottest must be,
And the furthest away from my room,
For I want no such carrion near me.

"Thou beast! thou art viler by far
Than the filth in which hogs wont to revel;
Forever on earth men will curse thee—
Thou art even despised by the devil!

"You said in your rotten conceit
You'd be famous without parallel—
You will wish you were not so well known,
At least to the master of Hell!"

* These lines were written by Ben Finney, in fifteen minutes, on a wager for cigars. They are not published originally here, but have already been extensively printed by the press.—St Louis Hornet.

Farm and Garden.

Work for June.

The importance of frequent cultivating and weeding cannot be too much urged. There is no time when weeds are so easily killed as when they first make their appearance; keep the cultivator or hand hoe moving lively this month. With the improved implements very little if any hand hoeing is necessary in cultivating corn, potatoes and other field crops.

The economical application of labor should be a careful study of every farmer, especially this month, as doubtless vegetation will be very rapid to make up for lost time; a few warm days will push forward the grass crop, so that there may be a very short time between the coming up of planted crops and haying, for the necessary cultivation.

Look sharp for the striped bug when your squashes come up, and apply the remedy in time, which is, dust the plants with air slacked lime or pulverized plaster. The black bug on cabbages may be managed in the same way.

If the canker worm has not been guarded against in any other way, early this month, throw a spray of water mixed with Paris green, one teaspoonful to a pailful of water, with a Johnson's force pump, or some similar one. This is a cheap and effectual remedy.

The Colorado Potato Bugs are waiting impatiently for the potatoes to come up, in order to commence their depredations. Some hand picking may be advantageously used at first, but the main reliance is Paris green, mixed with plaster of paris, at the rate of one pound of pure Paris green to fifty pounds of plaster dusted on the plants.—Ploughman.

Gardening for Women.

There is nothing better for wives and daughters, physically, than to have the care of a garden — a flower-pot if nothing more. What is pleasanter than to spend a portion of every day in working among plants, watching their growth, and observing the opening of their flowers from week to week as the season advances? Then how much it adds to the enjoyment to know that your own hands have planted them! The advantages which women personally derive from stirring the soil and sniffing the morning air are freshness and beauty of cheek and brightness of eye, cheerfulness of temper, vigor of mind, and purity of heart.

☞ Hon. Henry L. Pierce bought two Jersey cows at the great sale in New York recently, for one of which he paid $2525 and for the other $2000.

Anecdotes.

A cute little five-year-old, whose parents were connected with the Presbyterian church, said: "Mamma, was Christ a Jew?"

"Yes, dear," replied the mother.

"Well, that's strange, now, isn't it, mamma, when his father, God, was a Presbyterian?"

"John," said Aminadad, "I didn't see you at the Methodist weight sociable, Wednesday night."

"No; I 'tended a wait sociable up at my girl's."

"Up at your girl's?" "Yes, I waited up in an apple tree about two hours for her daddy's dog to go in the house."

Said a stranger to an old resident of Omaha: "Who's that fat fellow, with a red ribbon, good clothes and a gold-headed cane?"

"Why, don't you know?"

"No; who is it?"

"Well, that's President Walsh."

"What does he do?"

"Oh, he doesn't do anything; he's a working-man."

"Mr. Boggs, Mrs. Parsons has fallen off the bridge into the creek, and she called to me to bring her some succor quickly or she would drown," said little Tommy Phibbs, out of breath.

"Well, why don't you do it then?"

"Why, I've come after you, for Bill Perkins said last night at the postoffice that since Sam. Cheever died you were the only sucker left in the village."

A tramp with some combs for sale was slinking up to the side door of a house, but the dog came round the corner and seized hold of the tail of his coat. The man was skulking out, when the owner of the house, a big German, came and asked "Did dose dog bite you?" "He didn't bite me; but he tore my coat," was the reply.

"My goot friend, excuse dose dog if he didn't bite you. He ish a young dog now, by-and-by he shall take hold of some tramps and eat deir bones right out of dem. He bides a coat now, but he shall soon do petter."

"You can't sleep?" I was bothered that way till a course of Wheat Bitters fixed me.

COSTUMES.

Like a two edged sword in the hands of the dressmaker, come tuckings which no longer confined to innocent white dresses, appear in wools, silks, and all that is akin thereto. Imagine now for a moment the forcefulness of this new element in the making of costumes, and you will see what a weapon is launched against goods of every description. Worn places can be passed off as new, because covered up by tucks: a plain expanse, often as much to be dreaded as an awkward pause, can be furrowed over by tucks either narrow or wide, run lengthwise, crosswise, or any otherwise, and from a small cluster up to a regiment. Every day now, too, gives proof that braid and cord are coming to the front as trimmings. The former put on in rows and finished usually by a bullet-shaped crochet or metal button; the latter in fanciful traceries, twirlings and whirlings that on the fronts of dresses are connected by "frogs" which have leaped into sudden life. Of course the material must be plain to show off the trimmings, and tuckings likewise are manifestly inappropriate to aught but solid surfaces. One who wants to know about

SEMI-DRESS OUTFITS

can do no better than follow the crowd to Talmage's on a Sunday. For as we all know, brother T. preaches not to the mighty but to a crowd of the semi-poor. People who if they have nice things work in some way for them. Perhaps this was the reason that Talmage so furiously denounced the buying of lottery tickets, since it is not the rich who usually invest in this way, but the poor who want to get rich. As a proof of the efficacy of his eloquence, we find some of the people whom he preaches against doing a better business than ever; now especially that Generals Beauregard and Early superintend all the details of the monthly and semi-annual drawings of the Louisiana State Lottery Company, to ensure perfect fairness. They say, moreover, that the "Black Crook" never found such audiences as after Talmage warned his congregation not to go there. Our special business, however, is not with the sheep of his flock, but with their clothing, so I return to those serviceable outfits needed by every one. First comes flannel, which in view of the popular demand, has been dyed not only in standard brown, blue, green, etc., but in "greenery," "yallery," and the new terra cotta, which threatens us as a popular rage. It is a very brownish red, or a very reddish brown color, and is seen in ribbons, hats, feathers, gloves, and I know not what. There are several shades running from pale to dark. Cheviot cloth is likewise in great demand for stylish, inexpensive costumes, and here you can choose among checks, showing indistinct comminglings of the recent browns, reds, yellows, greens, etc., or stripes in similar combinations. If you are stout, choose the latter, or if thin, select among the former, but for either, you need a good complexion. Uncertain shades are always disastrous to uncertain complexions, and unless your face shows the red and white, (natural), rely on some decided color for your costume.

STRUCK BY HATS.

Anybody might be struck by hats, for they are striking enough. It seems as if milliners could not pile on ostrich feathers sufficient to satisfy their hearts, and the result is—feathers. Plumes overtopping plumes, till they form small mountains, or trailing plumes that droop from either side of the hat till they well nigh touch the shoulders. Then how piquant three nodding ostrich tips peering impudently above the brow on one side, and adding significance to each look of coquetry. A climax of effectiveness is reached by contrasts of color, as when red feathers adorn a black hat; black feathers are put on red hats, etc., although red hats trimmed lavishly with red ostrich plumage are very stylish. Not only genuine red, but the garnet terra cotta and other varieties. These red hat and hats with red or any other colored feathers are worn independently of the costune which often is in violent contrast.

LUCY CARTER.

Woman's Column.

Mrs. Esther A Cooley, of Brigham, Me, has received a commission from Governor Plaisted to solemnize marriges, administer oaths and take acknowledgments of deeds.

The Woman's Christian Temperance Union of Michigan, in state convention voted last week in favor of action looking toward woman suffrage, by 66 to 47, after a spirited and almost heated discussion.

Mrs. Maxwell has received her commission as State librarian of Massachusetts for another term of two years. This is the right recognition of a most worthy and deserving woman, and one who has besides made an enviable record for courtesy and efficiency in the management of this important duty. The office could not be better bestowed.

It is a proof of a change for the better in the tone of the community of Toronto towards woman, and in women's own appreciation of their public responsibilities, when the year 1882 was ushered in by the hitherto almost unknown circumstance of women using their vote for school trustees. May the next move be their nomination to the superior office itself.

Mrs. Shaw, of Boston, supports thirty kindergartens, at an expense of $25,000 yearly. The industrial training of these schools gives poor outcast children an after means of livelihood and a taste for work, besides keeping them from crime. In New York it is said the commitments for crime have diminished twenty-five per cent. in five years, a fact which is attributed to the children's aid society.

Sometimes a little assistance at the right time will enable the system to throw off an attack which might otherwise result in serious sickness. Ayer's Pills should always be kept at hand, and promptly taken for the relief of slight ailments, before they become formidable diseases.

Ladies who have used Wheat Bitters say they are wonderful in cases of nervous debility and other troubles of the sex.

Diseases from Alcohol.

CONTINUED.

The diseases that we have mentioned (excepting the last) are not always caused by using alcoholic liquors. Many invalids suffering from such diseases have never taken alcohol. It is only by learning the history of each case that the cause of the disease can be known.

A great variety of the diseases come more or less frequently from the use of alcoholic liquors. Dr. Gordon, of London Hospital, says that they amount to seventy-five cases in one hundred. Professor Buchanan, of Glasgow Hospital, says that a large proportion of the accidents which they have to treat are more or less directly due to the effects of intoxication. The condition of the blood of even moderate drinkers is so bad, that surgeons very much dislike to operate upon them. Often very slight wounds will not heal. One beer-drinker died from an operation on his finger, which was festered with a sliver. Dr. Edwards says, "These diseases are always of a dangerous character, and in case of accident, they can never undergo even the most trifling operation with the security of the temperate. They almost invariably die under it."

This and That.

☞ The tailor knows how to get around a customer.

☞ The corpse of a grasshopper found in a roll of butter is pretty good circumstantial evidence that the butter is genuine.

☞ Is it because man is made from dust that he is always dry? And is it not true that when he wishes to dampen himself he has to part with some of his dust?

☞ Some of the young girls of the period, it is said, are parting their hair on one side. They do this because they do not wish to look like the soft young men who part their hair in the middle.

☞ Did you ever chase an absconding collar button down the spine of your back and pull off your boots to capture it, only to discover it giving you the laugh from back of the collar you just discarded?

☞ "Ike," said Mrs. Partington, "run down town and get some venom distinguisher; I do say, the cockpoachers are getting so humorous that I'm almost repelled to decoy them;" and Ike smilingly said "Yes, sum."

☞ A one-arm man, apparently a tramp, who one week ago applied at several houses in Pittsfield for food and shelter and was refused, was on Tuesday found dead in a field, evidently having died from exposure and starvation.

☞ Old Aunt Sukey, who lives on Austin avenue, is known to be the stingiest woman in the city. Old Mose cut up a load of tough oak wood for her, a few days ago, and she refused to pay him more than a quarter, about half the usual price. "Aunt Sukey," said Mose, "I wish you had been in the garden of Eden instead of Ebe." "What do you mean, Uncle Mose?" "Nuffin', 'cept you are so stingy ef you had been Ebe yer would have eat de hull apple yerself an' not gib Adam none, an' we would hab 'scaped de cuss."

Walnut Leaf Hair Restorer.

It is entirely different from all others. It is as clear as water, and, as its name indicates, is a perfect Vegetable Hair Restorer. It will immediately free the head from all dandruff, restore grey hair to its natural color, and produce a new growth where it has fallen off. It does not in any manner affect the health, which Sulphur, Sugar of Lead, and Nitrate of Silver preparations have done. It will change light or faded hair in a few days to a beautiful glossy brown. Ask your druggist for it. Each bottle is warranted. Chas. N. Crittenton, New York, and Geo. C. Goodwin & Co., Boston, wholesale agts. S 24po

Well-Merited Success.

A gentleman once asked a distinguished dispensing druggist to explain the secret of the almost universal demand for Dr. Richmond's Samaritan Nervine. He said that it was in fact a genuine medicine—such a compound as every good physician would prescribe for the disease which it was advertised to cure. Of course it cost less than any druggist would charge for the same article supplied on a physician's prescription, and besides, there was a saving of the doctor's fee in addition. Moreover, by buying the drugs in such enormous quantities, and having a perfect apparatus for compounding the mixture, he was not only enabled to get better articles in the first place, but also to present the medicine in better form and at less price than the same preparation could be possibly obtained from any other source. Dr. Richmond has devoted all his energies to the alleviation of human suffering. With this end in view, and with his whole heart in his great labor for the benefit of the afflicted, he has achieved marked and merited success. There can be no real success without true merit. That his success is real is evidenced by the fact that his reputation as a man and physician does not deteriorate, and the fact that there is a steadily increasing demand for his Samaritan Nervine proves that it is no nostrum, but a reliable remedy. He has repeatedly informed the public that it is no patent medicine, and no patent has ever been asked for or obtained. Neither does he advertise it as a cure-all. There are hundreds of diseases that he acknowledges it will not cure. It may be urged that some of these diseases are so widely different that it seems absurd to prescribe the same remedy. They may differ in symptoms, yet in character be precisely similar; and then we must take into consideration the fact that remedies may possess various properties. Thus, some medicines are both tonic and alterative; others may be tonic and laxative, the properties differing according to the quantity administered and the time and circumstances which demand its employment.

In the manufacture of any pharmaceutical preparation the purity and strength of the materials used, and the requisite machinery to be employed, are among the chief essentials. The first is insured by purchasing the ingredients in large quantities, whereby the exercise of greater care in selecting the materials can be afforded; and the second can only be accomplished where the business is sufficiently extensive to warrant a large outlay of capital in procuring chemical apparatus. These facts apply with especial force to the manufacture of our medicines, their quality having been vastly improved since demand has become so great as to require their manufacture in very large quantities.

These ideas are not mere speculative remarks to mislead the reader, or to imbue him with false views of the superiority of our medicines. While inspecting Dr. Richmond's establishment you would be surprised to see the admirable facilities, both chemical and mechancial, which he employs in the prosecution of his business. Everything is arranged in the most perfectly systematic order, and while to the general observer there appears to be no room for improvement, yet new apparatus and mechanical appliances are constantly being procured for the establishment.

SAMARITAN

NERVINE

SAMARITAN NERVINE

Cures Epileptic Fits, Spasms, Convulsions, St. Vitus Dance, Vertigo, Hysterics, Insanity, Apoplexy, Paralysis, Rheumatism, Neuralgia and all Nervous Diseases. This infallible remedy will positively eradicate every species of Nervous Derangement, and drive them away from whence they came, never to return again. It utterly destroys the germs of disease, by neutralizing the hereditary taint or poison in the system, and thoroughly eradicates the disease, and utterly destroys the cause.

SAMARITAN NERVINE

Cures Female Weakness, General Debility, Leucorrhœa or Whites, Painful Menstruation, Ulceration of the Uterus, Internal Heat, Gravel, Inflammation of the Bladder, Irritability of the Bladder. For Wakefulness at Night there is no better remedy. During the change of life no female should be without it. It quiets the Nervous system and gives rest, comfort and nature's sweet sleep.

SAMARITAN NERVINE

Cures Alcoholism, Drunkenness and the habit of Opium Eating. These degrading habits are by far the worst evils that have ever befallen suffering humanity. Thousands die annually from these noxious drugs. The drunkard drinks liquor not because he likes it, but for the pleasure of drinking and treating his friends, little thinking that he is on his road to ruin. Like the Opium Eater, he first uses the drug in small quantities as a harmless antidote. The soothing influence of the drug takes strong hold upon its victim, leading him on to his own destruction. The habits of Opium Eating and Liquor Drinking are precisely what eating is to alimentiveness, as over eating first inflames the stomach, which redoubles its cravings until it paralyzes both the stomach and appetite. So every drink of liquor or dose of opium, instead of satisfying, only adds to its fierce fires, until it consumes the vital force and then itself. Like the glutinous tape-worm, it cries, "Give, give, give!" but never enough until its own rapacity devours itself. Samaritan Nervine gives instant relief in all such cases. It produces sleep, quiets the nerves, builds up the nervous system, and restores body and mind to a healthy condition.

SAMARITAN NERVINE

Cures Nervous Dyspepsia, Palpitation of the Heart, Asthma, Bronchitis, Sofula, Syphilis, diseases of the Kidneys, and all diseases of the urinary organs. Nervous debility, caused by the indiscretions of youth, permanently cured by this invaluable remedy. To you young, middle-aged and old men, who are covering your sufferings as with a mantle, by silence, look up, you can be saved by timely efforts, and make ornaments to society, and jewels in the crown of your Maker, if you will. Do not keep this a secret longer, until it saps your vitals, and destroys both body and soul. If you are thus afflicted, take DR. RICHMOND'S Samaritan Nervine. It will restore your shattered nerves, arrest premature decay, impart tone and energy to the whole system.

Nothing Short of Unmistakable Benefits

Conferred upon tens of thousands of sufferers could originate and maintain the reputation which AYER'S SARSAPARILLA enjoys. It is a compound of the best vegetable alteratives, with the Iodides of Potassium and Iron,—all powerful, blood-making, blood-cleansing and life-sustaining—and is the most effectual of all remedies for scrofulous, mercurial, or blood disorders. Uniformly successful and certain, it produces rapid and complete cures of Scrofula, Sores, Boils, Humors, Pimples, Eruptions, Skin Diseases and all disorders arising from impurity of the blood. By its invigorating effects it always relieves and often cures Liver Complaints, Female Weaknesses and Irregularities, and is a potent renewer of waning vitality. For purifying the blood it has no equal. It tones up the system, restores and preserves the health, and imparts vigor and energy. For forty years it has been in extensive use, and is to-day the most available medicine for the suffering sick. For sale by all druggists.

Poetry.

For the Patriot.

The Close of Decoration Day.

My cousin and I, went out for a walk,
We went to the Common, to have a long talk,
Then to the Garden, we thought we would go,
To see all the folks whom we didn't know.

We were walking around the pond, to and fro,
Little thinking or dreaming, of catching a beau,
When just at this moment as I turned my head,
A gentleman stepped up and pleasantly said:

'It's a very pleasant evening indeed, is it not?''
Oh, yes, I replied. Said he "Will you walk?"
Of course we accepted, for what else could we do?
Without being saucy and impudent too.

The very next thing, do you think he proposed,
Was a beautiful boat ride, as I had supposed,
The moon shone bright, and the water so clear,
Why should we innocents have any fear?

But you cannot imagine, if you have not been there,
What a pleasure it is to set in a chair,
And be paddled about in a leisurely way,
Regardless of time or what is to pay.

Without a sigh, and free from all care,
Sitting upright in a great arm chair;
One of us thought 'twould be nice on the sea,
But he was more happy in such company.

Then, next to Copeland's we went for ice-cream,
Not stopping to think how absurd it might seem,
For since we commenced this naughty flirtation,
The cooling ice-cream was a great temptation.

"After that," said we, to this nice young man,
"We must go home as soon as we can."
For we all agree it is getting quite late,
It's almost two hours past the hour of eight.

And we each realize the old but true fable,
To wait for any man, time and tide is not able.
He accompanied us home and was very polite,
As he lifted his hat and bade us "Good Night,"

We wished to each other, many bright, pleasant dreams,
For we'll never forget our delicious ice-creams,
Nor the evening at least of our first flirtation,
On the day which is called the great "Decoration."

* * *

Miscellany.

A Woman's Management.

Mr. Ezra Newton's year closed on Christmas; or rather he began work with his employer on Christmas. The second year closed on Friday, and on Christmas day which was on Sunday, Mr. Newton was looking over his cash accounts for the year. "Well," asked his wife, "how do you come out?"

"I find," said her husband, "that my expenses during the last year have been thirty-seven cents over a thousand dollars."

"And your income has been a thousand dollars?"

"Yes, I guessed pretty well, didn't I?"

"Do you think it managing well to exceed your income?" said his wife.

"What's thirty-seven cents!" asked Mr. Newton, lightly.

"Not much, to be sure, but still something. It seems to me that we ought to have saved, instead of falling behind."

"But how can we save on this salary, Elizabeth? We haven't lived extravagantly. Still it seems to have taken it all."

"Perhaps there is something in which we might retrench. Suppose you mention some of the items."

"The most important is house rent, $150, and articles of food, $500.

"Just half."

"Yes, and you'll admit that we can't retrench them. I like to live well; I had enough of poor bread before I married. Now I mean to live as well as I can."

"Still we ought to save something for a rainy day, Ezra."

"That would be like carrying an umbrella when the sun shines."

"Still it is well to have an umbrella in the house."

"I can't controvert your logic, Elizabeth, but I'm afraid we shan't be able to save anything this year. When I get my salary raised, it will be time enough to think of that."

"Let me make a proposition to you," said Mrs. Newton. "You said one-half of your income had been expended on articles of food. Are you willing to allow me that sum for that purpose?"

"You guarantee to pay all bills out of it?"

"Yes."

"Then I shift the responsibility upon you with pleasure. But I can tell you beforehand you won't be able to save much out of it, and I shouldn't relish having any additional bills to pay. As I am paid every month, I will hand you half the money."

The different characters of the husband and wife may be judged from the conversation which has been recorded. Mr. Newton had little prudence or foresight. He lived chiefly for the present, and seemed to fancy that whatever contingencies might arise in the future he would somehow be provided for. Now, to trust to Providence is a proper way, but there is a good deal of truth in the old adage that God will help those who help themselves.

Mrs. Newton, on the contrary, had been brought up in a family which was compelled to be economical, and, though she was indisposed to deny herself comforts, yet she felt that it was desirable to procure them at a fair rate.

The time at which this conversation took place was at the commencement of the second year of their married life.

The first step Mrs. Newton took on accepting the charge of the household expenses was to institute the practice of paying cash for all articles that came under her department. She accordingly called on the butcher and inquired:

"How often have you been in the habit of presenting your bills, Mr. Williams?"

"Once in six months," was the reply.

"And I suppose you sometimes have had bad bills?

"Yes; one-third of my profits, on the average, are swept off by them."

"I will set them an example, then," said Mrs. Newton. "Hereafter whatever articles shall be purchased shall be paid for on the spot, and I shall expect you to sell them as reasonably as you can."

This arrangement was also made with the others, who, it is scarcely needful to say, were glad to enter into the arrangement. Ready money is a great supporter of trade, and a cash customer is worth two who purchase on credit.

Fortunately, Mrs. Newton had a small supply of money by her which lasted until the first monthly instalment from her husband came due. Thus she was enabled to carry out her cash plan from the beginning.

Another plan which occurred to her as likely to save expense was to purchase articles in large quantities. She had soon saved enough from the money allowed to do this. For example, instead of buying sugar a few pounds at a time, she purchased a barrel, and so succeeded in saving half a cent on a pound. This, perhaps, amounted to but a trifle in the course of a year, but the same system carried on in regard to other things yielded a result which was by no means a trifle.

There are other ways in which a careful housekeeper is able to limit expenses, which Mrs. Newton did not overlook.

With an object in view she was always on the lookout to prevent waste to get the full value of whatever was expended. The result was beyond her anticipations.

At the close of the year, on examining her bank-book—for she had regularly deposited whatever money she had not had occasion to use in one of the institutions—she found that she had $150, besides reimbursing herself for the money spent during the first month, and had enough to last the other.

"Well, Elizabeth, have you kept within your allowance?" asked her husband at that time. I guess you have not found it so easy to save as you thought for."

"I have saved something, however," said his wife; "How is it with you?"

"That's more than I can say. However, I have not exceeded my income, that's one good thing. We have lived fully as well as last year, and I don't know but better than when we spent $500."

"It's knack, Ezra," said his wife, smiling. She was not inclined to mention how much she had saved. She wanted, some time or other, to surprise him when it would be of service.

"She may possibly have saved $25," thought Mr. Newton, "or some trifle," and so dismissed the matter from his mind.

At the end of the second year Mrs. Newton's savings, including the interest, amounted to $350, and she began to feel quite rich.

Her husband did not think to inquire how much she had saved, supposing as before that it could be but very little.

However, he had a piece of good news to communicate. His salary had been raised from $1000 to 1200.

He added: "As I before allowed you one-half of my income for household expense, it is no more than fair I should do so now. That will give you a better chance to save part of it than before."

As before, Mrs. Newton merely said that she had saved something, without specifying the amount.

Her allowance was increased to $600, but her expenses were not increased at all, so that her savings for the third year swelled the aggregate sum in the savings bank to $600.

Mr. Newton, on the contrary, in spite of his increased salary, was no better off at the end of his third year than before. His expenses had increased by $100, though he would have found it difficult to tell in what way his comfort or happiness had been increased thereby.

In spite of his carelessness in regard to his own affairs, Mr. Newton was an excellent man in regard to his business and his services were valuable to his employers. They accordingly increased his salary from time to time, till it reached $1600. He had steadily preserved the custom of assigning one-half to his wife as heretofore, and this had become such a habit that he never thought to enquire whether she found it necessary to employ the whole or not.

Thus ten years rolled away. During all this time Newton lived in the same hired house, for which he paid an annual rent of $150. Latterly, however, he had become dissatisfied with it. It had passed into the hands of a new landlord, who was not disposed to keep it in the repair which he considered desirable.

About this time a block of excellent houses was erected by a capitalist, who desired to sell them or let them as he might have an opportunity. They were modern and much better arranged than the one in which Mr. Newton had lived, and he felt a strong desire to move into one of them. He mentioned it to his wife one morning.

"What's the rent?" inquired she.

"Two hundred and twenty-five for the corner house; $200 for either of the others."

"The corner house would be preferable, on account of the side windows."

"Yes, and they have a large yard besides. I think we had better take one of them. I guess I'll engage one of them to-day; you know our year is out next week.

"Please wait till to-morrow, before you engage one."

"For what reason?"

"I should like to examine the house."

"Very well, I suppose to-morrow will be sufficiently early."

Soon after breakfast, Mrs. Newton called on Squire Bent, the owner of the block, and intimated her desire to be shown the corner house. Her request was readily complied with; Mrs. Newton was quite delighted with all the arrangements, and expressed her satisfaction.

"Are these houses for sale or to let?" she inquired.

"Either," said the owner.

"The rent is, I understand, two hundred and twenty-five dollars."

"Yes. I consider the corner house worth at least twenty-five dollars more than the rest."

"And what do you charge for the house for a cash purchase?" asked Mrs. Newton with subdued eagerness.

"Four thousand dollars," was the reply, "and that is but a small advance on the cost."

"Very well, I will buy it of you," added Mrs. Newton, quietly.

"What did I understand you to say?" asked the Squire, scarcely believing his own ears.

"I repeat that I will buy this house at your price, and pay the money within a week."

"Then the house is yours. But your husband did not say anything of his intention, and in fact I did not know—"

"That he had any money to invest, I suppose you would say. Neither does he know it, and I must ask you not to tell him of it at present.

The next morning Mrs. Newton invited her husband to take a walk, but without specifying the direction. They soon stood in front of the house in which he desired to live.

"Wouldn't you like to go in?" she asked.

"Yes. It's a pity we haven't got the key."

"I have the key," said his wife, and forthwith she walked up the steps and proceeded to open the door.

"When did you get the key of Squire Bent?" asked her husband.

"Yesterday, when I bought the house," said his wife quietly.

Mr. Newton gazed on his wife in profound astonishment.

"What do you mean?"

"Just what I say — this house is mine, and what is mine is yours. So this house is yours, Ezra."

"Where in the name of goodness did you raise the money?" asked her husband, in amazement as great as ever.

"I haven't been a managing wife for ten years for nothing," said Mrs. Newton, smiling.

With some difficulty Mrs. Newton persuaded her husband that the price of the house was really the result of her savings. He felt when he surveyed the commodious arrangements of the house that he had reason to be grateful for the prudence of his managing wife.

Mary's Lamb on a new Principle.

Mollie had a little ram as black as a rubber shoe, and everywhere that Mollie went he emigrated too.

He went with her to church one day—the folks hilarious grew to see him walk demurely into Deacon Allen's pew.

The worthy deacon quickly let his angry passions rise, and gave it an unchristian kick between the sad brown eyes.

This landed rammy in the aisle; the deacon followed fast, and raised his foot again; alas! that first kick was his last.

For Mr. Sheep walked slowly back, about a rod, 'tis said, and ere the deacon could retreat he stood him on his head.

The congregation then arose and went for that 'ere sheep; several well-directed butts just piled them in a heap.

Then rushed they straightway for the door with curses long and loud, while rammy struck the hindmost man and shoved him through the crowd.

The minister had often heard that kindness would subdue the fiercest beast. "Aha!" he said, "I'll try that game on you."

And so he kindly, gently, called: "Come, rammy, rammy, ram; to see the folks abuse you so I grieved and sorry am."

With kind and gentle words he came from that tall pulpit down, saying: "Rammy, rammy, ram—best sheepy in the town."

The ram quite dropped its humble air and rose from off his feet, and when the parson landed he was behind the hindmost seat.

As he shot out the door and closed it with a slam, he named a California town—I think 'twas "Yuba Dam."

Don't Whine.

Don't be whining about not having a fair chance. Throw a sensible man out of a window and he'll fall on his feet, and ask the nearest way to his work. The more you have to begin with the less you will have in the end. Money you earn yourself is much brighter than any you get out of dead men's bags. A scant breakfast in the morning of life whets the appetite for a feast later in the day. He who has tasted a sour apple will have the more relish for a sweet one. Your present want will make future prosperity all the sweeter. Eighteen pence has set up many a peddler in business, and he has turned it over until he has kept his carriage. As for the place you are cast in, don't find fault with that; you need not be a horse because you were born in a stable. If a bull tossed a man of metal sky-high he would drop down into a good place. A hard-working young man with his wits about him will make money while others will do nothing but lose it.

EPILEPSY. A correspondent in the New York Sun gives the following information concerning the relief of epilepsy: "If the epileptic sufferer will carry with him a piece of common black silk, big enough to cover the face, and whenever he feels the fits coming on, will cover his face with it, he will find it a sure cure. This recipe was given to my father by an old Frenchman, my mother having been subject to fits for many years. She never had one afterward. When she felt one coming on she would place the silk over her face. I do not know the virtue of it, but do know from experience that it does the work."

Atlantic Soundings.

On Board the Steamer "Spain,"
May 25th, 1882.

Here in mid ocean I have been reading the PATRIOT, and find my thoughts led back thereby to scenes familiar to memory among friends far away. Twenty years ago this summer I took up my home in Quincy. Its people and its interests are not yet alien to me. These will never be. So it is quite natural to take up this English postal card and beguile an hour by correspondence.

This is my seventh passage over the sea. Nine months ago I was on this same steamer, battling with cyclonic storms, of which to-day we had brief reminders. The icy chill of the air is suggestive of icebergs. Some of the passengers are eager to see these Arctic pilgrims. I am not. In 1855, off Newfoundland, I came quite as near one as was desirable. Nothing has occurred to break the monotony of the trip, no death, panic or suicide, no burial, no alarm. These I have had in other trips, but I prefer the uneventful voyages, quiet, restful, and free from tragedy and trial. "Finding God in unfamiliar places," was the theme of my sermon Sunday. "Ye have not passed this way heretofore." It does one good to leave his business, his home, his church, his country, and mingle in new scenes and taste new experiences. God is nearer to our thoughts, the Bible is a new book and life itself gets a new zest and flavor. A Romish Bishop and several other ministers, who have various ailments or excuses, are among our passengers, but none seemed willing to officiate, so it was my pleasure to speak to a most appreciative audience, as has been the case four times before. Monday, 29th, we expect to see the shores of Ireland this afternoon. The weather is fine. Yesterday was warm and bright, a day of exquisite beauty. Unexpectedly desired to give a second sermon, I tried to answer the question, "Why into our conceptions of celestial scenery does the Bible introduce no more sea?" The grandeur, wealth, and beneficent uses of the sea were noted, but its instability, perils, loneliness and isolation shown to be unfit elements to picture the restful felicity of heaven. The hymns Glorias, Te Deum and Jubilate sounded very sweetly. Mass was celebrated in the steerage, and the Bishop gave those of the Romish communion a sermon for Whitsuntide. My card is full, so I will only add my good wishes, and promise to write again to the PATRIOT, before leaving for Spain.

Chicago Letter.

Chicago, May 28, 1882.

The May Festival which has been the event of the past week, proved not only to be a musical, but a financial success. There were about 50,000 people in attendance altogether, not including the chorus and employes, and the orchestra of nearly a hundred under the leadership of Theodore Thomas, and the chorus of a thousand voices under the charge of Mr. Tomlins were indeed well able to perform their duties which has made Chicago's first May Festival such a great success. The expenses were $63,000, and the receipts $57,000, leaving only a deficit of about $6,000. Compared with the other festivals, the Chicago Festival took in more money than the one at Cincinnati, and lost considerably less than the one in New York. At Cincinnati, with no expense for hall-rent, the profits were $1,500; while the deficit in New York was nearly $20,000. Materna and Campania sang with great success, receiving the nice little sum of $3,000 each. Theodore Thomas received nearly $6,000 for his services.

There was held in the Exposition building this afternoon (Sunday) a "Memorial Service." It was certainly a success as far as numbers were concerned, there being nearly ten thousand persons present. The principal feature of the service to about one-half of this vast audience was the rendering of "Pleyel's hymn" and "Auld Lang Syne" by Haverly's Full Mastodon Ministrel Band, who kindly volunteered for this occasion. After responding to two encores which were called for with rather more emphasis than a memorial service would warrant, about one-half of the audience left. Previous to the music by the band, the Rev. Mr. Thomas requested the audience to rise and join with him in repeating the Lord's Prayer; and it was no common sight to see that number of persons rise in one body and give thanks to Him.

It may not fully be known that a great interest is taken here in base-ball, but such is the case. Sunday is a very popular day with players too, and it is no uncommon sight to see a dozen games in progress as one passes through the city on a car.

I also noticed on one line of cars that that was the line to take to go to the cigar-maker's picnic and Ogden Grove; so it can be readily seen that with base-ball, picnics, and memorial services occasionally, Sundays here appear more like a holiday and far different from the Puritanical Sabbaths of old Boston.

☞ Among the gifts of a newly married pair the other evening was a broom sent to the lady, accompanied with the following sentiment: "This trifling gift accept from me; its use I would commend. In sunshine use the bushy part; in storms, the other end."

SATURDAY, JUNE 17, 1882.

Floral Festival.

The annual Floral Festival of the First Church took place on Sunday last. The afternoon being pleasant a very large concourse of people assembled, completely filling the church. The flowers were very beautiful, the most noticeable of which was a large pyramid placed in front of the pulpit. The services commenced by a voluntary on the organ followed by a song from the choir. The baptismal service was then commenced which consisted of responsive exercise by Pastor and Misses Adams, Packard, Field and the school. Selections from Scripture, were then given and an address to the congregation was made. A chant, "Suffer little Children," was then rendered, after which baptismal rites were performed upon Florence Frederick, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. Frederick Carr.

Jeanette and Ruth, daughters of Mr. and Mrs. James R. Wild.

Dwight Whittemore, son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Fenno.

At the conclusion of the baptismal ceremony, the choir sang "O, Beloved little Children."

A beautiful and impressive memorial service in memory of Dr. L. F. Butler and Miss Nellie M., daughter of Mr. E. B. Pratt, both connected with the Sabbath School, followed which was concluded with a hymn by the school.

The report of the secretary and treasurer was brief but showed the school to be in an excellent condition. Miss Kate Gannett Wells and Rev. C. R. Elliot made very eloquent addresses to the parents and children which were very entertaining and instructive. The singing was of a high order and added greatly to the pleasing and interesting ceremonies.

Nice Horses.

Quincy is noted for its celebrated schools; for its new and splendid library; for its superior granite and monumental works; and of late it is becoming famous for its fast trotting horses. Mr. Robert Bonner, of New York, the owner of thirty-eight famous horses, which have cost him $352,325, has visited Quincy this week, and intends to buy a very superior colt owned by Mr. John R. Graham.

Mr. Graham has sold two very smart horses the past year for $13,000; one for $8,000 and the other $5,000. He has now a nice grey colt, Don, which can go in 2.25; and has won $500 during the past two weeks; $250 at Provincetown and $250 at Mystic Park. It is a valuable animal and no doubt Mr. Bonner will purchase it to go with his collection of rare horses. Horses that cost $15,000, $20,000 or $30,000 are not uncommon in Mr. Bonner's collection.

FASHIONABLE WEDDING. Christ Church was the scene of a very fashionable wedding on Wednesday evening. The contracting parties were Mr. Edwin G. Peterson of New York and Miss Elizabeth G., daughter of the late Dr. Wm. S. Pattee of this town. The decoration of the church consisted of a beautiful arch of flowers which spanned the chancel and a marriage bell under which the happy couple stood when united. The ceremony was performed by the pastor, Rev. H. Evan Cotton, in the impressive form of the Episcopal church service. The bride was dressed in white satin and looked charming; she was attended by two bridemaids, a Miss Appleton of Boston and Miss Alice D. Spear of this town. A large crowd gathered at the church to witness the ceremony. A reception was held at the residence of the bride and after the reception the parties left for New York.

BADLY INJURED. On Monday last while Mr. R. Townsend, who resides on the Adams farm, on Franklin street, was ploughing, he saw that a cow had got into a field and was doing damage; he left the horse standing with the plough in the furrow and started to drive out the offender. The cow instead of going the way Mr. Townsend wished to drive her, turned and ran by the horse, frightening him, and he started on a run and leaped a six foot fence. The plough, which was a very heavy one, caught in the fence and threw the horse and then bounced and struck the animal as he lay on the ground, injuring him very seriously. Dr. Cutting has the care of him. The horse is quite a valuable one.

NEW CHURCH. At a parish meeting of the Universalist Society of Quincy, held on Wednesday evening, it was unanimously voted to build a new church, on the site where the old one has stood for over fifty years. It was voted to build a vestry under the same and the whole to cost about ten thousand dollars. Messrs. Levi C. Ela, Joseph W. Robertson, Lemuel Baxter, Joseph G. Brackett and Henry Chubbuck were chosen as building committee. The committee were requested to present plans, etc., at an adjourned meeting to be held in one fortnight.

ENTERTAINMENT. As will be noticed an excellent dramatic entertainment will be given in Faxon Hall, on Wednesday evening next, by ladies and gentlemen of South Boston, for the benefit of the Universalist Sabbath School. A comedy in three acts, arranged by Mrs. Henrietta E. Page from Shillaber's well known works, entitled "An hour with Mrs. Partington," will be rendered by able artists. Also, Morton's laughable farce, "The Two Puddifoots." A very enjoyable time is anticipated.

SHIPPING AT QUINCY POINT. Arrived June 8th, Schooner Carrie L. Godfrey, Capt. Godfrey, from Philadelphia, with coal to Cyrus Patch.

Sailed June 9th, Schooner Ellen M. Baxter, Capt. Bray, for Philadelphia with granite from Messrs. Barker & Sons.

Arrived June 13th, Schooner Helena E. Russell, Capt. Mehaffey, to load for New York.

JUNE SEVENTEENTH. We learn that most of the stores are intending to close at noon to-day giving their employes the benefit of a holiday. Mr. Defrees and Miss Hubbard will not open their stores all day. No expresses will be run and the banks and other public offices will be closed.

MUSICAL MONTHLY. Willis Woodward & Co. of 817 Broadway, N. Y., has sent us a complimentary copy of their new musical monthly. It contains fourteen pages of music, and is issued each month at the low price of $1.00 a year. Send ten cents and secure a copy.

Brief Locals.

☞ Mr. J. D. Tabor has two beach houses at Hough's Neck to let.

☞ According to the Farmers' Almanac, summer begins next Wednesday.

☞ We are sorry to learn that McDonnell & Sons have lost recently two very valuable horses.

☞ Mr. George Crane is building a good cottage house on Summer street, for Mr. John R. Graham.

☞ The days of the coming week will be the longest of the year,—fifteen hours and fifteen minutes.

☞ The 17th coming on Saturday this year, the School Committee closed the public schools yesterday.

☞ It will be seen that Mrs. A. C. Whicher and Mrs. W. L. Cleaves are prepared to do fashionable dressmaking.

☞ Some of our citizens have commenced haying around their dooryards. A very large crop of grass is expected.

☞ Do not lay awake nights fighting mosquitoes when you can get rid of them by securing some of Durgin's insect powder. Try it.

☞ Mr. and Mrs. Jacob H. Hersey leave on Friday next for Europe. A pleasant voyage and safe return is the wish of their many friends.

☞ Where's the boys? Our store keepers are looking anxiously for good boys to tend in their stores. Any good honest boy can find a nice situation.

☞ Mr. Charles H. Rodgers of Buffalo, N. Y., will please accept our thanks for a diminutive copy of the Buffalo Sunday Morning Times; quite a curiosity.

☞ The summer arrangement for the running of trains on the Old Colony railroad takes place on Monday next. A corrected time table will be found in our columns.

☞ Fruits and flowers for the Boston Hospitals may be sent, on Wednesday afternoon and evening of next week, to the house of Mr. A. W. Russell, on Hancock street.

☞ G. F. Wilson has received this week 1000 handsome fans which he intends to give away. Everybody should get one, as the hot weather approaches their need will be greatly felt.

☞ Joseph T. French sells on Monday next, at the old library building a collection of useful articles which the town has no further use for. See notice in another column for full particulars.

☞ The Pickwick Club have made arrangement to go to the Point of Pines, Chelsea Beach, to-day, on its ninth annual excursion. They leave Quincy at 8.37, and have dinner at the "Goodwood."

☞ For the accommodation of those who find it inconvenient to have their photos taken other than on holidays, A. F. Bussell will be at his room from eight in the morning until two in the afternoon to-day.

☞ Rev. Mr. Norton's society, which is in a flourishing condition, intend to erect soon a handsome fence in front of their beautiful church in the Square. The ladies at their strawberry festival were very successful.

☞ The Provincetown Advocate says that "Mr. Horace Baker, formerly a popular baggage master on the Cape trains, has moved his family to Quincy. Mr. Baker is now engaged in the general baggage room at the Boston station."

☞ The Union Brass Band of this town are engaged by the city of Charlestown for June 17th. They will play for the procession in the morning at 7 o'clock; for the Marines in the military procession at 1 o'clock; and will give a concert at the fireworks in Sullivan Square in the evening.

☞ One of the handsomest grocery wagons we have ever seen has just been completed by Messrs. Tirrell & Sons for George F. Wilson. The business at this old and favorite provision store is so large that a wagon is soon worn out; and Tirrell & Sons have found Mr. Wilson an excellent customer.

☞ The Alerts, a club composed of small grammar school boys, met and badly defeated the third nine of the Adams Academy on Saturday, by the following score:—

Innings,	1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8	9
Alerts,	1	4	1	7	7	2	9	4	-	=35
Academy,	2	1	2	3	1	0	6	6	4	=25

☞ The first champion race of the Quincy Yacht Club, of the season, will take place on Wednesday next, at 2 o'clock, off Quincy Great Hill. Mr. Jeffrey R. Brackett, has kindly loaned the judges the use of his steam yacht for the occasion. If the weather is favorable a large gathering may be expected.

☞ We were pleased to welcome once more the spicy and interesting paper called the Nantasket Beach News, which made its first appearance on the 10th inst. It has a very neat and pleasing appearance and it will no doubt be appreciated by residents along the beaches. We think age has greatly improved its appearance.

☞ The service suggested by the dedication of Crane Hall on the proper use of books, which was given up by reason of the rain, will be held at First Church next Sunday evening. Several gentlemen, some of them connected with the library, will deliver short addresses. The public is cordially invited. A special invitation is extended to the young.

The Fire Alarm Telegraph.

Mr. H. M. Federhen informs us that the committee having this matter in charge will give a public test of its efficiency this morning. At 9 o'clock box 26 in the Centre will be struck, and the others as follows: box 35 at 9.20; box 37 at 9.25; box 42 at 9.35; box 46 at 9.45; box 53 at 10.00; box 64 at 10.15; box 72 at 10.25; Box 73 at 10.35; box 71 at 10.45. Any persons desiring to know how quickly the alarm operates between the different sections of the town, can easily learn by basing their calculations on the above time.

ACCIDENT. On Sunday last while Mr. Hiram P. Abbott with his wife and child were enjoying a drive to Hough's Neck, the horse became frightened at a bunch of seaweed and sheered to the side of the road on an embankment and threw them all to the ground. Mr. Abbott held the reins tightly and brought the horse to a stand after going over a stone-wall. Mrs. Abbott was badly bruised but her husband and child, were fortunate in escaping injury.

Quincy Point Items.

An alarm for the Granite street fire was rung at the Point Friday evening, the 9th inst., but for the lack of a company, the Vulture remained in the engine house.

Monday evening, at eight o'clock, the new company for the Vulture engine met at the engine house, and in presence of the full Board of Engineers, organized for the coming year by choosing the following officers:—Foreman, T. Harris Newcomb; 1st Assistant, Frank Burrill; 2d Assistant, L. M. Hersey; Clerk, A. L. Mead; Treasurer, Walton Hall; Steward, E. S. Brown. Suction and Leading Hosemen and a Standing Committee were also elected, and the company is now ready for business. Quite a number of the men who were "not approved of," gathered near the engine house while the new company was organizing, and talked over the situation; many feeling that they had not been used right by the Engineers. While it is very aggravating to be "left out in the cold," we hope the men will take what is the only sensible course, and that is to accept the situation and let the matter drop right where it is.

The strawberry festival held in the Baptist Chapel was a decided success. The singing by the choir was good, and "Gideon's Band" sang several stanzas composed of local hits. The attendance was large and the refreshments excellent.

Mr. W. M. Stevens visited the Point this week.

The base ball players are busy every evening practicing for the game to be played the Fourth.

Capt. Mouland's family arrived from England, Sunday.

Rev. Solomon Breen of Boston, preached in the Christian Union Church Sunday morning and evening.

The Quincy Point Temperance Association met Wednesday evening and listened to some interesting facts from Mr. Walton Hall, in regard to the manufacture of cordage and duck. Next Wednesday evening selections from Longfellow's poems will be read.

On Washington street, Wednesday afternoon, we noticed a wagon marked P. Donelly, which looked as though a tornado had struck it.

Mr. Horace Sampson, the lessee of Point Holes, has kindly tendered the 4th of July Committee, the use of the premises for the game of base ball on that day, and for previous practice.

The Fourth of July Committee met Monday evening. Several reports of sub-committees were presented, but final arrangements were postponed for one week.

The Baptist church have engaged Rev. C. D. R. Meacham to supply their pulpit for the remainder of the present month.

The Ladies Social Circle held their last meeting for the season on Thursday evening, at the residence of Mrs. Samuel Hayden. Quite a large number were present. It was voted to purchase a flower stand for the pulpit platform.

Maple Place.

It seems almost unnecessary to add to your suggestions, found in last week's PATRIOT, in regard to extending Maple place. It would be an untold convenience to residents of Washington street and beyond, not to speak of the Mapleites themselves. To the latter a foot-path only would be the most satisfactory, as not a housekeeper in Maple place but would consider a driveway as almost a misfortune. It is a sweet, green spot at present, safe and quiet, and all this must necessarily be lost, if given up to the carriages and heavy teams that would undoubtedly find this short cut useful. However, pro bono publico, must be the watchword of every progressive town, and whatever the town-fathers conclude to give us will be gratefully received. But those much tried citizens, who must catch that train, and must visit the post-office first, know that the old adage, "the longest way round is the shortest way there," will not prove true in this case, these persons only are competent to say with proper emphasis, give us foot-path or roadway, whichever you please, but let it be something. "If 'twere done, 'twere well, 'twere done quickly."

Braintree Chips.

About 11 o'clock on Tuesday evening fire was discovered in an unoccupied room in Holbrook Block. The alarm soon brought the Butcher Boys to the spot, where they had a hard battle with the flames, until help from out of town arrived, but too late to save the building. It was occupied by Mrs. Elias Hayward, apothecary and post mistress; the Braintree clothing store; C. R. Greely, dentist; the young men's social club, and by the G. A. R. The loss will probably be about $15,000; partially insured. It was no doubt the work of an incendiary.

Another interesting event of the week was the marriage of Rev. E. M. Taylor, of Fall River, to Miss M. E. Bradford, daughter of the late E. S. Bradford. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Mr. Jones of Malden, at the home of the bride's mother, on Tuesday evening. A large company of friends were present and many beautiful and costly gifts were bestowed. The happy couple are now on their wedding tour.

East Milton Items.

Some twenty-five or thirty young ladies and gentlemen of East Milton and West Quincy spent the day last Saturday among the pines, near the residence of Mr. Cunningham, in Milton. Although the day was somewhat cloudy and a little chilly, yet all thoroughly enjoyed themselves in a truly rustic manner. The time was most pleasantly spent in playing games of various kinds and rambling through the woods. A bountiful dinner was prepared by the young ladies to which ample justice was done. Much credit is due the young men who so bountifully contributed to the success of the day. Let us hope that this may not be the last of the season. Q. E. D.

☞ A large estate at Cape May, N. J., comprising about 200 acres, with a frontage of nearly seven thousand feet on the ocean, has just been purchased by a company in Philadelphia, for $150,000, of which Hon. Albert Merrit, formerly of this town, is vice president.

Probate Court.

The regular monthly session of Probate Court in Quincy was held on Wednesday last. Judge White being absent, enjoying a little rest, Judge Brooks of Concord, ably filled his place, and the business was quickly transacted, with the assistance of Register Cobb.

Pope of Quincy. Lucy F. Hersey, to be executrix of the will of John A. Newcomb of Quincy.

Civil Service Reformers.

The Quincy Association had quite a spirited meeting on Saturday evening. As to numbers the meeting was small less than twenty persons it is said being present; composed both of Republicans and Democrats; and one of those present was obliged to withdraw his name; not agreeing with the resolutions passed. But the most of them being nervous, energetic fellows are bound to be seen, heard and felt, and we give in another part of the paper a lengthy account of the doings at the meeting.

The Boston dailies have the following comments:—

The Quincy Civil Service Reformers mean to be represented in Congress hereafter by some persons upon whom they can rely to serve the cause they believe to be essential to the public good. This is right.—Transcript.

The Quincy Reformers are in downright earnest. They declare that they have been "put off too long with worthless professions from candidates and conventions," and that "the time has come to take political action in support of our principles."—Herald.

The spirit and resolution of the Quincy Civil Service Reform Association are most highly to be commended. It is open to anybody, of course, to criticise the determination of these gentlemen not to vote, under any circumstances, for the reëlection of Mr. Harris. * * * Those who do not feel very strongly on the subject of the reform will doubtless sneer at the decision of the Quincy men to stand up and be counted, but from their point of view they are right.—Advertiser.

The Civil Service Reformers of Quincy have sharpened their scalping knife and propose to seek all the Stalwart tufts that may "lie around loose" in their vicinity. Harris and Worthington have been selected as the first conspicuous victims.—Globe.

GREENWICH ACADEMY. East Greenwich, R. I., will celebrate the eightieth anniversary of its founding on June 22d. by a grand re-union of former teachers and pupils. The literary exercises will begin at 10.15 A. M.

Oration, by Rev. Albert K. Potter, D. D., of Springfield, Mass.

Poem, by Mrs. Mary Edmond Haseltine, of La Salle, Ill.

Historical Sketch, by Dr. Henry E. Turner, of Newport, R. I.

Dinner will be served at 1 P. M. in a mammoth tent spread upon the campus.

Will former students please mail at once a card to the Principal, Rev. F. D. Blakeslee, giving full name and present address, so that a circular with all particulars may be sent them? Also, please give names of any who have died since 1877.

A GRAND JUBILEE. The National Encampment of the Grand Army is to be held in Baltimore, on Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday of next week. A very extensive programme has been arranged for the entertainment of delegates from all parts of the country. On this occasion delegates from Southern soldier organizations will participate for the first time. Isaac M. Holt, Commander of Paul Revere Post of this town, will attend this jubilee and participate in its enjoyments. He leaves Quincy to-day.

For the Patriot.

Young Brook's Terra Cotta Vase.

Permit me, Mr. Editor, to call attention anew to the fine terra cotta work of young Brooks, with the view of finishing the sale of tickets. I refer, of course, to the vase still to be seen at Holden's. Interested in the young man, and desirous of his success, I have taken pains to learn how far his enterprise has prospered. I find that about fifty of the seventy-five tickets the boy was anxious to dispose of have been sold. Twenty or twenty-five more purchasers can end the sale and make him happy.

The vase itself, let me say, has abundant merit, so also has the young modeler. The work he has faithfully done ought to help him forward in the art he has chosen; of course it will. But time is precious to an ambitious boy, and so the motive of all friendly disposed should be, "what thou doest, do heartily and at once." There are plenty of people in the neighborhood, I am pursuaded, who will need but this reminder to cause them to lend a helping hand. It is a bit of encouragement to a worthy lad, which, I predict, subscribers will recall in time to come with a just pride.

The tickets are but a dollar, and can be had at John O. Holden's.

Civil Service Reform.

The adjourned meeting of the Civil Service Reform Association of Quincy was held at the Lyceum Hall on Saturday, June 10th. Mr. Chas. H. Porter the Vice President of the Association, occupying the chair.

Dr. William Everett renewed his motion of the week previous to strike out from the Constitution that clause which prohibited the Association from taking an active part in politics.

He said that, when the civil service reform associations were started, it was thought the work of associations would be done within the ranks of either of the two great parties, according to the affiliations of the different members. It was thought that the ends of the civil service reformers would be attained by the exercise of moral influence; but now the opinion is gaining ground that talking has gone far enough, and that, if civil service reform principles are to be put in operation throughout the country, it is by means of elections. Congress and the President must be in favor of civil service reform before it can succeed as a national policy. This year we are to choose a representative to Congress from this district (the 2d); if we expect to send a civil service reformer to Washington, we have got to secure this result at the election. We ought to send a man who should absolutely refuse to listen to every applicant for office, and who should vote for the Pendleton bill. The latter is not a perfect measure, but if we are to insist upon absolute perfection, we must wait until the land and the water have changed places upon the earth. One reason why the speaker liked the bill was because it was introduced by a Democrat. It shows that some people are very slow indeed in finding out that there are good men in both the great parties to-day, and that there are also bad men in both. Our present member of Congress from this district doesn't believe in that doctrine at all. He believes that every dollar of salary drawn from the public purse by a Democrat is so much money taken out of the pocket of a Republican, who ought to have it, by a man who does not deserve it. Many believe that the choice of civil service reform officials can be secured through the action of the regular nominating conventions of the two parties. It is no such thing. Both the great parties have deceived the country long enough, and those who believe in civil service reform must vote for different candidates than those regularly nominated in party conventions. The speaker believed in breaking up the existing parties, and in organizing a distinct civil service reform party. Any one who objects to this course and wishes to remain inside party lines, as at present drawn, must abandon civil service reform, because two great parties have fully shown their hostility to its principles. There is no issue before the country to-day more vital than that of reforming the civil service. The old issues are dead. Civil service reform is a live topic of absorbing and present interest. The appointment of Roland Worthington to be collector of the port of Boston was indorsed by many Republicans of this state, and particularly by the member of Congress from this district. That fact alone was enough to prevent the speaker from voting for him (Harris) at the coming election. It made no difference what party nominated him, he (the speaker) proposed to vote for a member of Congress who is known to be a foe of the spoils system, opposed to rotation in office and utterly averse to lending his influence in distributing minor offices. Every member of Congress who helps his constituents to office in that way is guilty of a mean and dirty action, and those who vote for such a congressman are doing the same thing. Men are voted into high offices year after year whose only claim to consideration is that they work to secure offices for their constituents. The civil service issue has got to be met. It is possible to temporarily postpone it, but at some time the issue of spoils or no spoils must be placed squarely before the people. If the regular nominating conventions fail to select men who will be acceptable to the civil service reformers, then the latter must nominate their own men. He advocated the repeal of the article of the constitution above quoted, as such action would leave the members of the association free to act politically as they saw fit. The civil service reformers have caught the skunk of the spoils system by the tail, and propose to pull him out, without caring how bad a smell results. [Laughter and applause].

Mr. Josiah Quincy, Jr., in seconding Dr. Everett's motion, said that he believed the rescinding of the article would remove a barrier which now prevents the free action of the members.

Dr. W. L. Faxon favored the passage of the motion. The question of civil service reform is of interest in the 2d District, if anywhere. We have got to drop the Republican name, or swallow everything that goes with it. The people to-day have far more interest in public questions than in electing particular individuals to office.

Mr. F. A. Claflin said that at a meeting of representatives of various civil service reform associations of the state in Boston, recently, it was decided best to remove the section which Dr. Everett had referred to, and he felt that it was expedient that it be stricken out.

Mr. Henry H. Faxon thought that this was a good year for civil service reform, especially if Harris is renominated. He hoped that a good man would be put up against him. The speaker favored civil service reform within the Republican party; but success would never be gained so long as that party is represented by such men as B. W. Harris. We must go into the convention and try to defeat him; if he is nominated, we must bolt.

It was then unanimously voted to pass Dr. Everett's motion rescinding the article of the constitution.

Mr. Josiah Quincy, Jr., then read the following resolutions, and moved their adoption:

Resolved, that this association heartily indorses the resolutions passed by the Boston association condemning the appointment of Roland Worthington as collector of the port of Boston.

Resolved, that the representatives in Congress who supported his nomination are enemies of the cause of civil service reform.

Resolved, that reformers had been put off too long with worthless professions from candidates and conventions, and that the time has come to take political action in support of our principles; therefore,

Resolved, that this association will oppose the nomination and re-election of Hon. B. W. Harris as congressman from this district.

Resolved, that if the regular nominees for representative to Congress from this district are unsatisfactory, this association will nominate a candidate of its own.

Mr. Quincy said, in support of his resolutions, that there were many reasons why they should be adopted by the association, several of which had already been stated. We have already done all that talk will do. Reform planks have been inserted in political platforms to no purpose. The Republican platform in this state last fall contained a plank perfectly satisfactory to the civil service reformers, but its lack of sincerity is proven by the appointment of Worthington the arch scoffer at civil service reform. After such an event as that it is time to cease talk and begin work.

Mr. H. H. Faxon said that he did not exactly like the first resolution, because he thought Worthington by no means so great an enemy to civil service reform as Beard. Worthington was not a hypocrite; he had come out squarely and openly in opposition to civil service reform, while Beard had, while professing to be in favor of reform, been really a covert enemy of the movement. There were many hypocrites among those who had signed the civil service reform petition.

Mr. Quincy replied to Mr. Faxon that the resolution to which the latter had alluded, made no issue between Beard and Worthington. All that he (Mr. Faxon) had said against Mr. Beard might be true. The thing to be condemned, however, was the appointment of such a man as Worthington—the editor of a newspaper which was the avowed champion of the spoils system.

Dr. Everett agreed with Mr. Faxon that Beard was a miserable man, but it was the unpardonable sin to replace him by Worthington. The speaker condemned President Garfield for turning out Collector Merritt in New York, even if he did put in his place one of the best of men. President Garfield's course in that respect was contrary to civil service reform principles, and showed that he did not live up to the reform plank adopted by the convention which nominated him.

The resolution was then passed, Faxon uttering the only "no." The second and third resolutions were then passed, with but little discussion. The fourth (condemning Harris) was then discussed.

Mr. Claflin said that he opposed Harris, not alone, because he is not a civil service reformer, but because he is not a representative man. He does not represent the district with honor, either to himself or it. We want a man of larger mental caliber and broader views.

Dr. Everett thought it might be more dignified not to name Harris at all. He was almost too small game to fire at. He is a bad man to represent the district, and the people who support him are not the kind the speaker would want as his own advocates, or as those of any friend of his.

Mr. Quincy thought that Harris' course had been such that it was right that he should be called by name.

Mr. Faxon believed with Mr. Quincy, that Harris' name should be mentioned. He did not consider it policy to shoot over the head of game; the shot should be sent straight to the mark.

Mr. Sigourney Butler wanted to know as a Democrat, how he could do any practical work for civil service reform while his party was in so hopeless a minority in the congressional district. He wanted to be something more than a mere theorist, but he could not see his way clear.

Dr. W. L. Faxon thought the plain answer to Mr. Butler's question was that he should not take part with either of the existing parties, but to join with those who wish to see a new party formed, to fight it out on principle, and achieve final victory after a few defeats.

Mr. Butler replied that he thought the proper thing for civil service reformers to do was to shoulder themselves to the front of the present parties and make their influence felt.

Mr. H. H. Faxon believed in a man's right to act in a caucus of either or both parties, and then if neither's nominees suited him, to bolt. He (the speaker) didn't propose to be bound by any party or party organization.

Dr. Everett argued that it was perfectly possible to form a distinct civil service reform party which should eventually achieve success. Civil service reform could be made a sufficient issue on which to found a new party. The Republican party to-day is as bad as it possibly can be, and the Democratic party is a little worse [Laughter.] The only issue between them to-day is the struggle for the offices.

Both the concluding resolutions were then severally adopted, after which the whole list was passed in bulk.

W. G. A. Pattee, Esq., said that he was obliged to perform a disagreeable duty. As a Democrat, he was a member of a committee, one of whose rules was that no member should join any other political body. He was therefore obliged, although sympathizing with the reform movement, to resign as a member of the association.

Mr. Porter (the chairman) then said that he felt bound to state that he could not approve of the resolution passed relating to Congressman Harris. He paid a strong tribute to Mr. Harris, and his record, and said that he (Harris) had received the indorsement of such men as Walbridge A. Field, Henry L. Pierce and others of like stamp. Mr. Porter's remarks called forth opposition from Dr. Everett and others, and after a brief discussion the meeting was adjourned.

PERSONAL. We copy from a Chicago paper the following item, about a Quincy boy now stopping in that city:

"The Theta Alpha debating club met Friday evening. The meeting was called to order by President Higgins, who announced that owing to the indisposition of several members the question of the evening would not be discussed. * * * Mr. Henry Curtis, Jr., was called upon for a speech, the subject of which was 'What is Life?' The manner in which Mr. Curtis handled this difficult subject left not a doubt that, as an extempore speaker, he ranked among the best in the society."

For the Patriot.

The Worthington Appointment.

A great deal of indignation has been manifested by the Civil Service Reformers over the appointment of Roland Worthington, the editor of the Boston Traveller, as Collector of the Port of Boston. The ground of objection is two-fold.

First, according to the principles of Civil Servic reform, permanance of tenure of the officials should be a characteristic of the business offices of the nation. Hence Mr. A. W. Beard having been a satisfactory and experienced Collector, should have been continued in office. To summarily remove him, at the expiration of his term, without "cause," and simply to make room for another was as flatly at variance with Civil Service Reform policy as any proceeding could be.

Secondly, Whatever objections Reformers may have felt to the dismissal of Mr. Beard, were naturally and justly much increased by the apointment of the one man in Massachusetts who has been foremost in influence vigorously exerted against Civil Service Reform, and in favor of the iniquitous "spoils system."

No candid person having in mind the repeated declarations of the Republican party in favor of Civil Service Reform, and being aware of the tone and style of advocacy of the Traveller, under the direction of Mr. Worthington, can deny that his appointment by a Republican President, to the most important federal office in New England, falls little short of an outrage upon political consistency and decency. If Civil Service Reformers did not rise and protest vigorously against such an appointment they would be unworthy of the cause they profess to support.

It is not, of course pretended that the character of Mr. Worthington is intrinsically a bad one. It is sufficient that he represents a bad system, viz: The "spoils system;" that he has blown its trumpet, and "abused the Civil Service Reformers, and their cause." These facts are enough to make him conspicuously an unsuitable person for an important federal appointment. That Senators Hoar and Dawes clearly discerned this and on Civil Service grounds vigorously fought his confirmation is greatly to their credit.

There are many indications at the present time that an attempt is being made to "stalwartize" the Republican party. It is asserted in other words, that, through the distribution of the offices, an effort is making "to build up" an administration party in each State. If such be indeed the case, and if the Worthington appointment be but a step in the general carrying out of this policy, the upshot in this state, and elsewhere, may be far different from what the promoters of this scheme anticipate.

Property in Boston.

It is interesting to note the valuation of property in the city of Boston, compared with that of small towns. Three buildings in the city, the Hotel Vendome, Parker House and Hotel Brunswick, are assessed for $1,500,000, a sum equal to the entire taxable valuation of the real and personal estate in a large number of the small towns of the State. If we add to this list three other estates, the Tremont House, Pavilion Hotel and Young's Hotel, which are valued at $1,065,000, and we have a valuation which would probably compare favorably with that of half the towns in the State.

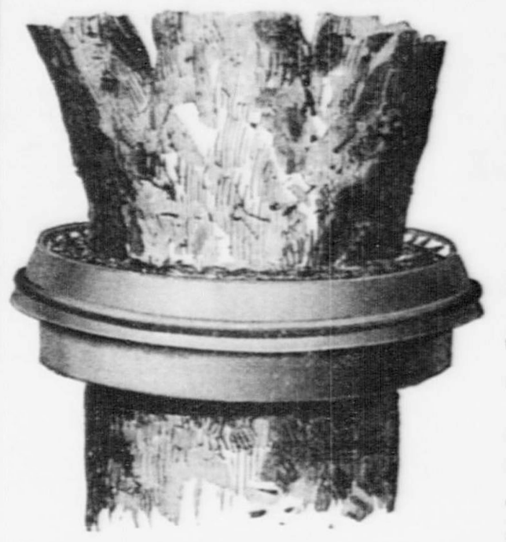
THOMAS' OIL TROUGH TREE PROTECTORS.

(Patented August 9, 1881.)

This Improved Protector effectually protects the trees against the

Canker Worms.



PLEASE Examine our new Protector. Below are some of the reasons why every one owning trees should use this Protector.

1. It is a first-class tree Protector, with a perpendicular front to the oil-pan, which prevents the oil from blowing out.
2. It has a pan large enough to contain oil for the season.
3. It is manufactured from heavy zinc, and will last for years.
4. Being corrugated prevents it sagging when on the trees.
5. The protectors are smaller in the centre, which prevents the packing from falling through.
6. We use tow for packing, so there is no danger of girdling or injuring the tree.
7. By using our protectors, you will get more and finer fruit.
8. It is so constructed as to be a perfect barrier against canker worms; it will prevent codling moths, tussock moths, bark lice, curculio, caterpillars, etc., from ascending the trees.
9. This Protector is so cheap that every one owning trees can apply it. It is simply insuring your trees against insects for a few cents a year.

My experience of several years in selling protectors has taught me what is required by the public is a cheap Oil Trough Protector, easily taken care of and something that cannot injure the trees, and will stop the grub from ascending. I am convinced that nothing can be fastened solid to a tree without doing more or less injury. We have applied our Protectors to hundreds of trees, where other protections have failed. Parties ordering, will please give their orders early to insure their being filled on time. Now is the time to put them on and prevent the codling moths, curculio, bark lice and tussock moth from ascending the trees.

The Price of our Protectors is

10 cts. per Inch in diameter, which includes applying to the tree and filling with oil.

Neatest, cheapest and most durable Protector in the market.

We are prepared to execute with promptness all orders. Address all orders to

EARS FOR THE MILLION!

FOO CHOO'S BALSAM OF SHARK'S OIL.

Positively Restores the Hearing, and is the Only Absolute Cure for Deafness Known.

This Oil is abstracted from peculiar species of small White Shark, caught in the Yellow Sea, known as Carcharodon Rondeletti. Every Chinese fisherman knows it. Its virtues as a restorative of hearing were discovered by a Buddhist Priest about the year 1410. Its cures were so numerous and many so seemingly miraculous, that the remedy was officially proclaimed over the entire Empire. Its use became so universal that for over 300 years no Deafness has existed among the Chinese people. Sent, charges prepaid, to any address at $1.00 per bottle.

Hear What the Deaf Say!

It has performed a miracle in my case.

I have no unearthly noises in my head and hear much better.

I have been greatly benefited.

My deafness helped a great deal—think another bottle will cure me.

"Its virtues are unquestionable and its curative character absolute, as the writer can personally testify, both from experience and observation. Write at once to HAYLOCK & JENNEY, 7 Dey street, New York, enclosing $1, and you will receive by return a remedy that will enable you to hear like anybody else, and whose curative effects will be permanent. WHEAT BITTERS

THE BEST AND The Richest BLOOD, BRAIN and NERVE

-F-O-O-D-

CAREFULLY PREPARED, THOROUGHLY TESTED, ACCEPTABLE AND RELIABLE.

The Phosphates of the Wheat are its most valuable food property and are, when properly prepared, the most acceptable nutriment with which to build up the system.

The Blood, Brain and Nerves are the forces which bear the strain of every day work and life, and in order to save sickness it is wise to BUILD FOR HEALTH.

Wheat Bitters are prepared, not by fermentation but by solution and are richest in the Phosphates, while the starch and impure matter are eliminated. These make in themselves a basis, to which is added the best and choicest medicinal qualities, necessary to make it a tonic and bitter. It is at once healthful, pleasant to the taste and must not be confounded with the thousand and one cheap alcoholic bitters which are sold as cure-alls. Medicine is doubly effective when used with food, so as to nourish while it corrects.

Sold by druggists, $1.00 per bottle.

VIOLETS.

Diffusing their sweetness on meadow and hill,
Looking up timid beside the rippling rill,
Catching the sunshine, or sipping the dew,
Reflecting their beauty from Heaven's deep blue.

Dodging the showers, or playing bo-peep,
Wondering if rain drops have all gone to sleep,
Thinking softly they might wash my blue dress,
But guess I won't worry for now I am blest.

Looking up brightly, the soft breezes to meet,
And they with caresses, the sweet violets greet,
Contented and happy, tho' now they may lie,
Not even once dreaming with the vases to vie.

But willing to nestle in their beds of deep green,
Tho' often they are passed, unheeded, unseen,
Tho' they may be slighted they deem it no ill,
They blossom in beauty and loveliness still.

Tender sweet violet, from thee I will learn,
A lesson of purity and from wrong ever turn,
In sunshine or shadow, in darkness or light,
Look trustingly upward, for one side is bright.

Farm and Garden.

Will You Feed Hay or Wood?

A great deal has been said and written about the proper time of cutting hay. The outcome of the discussion and experiments, thus far, seems to be that the best time, all things considered is to cut the grass just after it has come into full bloom, though many think the preferable time is just when it is coming into full blossom. As it is impossible to always mow every field just at the right moment, the general safe rule is, we think, to be all ready to begin at full bloom, and finish before it is entirely past.

There is this important fact to be kept in mind, viz., that as soon as grass of any kind has attained its growth, and is full of juices, it begins to change more and more into woody fiber, and that when fully ripe, a large part of the stems or stalks differ very little in composition from dry wood. And every one knows that dry wood is neither easily digested nor nutritious. It stands to reason that a stalk of grass cut when it is full of juice containing sugar, gum and protein compounds, and cured thus, must be more nutritious than if left standing until a part of these constituents have changed into woody fiber. Feeding hay not cut until it is thoroughly ripe, is giving the animals that which is in part only so much wood.—American Agriculturist.

The Condition of Trees.

Close observers have for months known that many trees and shrubs were very badly injured by the sudden changes of weather in October last. As the trees begin to leave out, the dead branches and dead trees do not fail to draw the attention of every one who take any interest in tree culture. The peach trees are perhaps injured as much as any other tree or shrub; but the most hardy trees we have, in unfavorable locations have been injured.

Many pear orchards have been very much injured. The leaves all dropped from some of the trees after the first week in October; such trees, when the warm weather of the last of October came, started their buds as in spring, and the blossom buds came out so thick that the trees looked white; these trees cannot be expected to furnish any fruit this year. Pear trees that made a large growth last season show many dead branches, and some grafts, one and two years growth are entirely dead. The first appearance of such trees this spring was somewhat singular, most of the wood looked well, but close observation disclosed the fact that narrow strips of bark were dead and turned black; as the season advanced dark spots began to appear on other portions of the limbs, increasing until the entire grafts indicated that they were dead.—Mass. Ploughman.

Stirring the Soil.

Henry Ives, of Pennsylvania, says that one test of good farming brought out by last year's exceptionally severe drouth, was the superior crops of those who kept right on stirring the soil, even when all weeds had been killed, and there seemed to be no more to conquer, and they were stirring the soil that was already open and loose. In one field of corn of eight acres only one acre was hoed, as it was thought it could do no good in such extreme drouth. That acre returned about as much as all the other seven. Potatoes that were tilled well gave 125 to 175 bushels per acre where those neglected yielded thirty to sixty.—Massachusetts Ploughman.

Anecdotes.

"Pa," asked little Johnny, "what does the teacher mean by saying that I must have inherited my bad temper?"

"She meant Johnny, that you are your mother's own boy."

Student: "How is it, doctor, that I always take cold in my head?"

Doctor: "It is a well known principle, sir, that a cold is most likely to settle in the weakest part."

He was sitting in the parlor with her, when a rooster crowed in the yard, and, leaning over, he said, "Chanticleer."

"I wish you would," she replied, "I'm sleepy as I can be." He cleared.

"Do you pretend to have as good a judgment as I have?" exclaimed an enraged wife to her husband.

"Well, no," he replied slowly, "our choice of partners for life shows that my judgment is not to be compared with yours."

Some one took Charlie up and asked him if he was his papa's boy. He answered.

"Yes."

"And your mamma's boy, too?"

"Yes," replied Charlie.

"Well, how can you be papa's boy and mamma's both at the same time?"

"Oh," replied Charlie quite indifferently, "can't a wagon have two horses?"

"Have you any rebutting testimony to offer, Patrick?" asked the justice of a prisoner arraigned for goat-killing.

Pat scratched his head—a new light seemed to dawn on him. "Rebutting, is it? Shure an' that's just what's the matter, yer Honor; the bloody baste butted me till not a stitch of sate waz left me breeches, yer Honor, and that's why I'm here to-day." Pat was acquitted.

Miss Lena Miller is proprietor of the Rosevelt House, Ohio street, Indianapolis, and manages it with marked financial skill.

Miss Lillie C. Darst, the editor of a Circleville, Ohio, paper, has been chosen alternate delegate to the Republican State Convention.

Mrs. Haworth, of Thorntown, Ind., in one hour's time, secured 105 names of women who want to vote, in addition to the 42 names sent to the convention.

"I go for all sharing the privileges of the government, who assist in bearing its burdens, by no means excluding women."—Abraham Lincoln.

Mrs. Myra Bradshaw commenced the publication of the Chicago Legal News in October, 1868. It has become one of the foremost legal newspapers in America.

Mrs. Smith, of Jersey City, has for some time been engaged in reducing the crude language of the Tuscaroras to writing, and in furnishing it with a grammar and dictionary.

Mrs. Ole Bull's book of reminiscences is nearly completed, but the work of publication will keep her for the summer in or near Boston, preventing her projected trip to Norway.

The Woman's Own is a monthly paper published in Indianapolis, in the interest of the doctrine that every member of our race has the right to life, to liberty, and to be equal before the law.

Mrs. Porter, a wealthy lady of Chicago, has founded a hospital for the care of poor children over 3 and under 13 years of age. It is sacred to the memory of her lost baby boy, and is named the Maurice Porter hospital.

Twelve women voted at the East Portland, Oregon, school meeting on Monday evening, and Miss Ada Thomas was chosen Clerk of the District for the ensuing year, though of course there was considerable opposition to the election of a woman.

A touching eulogy of the late Ralph Waldo Emerson, interspersed with references to his sympathies with the rights of women was delivered by Mr. A. Bronson Alcott, May 30th, at the anniversary meeting of the New England Woman Suffrage Association.

Fashion Notes.

Large ribbon bows are worn at the throat.

Partridge-plume is the new shade of brown.

Gold-washed buttons are used on new dresses.

White muslin dresses are embroidered all over.

English costumes of cloth have swallow-tail coats.

Collar, vest and cuffs of kid, trim French jackets.

Many small bows without ends diversify small bonnets.

Colored cravat bows have superseded those of white mull.

Red Turkish toweling is used for house sacks and wrappers.

There is as great variety in hats and bonnets as in dresses and wraps.

Little poke bonnets of white pique or of shirred cambric in porcelain blue are pretty for small children.

Old style checked ginghams in dainty shades of pink and blue, but vastly improved in the weaving, have returned to popularity.

Little Leghorn hats for children are prettily trimmed with bows of white satin ribbon and fine flowers and faced with a ruching of lace.

Shoes of tan-colored and russet leather, worn with black or dark-red stockings, showily clocked, will be fashionable for the country this summer.

It is the caprice of merchants, this year, to call all soft wool stuff, nun's veiling. Ladies who are not extravagant will content themselves with all-wool buntings.

Household Receipts.

Brown bread: Two cups of Indian meal, one cup of flour, two cups sweet milk, one cup of sour, two-thirds cup of molasses, two tea-spoonfuls of soda, one tea-spoonful of salt; steam three hours, or steam all day is better.

Drop cakes: One cup of sweet milk, one half cup sugar, one egg, small piece butter, one tea-spoonful soda, one and a half tea-spoonful cream tartar, salt, flour to make as stiff as soft cake; fry in hot lard. One small spoonful in each.

Breakfast cake: One cup of flour, two-thirds cup of meal, one cup of milk, one egg, one table-spoonful of butter, one table-spoonful of sugar, one tea-spoonful of cream tartar, one half tea-spoonful of soda, beat well, and bake in a quick oven.

Towels with handsome, bright borders should never be boiled, or allowed to lie in very hot water; they should not be used till they are so much soiled that they need vigorous rubbing to make them clean. It is better economy to use more towels than to wear out a few in a short time. A gentle rubbing in two suds, and then conscientious rinsing in warm water and then in cold, ought to be all that is required.

Walnut Leaf Hair Restorer.

It is entirely different from all others. It is as clear as water, and, as its name indicates, is a perfect Vegetable Hair Restorer. It will immediately free the head from all dandruff, restore grey hair to its natural color, and produce a new growth where it has fallen off. It does not in any manner affect the health, which Sulphur, Sugar of Lead, and Nitrate of Silver preparations have done. It will change light or faded hair in a few days to a beautiful glossy brown. Ask your druggist for it. Each bottle is warranted. Chas. N. Crittenton, New York, and Geo. C. Goodwin & Co., Boston, wholesale agts. S 24po

Temperance.

Diseases from Alcohol.

CONTINUED.

The wounds do not heal because the blood is so bad. They fester, mortify and prove fatal. Sores break out and refuse to heal, such as the Geneva ulcer, sometimes found on gin-drinkers. It is also met with in the blotched, red-faced wine-biber. Look now at the condition of the habitual drinker of alcoholic drinks: his blood corrupt and his body bloated and festering with disease. See the purple and swollen face, and remember that these are only outward signs of the disease and corruption within. Have you seen anything like it elsewhere? Turn back to the beer vats and see the foul scum that covers the seething mass. Try again the experiments of fermenting apple and grape juice, and you will see a surprising resemblance to these festering faces.

The cause is the same. Just as fermentation and decay were excited by adding some decaying substance, so the drinker of alcohol has filled his body with corruption and decay by continually taking this filthy poison. The living organism makes great efforts to throw it off, but continual pouring in has at last brought about this fearful result. If a man persistently takes into his body these decaying and poison substances, he must expect to fester, decay, and die with them.

"'Tis God the spirit leads
In paths before unknown;
The work to be performed is ours;
The strength is all his own.

'Tis he that works to will;
'Tis he that works to do;
His is the power by which we act;
His be the glory too."

Sometimes a little assistance at the right time will enable the system to throw off an attack which might otherwise result in serious sickness. Ayer's Pills should always be kept at hand, and promptly taken for the relief of slight ailments, before they become formidable diseases.

Digestion and assimilation are perfected in all cases by "Wheat Bitters," the great blood, brain and nerve food.

ST. JOSEPH VOLKSBLATT, Aug. 22, 1881.

What a German Newspaper Says.

We Germans are in general not inclined to believe at once in great announcements and puffs; we are rather suspicious, and often with perfect right, of exaggerations and humbugs. Our motto is, "What the eye sees the heart believes," and we therefore desire to see and examine ourselves before we speak about things and praise them. This was our idea when we heard and read so much about Dr. S. A. Richmond's justly celebrated World's Epileptic Institute, and we therefore sent a reporter to the building. We are now able to give the best information on the subject, based on a personal review and examination of the premises.

Our reporter found Dr. Richmond in his office. The doctor kindly received him, and not only answered all his questions, but showed and explained everything about the place to him. His office is on the first floor of the building, and its walls are covered with thousands of photographs of gentlemen and ladies restored to health by the use of Samaritan Nervine, among whom our reporter recognized many of his own countrymen, and its glass cases contain innumerable certificate of cures and letters in praise of this world-famous remedy.

About ten years ago Dr. Richmond came to St. Joseph. He was then a poor young man, with but little money, and no friends to assist him. He rented a small office on Francis street, and commenced the struggle for success single-handed and alone. He has achieved a grand triumph, in the face of stubburn opposition on every hand, and is to-day one of the wealthiest men in our midst. This fact alone is amply sufficient to show the merits of this invaluable preparation, even though there were no other sources from which to procure valid and reliable testimony.

But besides the money which this great medicine has been the means of bringing to the inventor, the doctor receives daily the blessings of thousands of patients restored to health and happiness through his instrumentality. These letters are open for inspection at his office, and it requires two clerks to attend to this branch of the business.

Dr. Richmond is a living example to be imitated by all young men who have a disposition to reach eminence in the world by diligence in the use of their own exertions, and besides the enjoyment of the prosperity which surrounds him, he has the satisfaction to be regarded a human benefactor.

SAMARITAN

NERVINE

SAMARITAN NERVINE

Cures Epileptic Fits, Spasms, Convulsions, St. Vitus Dance, Vertigo, Hysterics, Insanity, Apoplexy, Paralysis, Rheumatism, Neuralgia and all Nervous Diseases. This infallable remedy will positively eradicate every species of Nervous Derangement, and drive them away from whence they came, never to return again. It utterly destroys the germs of disease, by neutralizing the hereditary taint or poison in the system, and thoroughly eradicates the disease, and utterly destroys the cause.

SAMARITAN NERVINE

Cures Female Weakness, General Debility, Leucorrhea or Whites, Painful Menstruation, Ulceration of the Uterus, Internal Heat, Gravel, Inflammation of the Bladder, Irritability of the Bladder. For Wakefulness at Night there is no better remedy. During the change of life no female should be without it. It quiets the Nervous system and gives rest, comfort and nature's sweet sleep.

SAMARITAN NERVINE

Cures Alcoholism, Drunkenness and the habit of Opium Eating. These degrading habits are by far the worst evils that have ever befallen suffering humanity. Thousands die annually from these noxious drugs. The drunkard drinks liquor not because he likes it, but for the pleasure of drinking and treating his friends, little thinking that he is on his road to ruin. Like the Opium Eater, he first uses the drug in small quantities as a harmless antidote. The soothing influence of the drug takes strong hold upon its victim, leading him on to his own destruction. The habits of Opium Eating and Liquor Drinking are precisely what eating is to alimentiveness, as over eating first inflames the stomach, which redoubles its cravings until it paralyzes both the stomach and appetite. So every drink of liquor or dose of opium, instead of satisfying, only adds to its fierce fires, until it consumes the vital force and then itself. Like the glutionous tape-worm, it cries, "Give, give, give!" but never enough until its own rapacity devours itself. Samaritan Nervine gives instant relief in all such cases. It produces sleep, quiets the nerves, builds up the nervous system, and restores body and mind to a healthy condition.

SAMARITAN NERVINE

Cures Nervous Dyspepsia, Palpitation of the Heart, Asthma, Bronchitis, Scrofula, Syphilis, diseases of the Kidneys, and all diseases of the urinary organs. Nervous debility, caused by the indiscretions of youth, permanently cured by this invaluable remedy. To you young, middle-aged and old men, who are covering your sufferings as with a mantle, by silence, look up, you can be saved by timely efforts, and make ornaments to society, and jewels in the crown of your Maker, if you will. Do not keep this a secret longer, until it saps your vit ls, and destroys both body and soul. If you are thus afflicted, take DR. RICHMOND'S Samaritan Nervine. It will restore your shattered nerves, arrest premature decay, impart tone and energy to the whole system.

Various Causes—

Advancing years, care, sickness, disappointment, and hereditary predisposition—all operate to turn the hair gray, and either of them inclines it to shed prematurely. AYER'S HAIR VIGOR will restore faded or gray, light or red hair to a rich brown or deep black, as may be desired. It softens and cleanses the scalp, giving it a healthy action. It removes and cures dandruff and humors. By its use falling hair is checked, and a new growth will be produced in all cases where the follicles are not destroyed or the glands decayed. Its effects are beautifully shown on brashy, weak, or sickly hair, on which a few applications will produce the gloss and freshness of youth. Harmless and sure in its results, it is incomparable as a dressing, and is especially valued for the soft lustre and richness of tone it imparts.

AYER'S HAIR VIGOR is colorless; contains neither oil nor dye; and will not soil or color white cambric; yet it lasts long on the hair, and keeps it fresh and vigorous, imparting an agreeable perfume.

For sale by all druggists.

Poetry.

For the Patriot.

Hymn for July 4th, 1882.

BY F. M. ADLINGTON.

For Independence Day once more,
We thank Thee, oh, our Father, God,
That on our dear-loved, native shore,
No hateful tyrant wields a rod.

Fling out our banner to the gale,
Where e'er the flag of freedom waves,
The cause of justice will prevail,
Despite the power of artful knaves.

Ring, ring the bells! the cannon's sound
Shall echo over land and sea,
That freedom here a home has found,
And this her honored jubilee.

That here the stranger find a rest,
Where plenty lifts her crowded horn,
The land by heaven and nature blest,
Where all are free and equal born.

Departed patriots,—ever dear,
Tho' far above the mystic maze,
Lean o'er your battlements and hear
A grateful nation's notes of praise.

Ring, ring the bells! rejoice, rejoice,
With thanks! our Father, God, to Thee,
We lift the ever grateful voice,
For this, our nation's jubilee.

Now let our joyful anthem swell,
To Him who was our fathers' friend,
To Him who doeth all things well,
Whose loving kindness knows no end.

Weymouth, Mass.

Miscellany.

An Honest Tramp.

He was doubtless a tramp. His worn and dusty dress, his crushed felt hat, his dirty shoes, and the checked muslin shirt tied at the neck with a bit of rusty black ribbon, and the little bundle borne on his shoulder from the end of a stout stick, told the story plainly.

Presently he threw down his stick and bundle, and made a leap in the road just in time to stop a runaway horse, with the long reins flapping about his feet, and the wagon behind him swaying from side to side. The occupants of the wagon, a couple as old fashioned as the carryall in which they sat, had been frantically crying to the horse to stop, and now that some one had stopped him, were profuse in their thanks.

"Bob is not vicious," said the man, whose language and dress showed him to belong to the Society of Friends, "but two geese flew across the road, and before I knew it he had jerked the reins out of my hands and started on a run. I'm obliged to thee, for if thee hadn't caught him he might have spilled us over the high bank below there."

The tramp nodded and turned to go, when the woman spoke.

"Friend," she said, "thee has split thy coat up the back."

"Have I?" returned the tramp, feeling for the rent. "So I have. I must get it mended somewhere."

"As thee did it helping us"—said the man, putting his hand in his pocket.

"I bar that," said the tramp, raising his hand and showing with his laugh a set of white teeth. "I don't take money for stopping horses; but I thank you for your intention."

"I'll tell thee what to do friend—I don't know thy name," said the woman.

The tramp smiled again, and said: "You may call me John Paul, if you choose."

"Well, friend Paul, does thee see that white house among the trees, off from the road back yonder? Then go there and say to Rachel—that's our niece—uncle and aunt, Mahlon and Naomi Stacy, sent thee, and ask her to sew thy coat for thee. She will make it passable, at least."

"Thank you, ma'am; I'll do so."

The tramp removed his battered felt hat, made a bow rather more courtly than might be expected, and the parties pursued their several ways.

A brisk two minutes' walk brought John Paul to the lane leading from the road to the Stacy farm house. Down this lane he turned, and when half-way in it heard a woman scream. The next minute a pretty young girl, with her hair flying over her shoulders, ran out of the house, pursued by a great burly, rough fellow, who stopped when he saw the other tramp coming. The girl kept on, but, when she observed the new-comer, stopped also, in doubt whether it was not a confederate.

"Anything wrong?" inquired John Paul.

"That—that man!" gasped the girl.

There be tramps and tramps. The one to whom Paul advanced was one of the baser order, brawny, whiskey-sodden and brutal.

"What do you mean by frightening this young lady?"

"Take it easy, pard," rejoined the big tramp, grinning. "The gal gave me a lunch, and I wanted to sweeten the victuals with a kiss. There's no bones broken."

John Paul's face reddened. He took off his coat and threw it on the palings of the lane fence.

"Now," said he, quietly, "you leave."

"When I git good an' ready," answered the other, insolently.

"No, sir—now."

"Ha! ha! Suppose you spell able. Do you see that?" and he thrust his fist under the nose of the young man.

It was dashed aside suddenly, and the right hand of John Paul fell with full force between the eyes of the tramp, who fell, doubled in a heap. The ruffian lay there for a minute or so motionless.

"Thee hasn't killed him?" timidly inquired the girl.

"No, miss," said John Paul, "but I've given his backbone a jar that makes him sick of fighting. Come, sir, get up," he added, as the old man began to stir; "pick yourself up and go, or I'll give you more of it, and worse."

"I'm goin'," said the other, rising slowly, and rubbing his back—"I'm goin', boss. But I say, you ain't a man; you're a steam ingine, you are."

As soon as the fellow had dragged himself out of sight, John Paul took his coat and, finding on inquiry that the girl's name was Rachel, gave her the message of her aunt.

He followed her, at her request, to the house, where he seated himself on the back veranda, while Rachel, coat in hand, disappeared in the kitchen.

In a few minutes she came out. "There is thy coat, friend, as good as new; it was only ripped in the seam, not torn, and—oh, dear! There is that vexatious Crumple in the garden again!"

Paul looked and saw that a cow had got into an inclosure not meant for browsing ground, and volunteered to get her out. It did not prove an easy job, however, and by the time he had managed to overcome her dodges and manœuvres, and finally got the animal safely into the barnyard, he saw the farmer and his wife drive in, and knew from her manner that Rachel was telling them all about the fight. As he came forward to reclaim his mended coat, Mahlon Stacy met him with a beaming countenance.

"Thee hast placed me under obligations, again, Friend Paul," he said. "I hear thee had to resort to force. It is against the principle of Friends, but since thee had to do it, I'm glad to learn thee did it well. A big man, too, for I think the one we met with blood on his face, was the one thee dealt with."

"There was no trouble in handling him, sir. The matter is not worth speaking of. I am only too glad to have been of service to the young lady." With these words he moved off.

"Stay, friend," cried the farmer. "If thee won't have compensation for thy service thee'll at least grant us another favor, and take supper with us."

The young man hesitated, but glancing at the woman, said: "I—I am not in a fit condition for the table. I—"

"If that's all," eagerly rejoined Mahlon, "we can arrange that. Come with me." And the young man was speedily ushered into a chamber where his host gave him shaving materials, and left him, to hear more definite particulars about the encounter, in which, like many men of peaceful habits, he took a deep interest.

At the supper table John Paul, in evading minute inquiry, let them know that he lived in New York when at home, and gave them some account of the metropolis, of which they had heard, but never seen, and did it in a plain, lucid way that showed he kept his eyes open during his tramping.

After supper, Mahlon Stacy offered work, which Paul accepted.

So John took service with Mahlon Stacy, or, as he put it to himself that night, "I'm hired to Rachel's uncle." And he laughed at the same time as though it were the funniest thing possible.

The hay-making was over in three days, but John, as they called him now, remained. He evidently knew but very little about farming, but took teaching kindly. He developed a great knowledge of horses, their needs and wants, and altogether Mahlon was satisfied with his raw hand.

On Saturday John got two hours' leave of absence, and returned home with a bundle which he carried to his room. The next day the farmer came down to breakfast and asked John if he would go with them to Friends' meeting, or to some other place of worship or would stay at home. "We go to meeting, of course; but Rachel's father was 'Piscopal, and Rachel goes there. Then there's the Methodists and Presbyterians."

"I shall go to the Episcopal church," said John.

"Ah! Well, we drop Rachel at the cross-road always, and thee can get out there."

So John walked from the getting-out place to the church, which was a missionary chapel, where the rector of an adjoining parish gave a service every alternate Sunday. There were few attendants, and the coming of a fine-looking young man made a sensation. When service was over, however, and they all came out, some one whispered that the new-comer was "Mahlon Stacy's hired man," and the sensation died out.

Absalom Browning, a friend of the Stacys, was waiting in his buggy.

"Shall I drive thee home, Rachel?" he asked.

"Thank thee, no, Absalom. I came in the carryall with uncle and aunt, and they'll stop for me at the corner."

Absalom walked alongside, however, leading his horse, and talking to Rachel, and John fell behind. When they came to the corner, Mahlon and his wife were already there, and Absalom renewed his request. Rachel made no demur, for Naomi said it would relieve their horse with one less in. John smiled to himself. The aunt favored the courting.

The summer months came and went. Absalom Browning came and went once a week, and sometimes twice, and John Paul remained on the farm. But Mahlon Stacy, whose spirits had been getting lower and lower, at length grew quite gloomy, and his gloom was shared by his wife, and even infected Rachel.

The cause of this trouble John Paul learned one day from the talkative clerk at the store where the Stacys dealt, and with it got some of the family history. It appeared that Rachel Taylor, the younger sister of Mahlon's wife, had eloped and married with Gordon Forsyth, a gay and wealthy young gentleman from New York, who had accidentally fallen in love with her. Rachel had been disowned for marrying "out of meeting," but worse followed. Forsyth, who was on the downward course, soon got tired of his pretty wife, resumed dissipation, and was drowned while drunk, two years afterward, leaving his widow with a one-year-old child. Rachel did not long survive her husband, who proved to have been at his death bankrupt. He had managed to get Mahlon Stacy, who believed in him, to become bondsman in a case involving, it afterwards turned out, a questionable transaction. Mahlon paid the judgment, but was obliged to mortgage the farm, which had been in the family for four generations. He adopted the little Rachel, sent her to the West Town school to be educated, and bit by bit accumulated money enough to discharge the mortgage. The bank in which he kept his savings broke, and he not only lost his store, but was unable to meet the interest for a year. The mortgage was in other hands—a rich New Yorker held it—and proceedings to foreclose had already been begun. If Rachel married Absalom Browning, who was rich himself and a rich man's son, there would be no difficulty. "They say that Rachel hangs back," continued the clerk, "but I rather guess she'll give in at last. That's the way Mahlon'll pull through, in my judgment."

John came home after hearing all this, and found Absalom Browning there. The young Quaker was got up quite smartly—in plain clothes, to be sure, but his shad-bellied coat was of the finest olive-colored broadcloth, and his broad-brimmed hat of the very best beaver. He remained to supper, and was treated with marked consideration by the farmer and his wife. Rachel seemed to be a little embarrassed. John glanced at her a little curiously, but she avoided his eye. The hired man went out after he had finished his supper, attended to the horses and cattle, and this done, came into the house.

The next morning John went out early to see to the horses and cattle. When he returned to breakfast, he observed that Mahlon was curt and monosyllabic of speech, Naomi gloomy and Rachel distressed. John ate his meal silently, and then went to the field with Mahlon. But he soon made an excuse to return to the house. Rachel was alone there, seated with her face buried in her hands, and so intent on her thoughts that she did not hear him come in.

"What is the trouble, Rachel?" he asked.

The girl started up, and the blood rushed to her face, but she made no reply.

"Is it to be a wedding?" he continued.

"John Paul, thee's—thee's—"

"Or did you send Absalom B. about his business last night?"

"What is that to thee, John? Uncle is displeased with me, aunt is sorry, and now thee must—What is it to thee whether I have or not?"

"Rachel," said he, taking her trembling hand, and retaining it in spite of her effort to withdraw it, "it is everything to me, for I love you dearly."

The eyes of the girl filled with a sudden light.

"Thee! thee love—me?"

John read the answer to his question before he put it, and drew the sobbing Rachel to his breast.

How long they stood there neither could tell, but at the sound of Mahlon Stacy's heavy step on the veranda, Rachel made her escape.

"What keeps thee in the house, John?" inquired the farmer, entering the room. "We have work to get through with."

"Let that pass for a moment, Mr. Stacy. I have something to say. Who holds now the mortgage on the farm?"

"Why does thee ask?"

"From no idle curiosity. What is his name and where does he live?"

"His name is Frobisher, and he lives in New York. It is his lawyer, Woodford, who has his business in charge."

"Woodford! Not Charles Woodford? So! In that case, make yourself perfectly easy. I can arrange all that for you."

"Is thee serious, John Paul? Does thee think Frobisher would do it for thee?"

"Why not! He never refused me anything I wanted yet from the time we went to the same school."

"Thee must be out of thy mind, John. This Frobisher, they say, is worth a million of dollars. Does thee expect to influence him? If I didn't know thy habits, I should say thee'd been drinking."

"The man you speak of is worth more than they say, in estate, but he'll give you all the time you need. Let me see. This is nearly eight. The mail closes at ten. I have time to hitch up and go to the post-office in good time. You'll have an answer by tomorrow evening;" and without farther words he went out, harnessed the horse and drove to the village, leaving Stacy staring in amazement. When he came back, the farmer was still in the house with Naomi and Rachel, discussing John's freak. During that day and next morning Mahlon would glance at John at times with an expression made up of hope and suspicion of John's sanity.

At noon next day John quietly hitched up the horse again, and without asking leave, drove off, with a reassuring smile to Rachel's inquiring looks as he went. This was hours before the mail was due, and John had on his Sunday clothes, too. He did not get back till supper time, and then handed a letter to Mahlon, in the presence of the rest. It was post-marked "New York," and the farmer opened it with trembling hands.

"John," he said, after he had read it and handed it to Naomi, "thee made no vain boast. Woodford says I can have all the time I want. Thee has done me a great service. I only wish I knew how to repay thee."

"Perhaps you can," said John, smiling and taking Rachel by the hand. "Suppose you let me take care of this young lady in the future?"

"Has thee thought about the means to support a wife?" inquired Naomi, with a last flutter of expiring loyalty to Absalom Browning. "There need be no trouble on that score," returned John. But I have a confession to make. I have in some measure deceived you. When you asked my name, I just said—John Paul."

"And has thee been using a name to which thee has no right?" demanded Naomi, severely.

"I have a right to the name, but there is more of it. I am John Paul Frobisher."

"Frobisher!" exclaimed Mahlon, as light broke in on him. Then there is—"

"I am, or rather was, the holder of your mortgage. I say was"—drawing a paper from his breast pocket and handing it to Naomi. "I have been to West Chester and made an assignment to your wife. I hope she will be a lenient creditor to you, Mahlon. You see I had been taking a pedestrian tramp for health and amusement, and you came across me just as I had run sufficiently to seed in the journey, and was about to take the cars home. This face of Rachel's attracted me, and she's the captive of my bow and spear, anyhow. I won her by fair fight," said he laughing.

They all sat down to supper. The farmer said his customary grace with great unction—"For what we are to receive, the Lord make us truly thankful!" and John, whose hand had found that of Rachel somehow under the table-cloth, responded with a fervent "Amen!"

Washington Letter.

WASHINGTON, June 19, 1882.

It has cost millions to make Washington beautiful, to make smooth her streets, to adorn her many parks, to fill her open squares with fountains and statuary; but no American, in the better sense of the word, can look on this city without a feeling of pride in the beauty of the Capital of his country. The trees, most of which have been planted within the last eight years, are now sufficiently large to shade the streets and relieve the sidewalks from that intense heat that has heretofore made Washington intolerable during the summer months.

From a caravansari of government clerks, lobbyists, and every species of adventurer which composed the Washington of the years immediately following the war, the Capital has grown to be a large city of beautiful residences. Retired Army and Navy officers, successful business men, men of prominence in literature, in science, and in art, from all parts of the country, have recognized the desirability of Washington as a winter residence, and, after having spent a season or two in the hotels, are now building beautiful residences. The Capital certainly surpasses any city in the world of its population in tasteful houses with modern conveniences. Besides the palatial mansions that have been built by the Blaines, the Camerons, the Robesons, and others of princely fortune, very many solid and comfitable homes of lesser pretention now occupy the places where negro shanties marred the landscape ten and even five years ago. True there are many good houses that have an existence antedating the war, and some of these, rich in historic association, attract the attention of the visitor with an interest that the mere triumphs of modern architecture cannot rival. The rooms occupied by your correspondent and in which your letters have been written during the last year, were occupied by Alex. Stephens and Robert Toombs in a time that now seems like ancient history.

If the places of government clerks, who compose so important a part of the population of Washington, were made secure and independent of political mutation, the city would gain a large increase in its substantial population. As it is now, a large proportion of these clerks are mere transient residents, afraid to buy homes for the reason that they feel how uncertain is their tenure of office under the rule that "to the victors belong the spoils" of office. A great many clerks, however, have comfortable houses of their own. The savings from their salaries are not very large, but some of them have managed to buy or build homes that are models of modest comfort and not without the graces of tasteful architecture. In certain localities of the city there are what might be called civil service employe colonies, where blocks of small cosy houses have been built just suited to the purse of the average government clerk. The remuneration of the clerks in the government offices varies from $650 to $2000 per annum. The latter amount is given only to those who occupy important positions, or who have experience in the complicated routine of office work. The average American citizen does not, perhaps, know that this Government, in all the details of its stupendous bureauarcy is managed by the eighteen-hundred-dollar clerks, but it is so. These clerks prepare the documents which chiefs of the bureau and cabinet officers sign, often without knowing what they contain and without the ability to understand them until explained by the chief clerk.

ADAMS.

☞ A woman who does all her own housework, attends to seven children, and turns her dresses half a dozen times to make both ends meet, may be a good Christian, but when a lady in a $1000 carriage and a $500 dress halts at the door and asks her to subscribe to some charitable object, she can hardly be expected to act and talk like one.

Isabel Irene: "Please shut your eyes for a moment, mamma."

Mamma: "Why?"

Isabel Irene: "You said you never wanted to see me eat sugar, and I'm going to take a piece now."

The Quincy Patriot.

SATURDAY, JUNE 24, 1882.

Town Meeting.

A special meeting of the voters of Quincy is called for Saturday evening next, at 7 1-2 o'clock. There is thirteen articles in the warrant, and the substance of them is—

To see if the town will choose three Park Commissioners, and instruct them to take a part of the Woodward farm, at Black's Creek and lay the same out as a Public Park, and authorized the Treasurer to borrow the money to pay for the same.

To take some actions on the reports of the Road Commissioners in relation to street lights, and the building of the Neponset Bridge. The facts in the matter have been very ably stated in the reports of the Commissioners, recently published in the columns of the PATRIOT. We hope our citizens have read the reports, and if so they are prepared to act intelligently. It appears as though the town should put a check upon the expenses of lighting our streets, which have been creeping up from year to year at a rapid rate. The expenses this year is estimated at $3789.61.

Neponset bridge undoubtedly needs rebuilding; now the main question is will the town rebuild it on piles as it has stood for the past seventy-five years, or fill in solid a portion of it, (350 feet,) at a cost of $13,250. The cost of filling is more expensive than piling, but once well done it will require little or no repairing, when a plank bridge needs constant care. The whole cost of re-building is estimate by the Commissioners at $20,000.

The next article is to see if the town will dispose of the poor house and sheds near the Mount Wollaston Cemetery, which they will undoubtedly vote to do.

The next is to relocate Sea street, at the point on Hough's Neck known as the "Bit."

The next two articles are in reference to the location of the new steam fire engine. The town voted at the annual meeting to place it in the old stone schoolhouse on School street, but it is now thought not fit for it; and the town is asked to lease the old library building owned by Mr. Thomas A. Whicher. We believe our citizens in the centre and south parts of the town should be liberal in the matter; not place it directly under their own roof, without any regard to the property owners at Wollaston, Atlantic and Squantum. The citizens from all parts of the town are obliged to pay for the same, and also its yearly expenses; it should, therefore, be located so as to accommodate all parts of the town if possible.

The idea of locating the steamer within half a mile of the Braintree line, and have no regard for other parts of the town, three or four miles away, is wrong. It should be placed as far north as the Butler farm, and it will then be at any fire at South Quincy as soon as steam can be generated to work it, and give as good service for the Point and West, and better for Wollaston and Atlantic, than if it was placed anywhere at South Quincy.

Raid on Liquor Sellers.

On Friday evening, the 16th inst., officers Thomas, Manning and Pratt of the District Police, assisted by officers Faxon, Locke, Hanson, Ripley, Harris and Spear of Quincy, armed with search warrants, visited the following resorts, where intoxicating fluids were supposed to be dispensed, viz: Peter Welsh, Frederick Hardwick, Charles F. Jones, Mary Powers and John Swithin.

The officers found dry pickings except at Swithin's, where the following assortment was found: 2 1-2 gallons rum; 2 1-2 gallons whiskey; 40 gallons ale and 29 bottles lager beer, which was taken charge of by officer Locke. No opposition was made except by Mr. Hardwick who refused to allow the officers to enter a portion of his premses but the officers speedily forced open the door; they did not, however, find anything to pay for the trouble.

Officers Furnald and Langley seized in this town on the same evening, from the express wagon of Thomas Cullen of Weymouth, 114 gallons of ale, rum and whiskey, for illegally transporting the same. This is the largest seizure that has been made this season.

The move against rumsellers having commenced, it is expected that there will be lively work done within a few weeks.

PASSED AWAY. The widow of the late Josiah Adams died on Sunday last, at the residence of her son, at the advanced age of 87 years, 5 months and 3 days. For over fifty years she, with her husband, resided in the house on Hancock street, next to the Robertson House. For a few years past, the old couple have made their home with their son, Bryant N. Adams, at Quincy Neck. In January last Mr. Adams died. This venerable couple had journeyed for over sixty years together; since his death she has been gradually failing. In faith, she was a Spiritualist and she often expressed a wish to go to her loved ones who were waiting for her on the other shore. Her funeral took place on Monday.

ENTERTAINMENT. Quite a large audience assembled in Faxon Hall, on Wednesday evening to listen to a dramatic entertainment given by some ladies and gentlemen from South Boston, for the benefit of the Universalist Sabbath School of this town. A comedy in three acts, entitled "An hour with Mrs. Partington," arranged by Mrs. Henrietta E. Page from Shillaber's works, was very finely rendered, and created considerable amusement. It was followed by the laughable farce, The Two Puddifoots."

EXHIBITION OF DRAWINGS. During the past year the study of drawing has been one of the regular exercises in the public schools of this town. Already great interest has been awakened among the pupils. Work done by them during the past twenty-five weeks will be on exhibition at the Town Hall, commencing June 28th and continuing during the remainder of the week. The attention of parents is especially called to the practical direction which the instruction has taken.

A NICE STORE. Mr. Charles B. Tilton, our young and enterprising merchant on Hancock street, has had his store enlarged and improved, and it is now one of the best in Quincy. His stock of garden tools and hardware is immense, and he is always ready to give his customers good bargains. We can with pleasure recommend our citizens to give him a call, as we feel confident that they will be well used, and get good articles at a reasonable price.

Brief Locals.

☞ Rev. Mr. Lawton will preach at the Quincy Home to-morrow.

☞ Children's Day to-morrow at the Universalist Church, at 10.30 A. M.

☞ Mr. Stephen Penniman lost a nice horse last week. He valued the animal at over $200.

☞ Joseph T. French has one hundred acres of salt grass, for sale on the Mount Wollaston farm.

☞ Mr. and Mrs. Jacob H. Hersey left home Friday for New York, and sailed to-day for Europe.

☞ Concert of the Sabbath School of the Congregational Church will be held to-morrow evening at 7 o'clock.

☞ The closing vesper services at the First Church, before the summer vacation, will be held to-morrow evening.

☞ E. F. E. Thayer sells this afternoon about 25 acres of grass, on the farm of W. H. Howard, on Elm street, Braintree.

☞ John Q. A. Field has been appointed Administrator of the estates of Dolly Ann and Thompson Baxter, late of Quincy.

☞ The closing exercises of Adams Academy will take place on Tuesday next in the School-house at 10.45. Friends are cordially invited.

☞ Among a gang of hands passing through Hancock street on Wednesday were several who had been imbibing tanglefoot. Where did they get it?

☞ Mrs. Ruhamah Lane, of Bedford, died on Monday last, aged 94 years, 1 month and 19 days. She was a relative of Mr. John Page of this town.

☞ Fruit and flowers for the Boston hospitals may be sent, on Wednesday afternoon and evening of next week, to the house of Mr. L. W. Anderson, Granite street.

☞ We are sorry to learn that Miss Frances Torrey is sick and confined to bed. Any one indebted to her would confer a favor by sending the money, as she is really in need of it.

☞ Warren D. Higgins is erecting a store for Dr. Charles S. French, on land adjoining Hick's market, which we learn is to be occupied by Mr. Samuel W. Spear, furniture dealer.

☞ Mr. Jeffrey R. Brackett has invited Rev. Mr. Cotton and the Bible Class connected with Christ Church, to enjoy a sail down the harbor in his handsome steam yacht this morning.

☞ Apothecaries and others in want of show cases and other useful articles, should read the notice of a sale at the drug store of Alfred Wyman at Weymouth. Joseph W. Lombard is able to give any particulars desired.

☞ A grand reunion of teachers, adult scholars and others connected with the Evangelical Sunday Schools in the state, will be held at Cottage City, Martha's Vineyard, on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday of next week.

☞ A building that was being moved through Franklin street the present week, came in collision with the electric fire alarm wire, and the large cedar post at the junction of School and Franklin street was broken off in consequence.

☞ The little boy, son of William O'Conner injured by being run over by the W. M. French Hose Carriage at the alarm of fire on the 9th inst., has so far recovered from his injuries as to be able to attend school, which he did on Tuesday last.

☞ Among the thousands who visited Barnum's circus in Boston, this week, were Mr. Joseph W. Robertson of Quincy and Mr. George Bass of East Milton. It is the first time these gentlemen have visited a circus for twenty years; still they seemed to be enthusiastic admirers of Jumbo.

☞ A great sale of grass and household furniture belonging to the estate of Albert Tirrell, takes place at Marshfield on Thursday. Joseph W. Lombard is the auctioneer and he would be pleased to see Quincy well represented as good bargains may be expected.

☞ The Citizens Gas Light Company of this town is having a new gasometer built. The old one was not large enough to accommodate the demands for gas,—it held 12,000 feet; and the new one will hold about 25,000 cubic feet. Mr. Quincy A. Faunce is doing the brick work.

☞ Among those who took part in the great parade of "Antiques and Horribles," at Charlestown, on the morning of the 17th, was Mr. Galen Bowditch of Quincy, who filled the office of Assistant Adjutant General, in a highly creditable manner, so says Mr. Thomas Plumer and others who were present from this place.

☞ The test given the fire alarm last Saturday afternoon was a decided success, except in the case of the bell striker on the Unitarian Church which failed to work on account of not being properly adjusted. The difficulty has been remedied and the whole line will be tested again to-day, and probably be ready for actual use by the first of July.

☞ Mr. H. E. Holt, teacher of singing in the Boston Schools, will give an exhibition of the work that has been under his direction by the teachers and pupils of the Coddington School, at the Town Hall, this morning at 9 o'clock. The public is cordially invited and those who attend will doubtless be amply repaid for the time spent in witnessing these interesting exercises.

☞ The services at the First Church, last Sabbath evening, on the proper use of books, did not attract a large audience. The exercises opened with singing, followed by prayer by Rev. Samuel Kelley, interesting remarks by Rev. Mr. Wilson, L. W. Anderson, F. A. Claflin and Charles A. Foster. Mr. Wilson paid a high tribute to the late Dr. James Morison and his brother, as gentlemen who had made good use of books.

☞ Rev. Mark Trafton, who resides at Wollaston, writes the following to Zion's Herald, respecting the loss of his wife:—"The light of my home is extinguished; my earthly hopes are dead. My many friends write me kind letters, but I never before realized how empty and forceless are the words I have so often addressed to bereaved hearts. How empty seems my house! I wander about my garden, and look up, but that face which through the window always smiled an approval is absent. I have no heart to do more; she can no more take pleasure in these swelling buds and opening blossoms; the life of all this is gone!"

Quincy Point Items.

The committee to arrange for a celebration the 4th of July met Monday evening at the residence of Mr. T. H. Newcomb. The programme as decided upon will consist of exercises in the Christian Union Church, commencing at 10.30 A. M., comprising reading of Scriptures and prayer by Rev. G. B. Lawton, reading of the Declaration of Independence by Mr. F. M. King, an oration by Mr. H. M. Federhen, and singing of several patriotic pieces by a large chorus. The thirteen original states will be represented by scholars from the Washington School. At 1.30 P. M. there will be a tub race on Town River, near the foot of Washington court. At 3.30 P. M. there will be a game of base ball,—married versus single; and at 8.30 P. M. will be given a large and attractive exhibition of fire works (from the laboratory of E. M. Hunt) in the ship yard at the Point.

The newly organized Vulture Engine Company will meet this evening at 7.30 o'clock to play the engine.

The weekly meeting of the Quincy Point Temperance Association, held Wednesday evening, was devoted to reading selections from Longfellow's poems.

Score two more victories (Nos. 3 and 4) for the "Amy;" one, a second prize at the Boston regatta the 17th; the other, the winning of the first race of the championship series of the Quincy Yacht Club. We were sorry to see the "Amy" was not entered in the Boston regatta from the Quincy Club instead of from the Hull Club. Perhaps the craft was indignant and therefore took second prize instead of first, as heretofore.

A rehearsal by the chorus which will sing on the Fourth took place Thursday evening.

We hear there will be a base ball match at Point Holes this afternoon, between a Point nine and one from Whicher's shop.

To-morrow will be observed as "Children's Day" at the Christian Union Church, in the morning Rev. G. B. Hastings will preach a sermon especially adapted to the children, and in the evening there will be a Sabbath School concert.

We understand the Pine Point House and the grove at North Weymouth are soon to be re-opened to the public.

Rev. Samuel Kelley will preach at the Baptist Chapel to-morrow evening.

Atlantic.

After each pay day at Moon Island, a large number of intoxicated persons are about Atlantic, at all hours of the day and night.

During this time Officer Hunt, has done good service in keeping (that could walk,) on the move toward Squantum. He was obliged to arrest four, of "one haul" on Tuesday last. We are pleased to see that Officer Hunt has been authorized to perform regular parol duty in this village and Squantum, as required.

Work upon Atlantic street repairs has been stopped for the present. It is hoped that the Road Commissioners will bear in mind, that there is no sidewalk near the railroad bridge, upon this street.

The gutters on Billings street and Contest avenue have been dug out, and they needed it too.

It seems to be the general opinion that two fire alarm boxes are needed in Atlantic.

"In case of fire in either of the 60 or 70 houses on the plains, where will the new steamer find an available supply of water" is a question frequently asked.

For the Patriot.

Hough's Neck.

This weather is making business lively at the beach.

Mr. Tuckerman entertained a large picnic from Dorchester on the Seventeenth. There was also a picnic at Mears'.

Dr. Deering's cottage, also Mr. Shaw's, is now occupied by a party of young ladies from Braintree.

The Cooking Class from the Boston School of Cooking, of which Mrs. Taber was a member, spent the 22d at the Linden House.

Mr. Chapman's house is receiving repairs and will soon be occupied.

The Albion House, with its new coat of paint, presents a neat appearance.

Master Ray Taber is at home for his vacation, and will once more commence his occupation as news boy, and the PATRIOT will be his first venture this year, and patrons will receive prompt attention.

Boarders at the Linden now number eleven, and rooms are fast being engaged.

It is lively at Rock Island. Buildings are fast being erected, and every one is in a hurry. The poor weather has kept everything backward.

E.

"THE FISHERMEN'S OWN BOOK." This is the quaint title of a volume of nearly three hundred pages, which we have received from the publishers, Messrs. Procter Brothers, of Gloucester. It is finely printed, handsomely illustrated, and contains valuable statistics of the fisheries, among which is a table of lost men and vessels from that port since 1830, when the Georges fishery commenced, numbering 2351 lives and 428 vessels, valued at $1,862,710; also a table giving price of mackerel for the past 52 years. A list of the men and vessels lost since 1873, is also published together with notable trips, quick passages, old-time fisheries, trips to Georges, to Grand Banks, and mackerel trips, written by the fishermen expressly for this volume. It seems to fill a special place, and in every respect is a book well worth owning. Bound copies, $1.50 (15 cents postage); paper covers, $1.00 (10 cents postage). Address Procter Brothers, Cape Ann Advertiser office, Gloucester, Mass.

MELVILLE GARDEN. In calling attention to the advertisement of this delightful pleasure resort at Downer Landing, Hingham harbor, we may say that we believe there is no place in New England, we doubt if in this country, which presents such a perfect combination of attractions of seaside and woodland, of the beauties of nature and of art. While within five minutes' walk of the beautiful harbor of Hingham, and within hearing of the strains from Edmands' superb band at the Music hall, one may be as secluded in the woods as in the forests of Maine. For a regular old time picnic of a church society or a private party give us Melville Garden.

Quincy Yacht Club

The first champion regatta by this club occurred on Wednesday last. The day was lovely and there was a nice westerly breeze, which made the yachts skip over the water in good style. Through the kindness of Mr. Jeffrey R. Brackett, the steam yacht, Gulnare, was placed at the disposal of the Judges for the occasion. The Gulnare, is a handsome steam yacht, built three years ago in a first-class manner, for Mr. Peabody of Boston for $9,000, and was purchased this season by Mr Brackett, at a rare bargain. It is thoroughly equipped, and has all the conveniencies desired to make it comfortable for a trip, either for day or night.

Vice Com. Porter, Secretary Furnald, the Judges, guests and reporters were taken aboard the steam yacht at Quincy Point, and carried to the customary rendezvous off Great Hill; while the yachts were getting into line a lunch was partaken of through the kindness of Mr. Brackett. About 2.30 the signal was given and the second-class started under full breeze, there being none present in the first-class. A few minutes later another signal was given and the third-class started.

After the boats were well started the steam yacht Gulnare got under way and followed them around the course, arriving back at her moorings in season to take the time of the yachts as they sped across the line. The Amy and the Thisbe of the second-class had a very pretty contest, both boats being quite evenly matched and well handled. The Amy, however, notwithstanding a slight accident to her gaff at the start, proved the victor.

The following is the summary of the races:

Name and Owner.	Length. FT. IN.	Actual Time. H. M. S.	Corrected Time. H. M. S.
SECOND CLASS.
Amy, E. W. Baxter,	21 06	1 20 18	0 53 40
Thisbe, S. A. Freeman,	21 10	1 20 30	0 54 12
Joker, George Coffin,	20 05	1 24 45	0 57 02
David Crockett, Putman,	21 08	1 26 30	1 00 02
Herald, W. B. Smith,	20 09	1 28 44	1 01 22
Niobe, L. M. Clark,	00 00	1 24 50	0 00 00
Wildfire, H. A. Keith,	18 02	Not taken.
THIRD CLASS.
Dandelion, C. F. Adams, 3d	17 05	1 17 25	0 51 52
Zip, Geo. W. Morton,	16 09	1 29 15	1 02 58
Flora Lee, S. A. Freeman,	17 03	Not taken

By the result of this regatta both the Amy and the Dandelion have won once for the championship in their respective classes. Second prizes, for Wednesday's regatta only, were awarded to the Thisbe and the Zip. The second championship regatta will be sailed on Friday, July 21.

Weymouth Items.

The venerable and widely known resident of East Weymouth, Dea. Alvah Raymond, died of Bright's disease of the kidneys, on Thursday, June 15th, aged 83 years, 2 months and 27 days. Mr. Raymond was born in Middleboro in 1799. His funeral took place on Sunday; prayers were offered at 1 P. M., after which public services were held at the Orthodox Church, which was filled to repletion. A high tribute was paid to his moral and christian life, as he was universally respected and beloved. The singing was finely rendered by a quartette. The floral offerings from the different organizations with which the deceased was connected was very profuse. A large cross of red and white pinks from the South Shore Commandery, K. T.; a floral Bible from Orphans Hope Lodge; sheaf of ripe wheat and sickle from Delta Lodge, F. and A. M., together with many other offerings. At the cemetery the impressive burial service of the Masonic Order was performed. Delegations from Old Colony Lodge, F. and A. M., of Hingham; Delta Lodge of Odd Fellows, numbering about one hundred and eighty men; South Shore Commandry, Knight Templars; the Old Colony Commandry, K. T., headed by the Weymouth Brass Band, were present.

Mr. N. A. Thayer, after many years of suffering, died in Charlestown, Friday, June 16th, aged 53 years. He was born in Randolph, and when about twenty-one years old he became a resident of Weymouth. At the commencement of the rebellion he enlisted in the 12th Mass. Regiment. After nearly one year of service he was taken sick, discharged, and sent home, and after sufficiently recovering he again enlisted in the Mass. 24th, and remained with them during the war. For the last five years of his life he has been a cripple, having lost entirely the use of both legs. His remains were deposited in the Mount Hope Cemetery. He leaves a widow and one daughter.

All disputes are now settled in regards the boundry lines on the lower portion of Washington street, as surveyors have been employed and firmly set the granite posts, and now many of the front fences must be moved.

On Saturday, the 17th, nearly all of the stores and places of business closed at 10 A. M.

An Ex-Minister Divorced.

The following divorce case we copy from the Boston Herald, the parties being well known in this town, having been residents here.

ST. LOUIS, MO., June 16, 1882. About a year ago James Elliot Hall, then in the marble monument business here, was quite a prominent figure. His name and person seemed to be the nucleus about which centred a series of social scandals, in which a young and fascinating widow was also mixed up. Now Mr. Hall was a married man and an ex-Congregational minister, and a church committee of wealthy and aristocratic folks undertook to investigate the matter. There was a former marriage, also a divorce, which seemed somewhat crooked, and doubt of the validity of the divorce, said to have been procured in a western state, led Mrs. Hall No. 2, formerly Miss Mary J. Hardwick, to leave him and return to her friends in Massachusetts. To secure an absolute divorce from this lady, Mr. Hall filed a suit some time ago. Mr. Hall left St. Louis several months since, retiring from the marble monument business here and engaging in the banking business at Warsaw, Benton county. His petition was sworn before Judge Chapman of the Benton county court. He was married to Mrs. Hall No 2, née Mary J. Hardwick, at Toledo. One child, Mary, was born of the union, now two and one half years old. Mrs. Hall was served with a copy of the writ at Boston, by the sheriff of Suffolk county. She was not anxious to contest the case, but an answer was filed in her behalf, alleging that she did not leave Mr. Hall without reasonable cause; there was very good cause for removing from him and from St. Louis. The lady, however, was anxious to have the absolute care and permanent control of her child, and it was for this that she was represented in court here. The case came up to-day, and Mr. Hall was placed on the stand to testify in his own behalf. He said that Mrs. Hall No. 2 had acted under the direct influence of her brother in leaving him. Samuel H. Leathe and E. G. Obear testified to the good character of the ex-minister and marble merchant, and the court granted him a decree, giving the absolute custody of the child to Mrs. Hall, whose family is amply able to provide for it.

Washington Letter.

WASHINGTON, June 20, 1882.

This promises to be a very busy week in Congress. The intensely warm weather of the past three days has created a longing among our legislators, for green fields, groves, and the fresh salt air of the beach, and every effort will be made to complete indispensible legislation in order to adjourn at the earliest possible moment. To-day the House bill extending the National bank charters will be laid before the Senate and an effort will be made to press it to a final note. Next, it is thought, the Republicans will endeavor to push through the Senate bill for the admission of Dakota as a state, but there will be great opposition on the part of the Democrats to this measure, and it is doubtful if it can be carried through. The Legislative, Executive, and Judicial appropriation bills and the general deficiency bill are still in the hands of the Senate appropriations committee but are expected to be taken up before the end of the week, and, when they come before the House, they will have priority over all other business.

It is not now expected that anything will be done with the Bankruptcy bill during the present session of Congress, and the friends of the measure have decided not to urge its consideration before next winter.

There is, on the Senate calendar, a bill for the better protection of the immigrants. Also a bill to enlarge the scope of the Agricultural Bureau and to increase its dignity by making its chief a cabinet officer. It is probable that the tub will be thrown to the immigrants before taffy is dispensed to the granger.

Senator Maxey will to-day urge the payment of nearly half a million due to southern mail contractors since 1860, before a wall of fire was established between them and Uncle Sam's pay office.

Senator Pendleton will thunder earnestly, but with trivial effect, against assessing Government clerks for political campaign purposes. The above is, as nearly as can be predicted, what the Senate will do in the "fierce light" during the week, but it will hold more than one secret, or Executive session, when the President's nominations for the tariff commission will be measured, weighed, and probably found wanting in some of its members.

THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

Bills to build a new Congressional Library, to reduce Internal Revenue taxation, to redeem the silver trade dollar at its face value, by the Treasury, in order to withdraw this unhandy coin from circulation, and various appropriation bills will be taken up in the House this week.

President Arthur is not going to Long Branch as has been extensively advertised by the real estate speculators. The son of the President, Mr. Allen Arthur, has arrived at the White House, Miss Nellie Arthur, his daughter is expected this week from Albany. The President's cottage at Soldiers Home is being refitted for the family, and it is expected that they will remove there the latter part of this week. The President will not leave Washington until after the adjournment of Congress.

The National Post Office building is draped in black cambric in honor of the memory of ex-Governor Dennison of Ohio who was formerly Post Master General. It has been only a few days since the black drapery, hung in honor of ex-Post Master General Maynard of Tennessee, was removed. On the day of the funeral of an ex-Cabinet Officer, though it may occur hundreds of miles from Washington, the Department of which he once had charge is closed, and hundreds of Government clerks celebrate his memory by picnics, excursions, and general conduct that is the reverse of lugubrious. It is quite common for the clerks to calculate the number and time of their prospective holidays by rules familiar to life insurance agents, and contingent on the death of a Cabinet officer.

ADAMS.

Neponset Bridge.

To the Publishers of the Quincy Patriot:

I see by the report of the Road Commissioners, recently published in the PATRIOT, that they recommend replacing several hundred feet of the bridge with solid filling. Nearly thirty years ago the late Josiah Quincy, who was a very practical man, recommended the same thing, and applied to the Legislature for permission to do it; but objection was at first made by some property holders at Milton Lower Falls, on account of the supposed interference with navigation, but on the testimony of Mr. George Clapp and others, who had experience in navigating the river, that the tendency would be to increase the current and thus be beneficial, the objection was withdrawn. At that time opposition to this plan also came from an unexpected quarter; some citizens of Braintree and Randolph said it was a plan of Mr. Quincy, (who was at that time treasurer of Neponset Bridge Corporation,) to make expense, and keep the toll on the bridge. As soon as Mr. Quincy heard of this he withdrew at once, and said it was no particular benefit to him, he thought he was working for the public good.

At that time there was a large gravel bank near the bridge, some twenty feet or more high, on the ground now occupied by the Atlantic House and other buildings. It could, and probably would have been filled at that time at a much less expense than at present, but for the unreasonable opposition from other towns.

H. W. B.

District Court, Quincy.

The following cases have been disposed of since our last issue:

John Trainor, of West Quincy, for keeping a liquor nuisance. Found guilty and fined $50 and costs, which he promptly paid.

T. F. Linch, of Randolph, for being drunk. Discharged.

RUSTICATING. We received this week from a beach correspondent notice of the arrivals of Messrs. John Shaw and George Russell of Quincy, at Mears' Beach. A few weeks rustication at this beautiful spot will so restore them that upon their return they will once more we able to attend to former occupations more efficiently.

☞ The old ornamental trees on the public library lot need trimming, and this is the proper month for the work. Some limbs are broken and are hanging by the bark, others are dead, and need to be sawed off; some limbs should be cut out, etc. The large tulip tree is beginning to blossom and looks beautifully.

☞ The public schools in this town will close on Thursday next for a long summer vacation.

For the Patriot.

An Open Letter.

To the School Committee of Quincy:

SIRS:—Having heard through various channels, but all emanating from the same source, deceptive reports with reference to the letting of the contract for the extension of the Willard Schoolhouse, I feel justified in making a public reply.

On the first day of January last, Mr. Geo. L. Miller requested me to devise some plan of enlarging the schoolhouse, with an approximate estimate of the cost. I made a rough ground-plan, which the committee approved, and my rough estimate of the cost was forty-five hundred dollars. The committee went to the March meeting with a request for an appropriation of six thousand dollars, stating that they would want a cellar under the new part, and some other improvements, and the money was voted. About the first of May I was told to make working plans and specifications, including cellar and an additional room on the second floor, and folding doors to connect the school-rooms on both floors. Also, the ventilating arrangements in the windows in each new school-room.

The plans were advertised in the QUINCY PATRIOT, May 6, for bids to be received up to 5 P. M., of Saturday, May 20th. On the latter date I sent in my bid, which was, including the cellar, the extra room, the folding doors and ventilating arrangements,—none of which were thought of in my rough estimate,—fifty-five hundred dollars.

A few days afterward Mr. Miller, and at another time Mr. Marsh, approached me with a request for an explanation of the difference between my former and latter figures, and accusing me of taking advantage of the fact that no one bid for the job except myself. I explained, giving the above facts, and the advance in the cost of materials and labor, as the cause of the difference. During the two weeks in which bids were to be received I neither saw nor had communication with any of the committee, nor the Superintendent of Schools, and it is not likely that I could know how many were bidding. Nevertheless, the story went round that because of no competition I had raised my figures a thousand dollars. My bid was rejected and the job given to another who, perhaps, has a better right. Perhaps, when accused of unfairness, I did not manifest sufficient humility to so potent a power as the School Committee; but the citizens can judge of the ground of the charge by the above facts; and the report, (if we ever get the right of it,) of how much has been saved to the town by the manipulation. It looks to me like one of those queer doings which Mr. H. H. Faxon spoke of in the adjourned March meeting.

Yours, &c.,

JONAS SHACKLEY.

QUINCY, June 20th, 1882.

Base Ball.

On Saturday last the Adams Academy base ball nine went to Southboro, and defeated the St. Marks' nine. Few errors were made on either side, and the game was close and exciting throughout. The pitching of Chamberlain and the catching of Robinson and Young, were the features of the game. The score was as follows:

TARRANT'S SELTZER APERIENT

The King of the Body is the brain; the stomach its main support; the nerves its messengers; the bowels, the kidneys and the pores, its safeguards. Indigestion creates a violent revolt among these attaches of the regal organ, and to bring them back to their duty, there is nothing like the regulating, purifying, invigorating, cooling operation of TARRANT'S SELTZER APERIENT. It renovates the system and restores to health both the body and the mind.

The Harris Letter.

Hon. Benjamin W. Harris has furnished for publication the following letter, which he has written to Professor William Everett of Quincy:

WASHINGTON, June 15, 1882.

Dear Sir—I notice in the Boston papers that at the recent meeting of the Civil Service Reform Association of Quincy you made a speech in which you charged upon me, as a grave political sin, that I advocated the appointment of Mr. Worthington as Collector of the Port of Boston. If the papers report you correctly, you declared your opinion that for this alleged act I was unworthy of public confidence. Now, sir, while I have no apologies to make for any past public act of mine, I am unwilling to remain silent when gentlemen holding high social position like yourself misrepresent me or give false charges the weight of their public indorsement. Believing that you would not willingly misrepresent any man or act yourself on a falsehood, I therefore give you the facts that you may at least intelligently condemn my conduct, if such shall be your inclination.

Weeks before any nomination for Collector was made, as was thought to be my duty as the oldest member of the House from Massachusetts in continuous service, I called a meeting of the Massachusetts delegation to consider what recommendations, if any, it would be proper for us to make to the President in relation to Federal appointments for Massachusetts. The Senators were invited and honored that meeting by their presence. At that time there was no other known candidate for Collector except Mr. Beard. Mr. Worthington was understood to be a possible candidate for the office of Surveyor, and it was not then intimated that he desired and would accept the office of Collector.

The meeting was almost unanimous in favor of the appointment of Mr. Beard, and I was fully in accord with the views of my associates. It was understood that Senator Hoar would, at the proper time, communicate the sentiment of the meeting to the President. The delegation was at that and subsequent meetings much divided upon the subject of the Surveyorship, and no person received a majority of votes. I favored another man, Mr. C. A. Foster, a citizen of Quincy.

The President, as he has a most perfect right to do, saw fit to disregard the views of the Massachusetts delegation, and he nominated Mr. Worthington as Collector. Weeks passed and the nomination was not confirmed. I was told that it was being said in the Senate that nearly all the Republican members of the House from Massachusetts were opposed to the confirmation of Mr. Worthington. This was untrue; speaking now for myself alone, I felt that there was nothing in the character or past record of Mr. Worthington which demanded or justified his rejection by the Senate. I therefore joined with other Republican members from Massachusetts in a letter in which we expressed the opinion that there was no valid reason why Mr. Worthington should not be confirmed. This letter was never used, because the story found contradiction in the free and open expression of opinion on the part of a majority of, if not by all, the Republican members of the House from Massachusetts. This is my offending.

Hereafter you will be able to condemn or approve with the facts before you. Knowing you to be a man of high and honorable aims and great personal integrity, I have a right to expect at your hands at least fair criticism. As your speech has been widely circulated, I deem it but right that the real facts should have equal publicity. I have therefore given this letter to the press.

I am yours, with great respect,
B. W. HARRIS.

Civil Service Reform.

To the Publishers of the Patriot:

The interest which the press has been kind enough to show in the action taken by the Civil Service Reform Association of Quincy, and the recent letter of Representative Harris, may be sufficient excuse for asking for a short space in your columns. Without undertaking in the least to answer a letter addressed to Dr. Everett, it seems worth while to say at once that the action of the Quincy Association was not taken upon any wrong understanding as to the facts of the case. It was not supposed that Mr. Harris had "advocated the appointment" of Collector Worthington, in the sense of urging the President to make it; it was stated that he had done precisely what he has now had the frankness to tell us himself that he did do, viz., join in a formal letter, intended to influence members of the Senate, expressing the opinion "that there was no valid reason why Mr. Worthington should not be confirmed." It is on this precise point that issue is taken with Mr. Harris by some reformers of the second district. They think that there was every reason why Mr. Worthington, however unassailable his private character may be, should not have been put into the Boston Custom House to practice, presumably, those doctrines of the spoils system which he has always supported, and Republican platforms have so often condemned. Being compelled to choose between Mr. Harris and reform in the civil service, they choose to make an effort for reform. Seeing no issue between the two great parties, they have thought it worth while to announce thus early their intention of voting for some candidate for Congress who is in sympathy with their principles. They are going to stand up and be counted, whether others join them or not. The process of "educating the people" up to the reform has been going on now for a number of years. There is no better way of continuing it than by letting them see that reformers are willing to come to the practical point of voting for their principles. There has been enough of discussing and resolving, and there an end. Reformers know what they want; let them now ask for it at the polls. When the Quincy Association made up its mind to take political action, the first and most obvious step was to announce its opposition to the re-election of Mr. Harris; doubtless he himself would frankly acknowledge that he does not believe in reform as reformers understand it, and that he cannot be expected to favor it. At any rate, his support of the nomination of Mr. Worthington has been taken as such an acknowledgement. This seems to be a fair issue to take, and it is to be hoped that reformers will not allow it to be obscured by being drawn into any controversy as to Mr. Harris past record. As to his many years of service, that surely is an argument in his favor in the minds of those who wish to get rid of the pernicious theory of rotation in office. It has been suggested that it is not fair to single out Mr. Harris to oppose on account of an action in which he was joined by other representatives. A pretty obvious reason why the Quincy Association should single him out is that Quincy lies in the second district. Whether other representatives will receive the support of reformers in their respective districts, should they be candidates for re-election, will be seen in good season.

J. QUINCY, JR.

Quincy, June 19, 1882.

By request we copy the following paragraphs from the Daily Evening Traveller of Monday last:

"Dr. William Everett, of Quincy, has written a letter in reply to the letter of Congressman Harris. He substantially, though by indirection, admits the injustice which he did Mr. Harris in originally representing him as an advocate of the appointment of Collector Worthington, but he altogether omits to make any apology for the misrepresentation. This, perhaps, was hardly to be expected. Public men, from Presidents down to postmasters, have no rights which the professional reformer is bound to respect."

"Dr. Everett's letter has little in it of moment except his awkwardly-made confession of having misrepresented Mr. Harris. He records his valuable but somewhat lonesome opinion that the issue of civil service reform is the most vital now before the country, and intimates that the two great parties must go to the "demnition bow-wows" unless the select company of citizens with whom he has the honor to train, can have their way about it. The two great parties have grown quite used to these modest claims, and tremble at all such dire threats of destruction about as much as England used to do over the fulminations of the three tailors of Tooley street."

"Dr. Everett is good enough to say that in 1862 the only question about a Congressman was, Does he favor a vigorous prosecution of the war? while in 1882, he says, the only query is, Does he favor immediate and radical reform? This is interesting, but it leaves an important hiatus to be filled up by the imagination. What were the test questions between those dates, with Dr. Everett? Take the year 1872, which is a half-way date between the two he mentions. Where was the Professor, who now undertakes to lay down the law as one of the better stripe of Republicans, in 1872? If we are not mistaken he was following the banners of Bourbonisms to the funeral of Greeley in that year, and if there had been enough of his kind of "best element" around, there would have been no Republican officials, whether Presidents or Collectors, since that time, to be slandered, libelled and lied about by the "particularly pure" of Quincy or elsewhere."

An Appeal to Stalwarts.

To the Publishers of the Quincy Patriot:

Representative Harris has set a good example to his supporters in writing a letter for the press and meeting the Reformers on their own ground. The people want to hear both sides of the civil service question, and would be glad to have the Stalwarts come forward and meet the arguments of their opponents. Reformers at present have such a monopoly of public argument that it is getting monotonous. They have repeated over and over again their objections to the spoils system: let us hear the other side for variety. There are surely many citizens of this town, who honestly believe in such things as political assessments and the use of offices in the custom house for political purposes, and can give reasons in support of their views. Will not one of them let the people of Quincy hear from him through your columns? A fair discussion between a practical Stalwart and a doctrinaire Reformer might be of interest to your readers.

A TEST CASE. A few weeks ago a German emigrant, a few days after his arrival, died of diphtheria at Lee, Mass. Dr. Wright, a local physician, for 20 years in practice there, who attended him, failed to report to the Lee board of health of the existence of diphtheria, and, on its instigation, the town treasurer had him arrested under the statute covering such cases of neglect. Dr. Wright claims that he notified the chairman of the selectmen, which should satisfy the law, but the board holds that it and not the selectmen is to be notified. In the police court, to-day, Dr. Wright was fined $50 and costs, from which he appealed to the superior court. The case is a test, and creates considerable interest.

HARPER'S MAGAZINE for July is a very strong number. The frontispiece is a portrait of Emerson, engraved by W. B. Closson after the crayon drawing by Samuel Rowse. Apart from its value as the best portrait of Emerson, it is the most remarkable instance ever given of the possibilities of wood-engraving. There is a large number of other engravings, and the editorial departments are full of interesting matter. For sale at Souther's periodical store.

EARS FOR THE MILLION!

FOO CHOO'S BALSAM OF SHARK'S OIL.

Positively Restores the Hearing, and is the Only Absolute Cure for Deafness Known.

This Oil is abstracted from peculiar species of small White Shark, caught in the Yellow Sea, known as Carcharodon Rondeletii. Every Chinese fisherman knows it. Its virtues as a restorative of hearing were discovered by a Buddhist Priest about the year 1410. Its cures were so numerous and many so seemingly miraculous, that the remedy was officially proclaimed over the entire Empire. Its use became so universal that for over 300 years no Deafness has existed among the Chinese people. Sent, charges prepaid, to any address at $1.00 per bottle.

Hear What the Deaf Say!

It has performed a miracle in my case.

I have no unearthly noises in my head and hear much better.

I have been greatly benefited.

My deafness helped a great deal—think another bottle will cure me.

"Its virtues are unquestionable and its curative character absolute, as the writer can personally testify, both from experience and observation. Write at once to HAYLOCK & JENNEY, 7 Dey street, New York, enclosing $1, and you will receive by return a remedy that will enable you to hear like anybody else, and whose curative effects will be permanent. You will never regret doing so."—Editor of Mercantile Review.

The Quincy Patriot.

SATURDAY, JUNE 24, 1882.

For the Patriot.

Remembrance.

On the rock-bound shores of Cape Ann
The wild waves beat and moan,
Across the dim low line of coast,
White breakers flash in foam,
Dashing in spray o'er Norman's Woe,
Hurrying on their way,
To blend with blue waves rippling
Over the distant bay.

When the storm-king holds his revels
Over the ocean's breast,
He carries in his grim embrace,
Many to dreamless rest.
Within his coral caves he hides
The brave, the young, the fair,
And the seaweeds wrap them closely,
Folding them silent there.

Within my heart an absent face
Will e'er be held so deep,
That only the blue waves' ripple
Can its memory rouse from sleep.
On the stormy waves of life's ocean;
You've drifted from my side,
Out, out from my life forever,
On the blue sea's restless tide.

Gray are the rocks at evening,
Where wild waves dash and roar,
Could I but dream that the future
Would bring thee back once more.
O, Gray are the rocks at evening,
But the wild waves whisper so,
Could I have held thee against the world,
Would I have let thee go?

O, waves of the blue old ocean,
Sweeping over the main,
Go bear on your heaving bosom,
Words of my sad refrain,
Scatter them far o'er the billows,
The beautiful future sweet,
Will bring the golden harvest,
Of love in its trust complete.

Farm and Garden.

To Destroy Squash Bugs.

The time for the annual visit of these garden pests approaches, and we find various remedies offered. The following seems certainly a very humane method of getting rid of them, worthy the leader of an association for prevention of cruelty to animals. To give opium or morphine, and allow them to pass to that bourne whence no traveler returns, in the delightful and dreamy ecstacy thus produced, is worthy of the most advanced civilization of the age. If however, this mode should not prove satisfactory, the following remedy will prove effectual in destroying them.

Take a quantity of poppy leaves, stalks, bulbs, etc., or any part of poppies and steep in water either cold or hot, and if poppies are not to be had, take a small quantity of opium and dissolve it in water. This liquid applied with an exceeding fine sprinkle to the vines once or perhaps twice, will cause the bugs to leave the plants, never to return. The same liquid applied with a squirt-gun to apple trees, effectually prevents the ravage of the apple-tree worm. An ounce of opium would probably be sufficient for a large orchard.

Fight the Weeds.

The season has come forward so late that the time between planting and mowing will be so short that the cultivation of crops and the killing of weeds will have to be performed in the shortest time possible. Many farmers do not seem to know how to do this. The Massachusetts Ploughman says, the best way is to begin to cultivate as soon as the farmer can see the crop, and continue to go over the ground as often as the weeds make their appearance above ground. By so doing he is able to do most of the work with a horse, and thus do it very rapid.

No work on the farm pays for prompt action as well as the cultivation of crops to kill weeds. It pays in two ways. First by saving of labor, and second, by increasing the crop. But few operations on the farm cause more loss by delay than the cultivation of hoed crops.

☞ A writer in the Fruit Recorder says he has discovered from practice that sulphur, one ounce to a gallon of water, and sprinkled or syringed over grape vines, just at nightfall, will destroy insects and mildew and leave no bad show afterward. When sifted as a powder it has an unpleasant and oftentimes injurious effect, although it is acknowledged a specific manure of value, even when applied broadcast upon the soil.

☞ A bull calf three months old, was sold two weeks ago, in New York, for $1,800.

Anecdotes.

Fogg went into a carpet store the other day. He was shown several patterns, but none seemed to satisfy his taste, exactly until the dealer unrolled a beautiful Brussels, saying, "There is a carpet that will suit you. That carpet is hard to beat."

Fogg said he didn't want it if that was the case, and walked out, leaving the dealer a sadder but a wiser man.

"O, I suppose he loves Sarah, and would be glad to marry her," she was saying to the woman in the post-office corridor the other day; "but I dunno."

"Isn't he a nice young man?" asked the other.

"Well, he's nice enough, but very reckless with his money. At Christmas time he made us a present of a French clock for the parlor, and there is not one of us in the house can speak a word of French.

A little girl of eight years was overheard saying to her brother: "After her divorce mamma is going to marry the gentleman who gives us candy." The little boy began weeping.

"What is the matter, Tommy?" asked a friend of the family, thinking the child's heart was touched by the prospect of these domestic infelicities and the loss of his own father.

"Boo-hoo, boo-hoo," says Tommy; "he won't give us any more candy then."

Gray hairs prevented, dandruff removed, the scalp cleansed, and the hair made to grow thick by the use of Hall's Vegetable Sicilian Hair Renewer.

Rich Phosphates of Wheat solution are easily assimilated. In Wheat Bitters is the only practical way to get them. Read adv't carefully.

Temperance.

[Furnished for publication by the W. C. T. Union.]

Diseases from Alcohol.

Alcohol is the essence of decay. In all these fermented drinks there is decaying vegetable matter, and we find from long observation, that this is not safe either to drink or to breathe. It is no wonder that the man who takes it continually shows signs of decay and disease.

Let us see on the other hand, what we may hope for if we do not drink. Sir Henry Monroe of Hull, England, says that for seven years he had much experience in doctoring persons who were total abstainers. He found they did not suffer nearly so much sickness as moderate drinkers, and that, when sick, they were soon well again. In many cases they would have died if they had not been total abstainers. A vast number of people are killed outright every year by taking alcoholic liquor. A vast number more are killed by them indirectly. What was once said of the French army in Egypt is true every where, and with other diseases also. "Those who indulge in intemperate habits and are attacked by fevers, die." They are also more liable to be attacked. The exact number of those who die in this country every year from these causes is not known. The common estimate is sixty thousand. It is difficult to find the true number, because in individual cases people do not always know the cause of disease.

Lord, aid us with thy heavenly grace,
Our truest bliss to find;
In mercy view our erring race,
So feeble and so blind.

Fashion Notes.

Black stockings are worn with all kinds of dresses, even white and tinted ones.

Street costumes and walking suits should never be made with panier draperies.

The latest novelty in nun's veiling is brocaded in imitation of embroidered China crape.

Squares of embroidered mull or black grenadine trimmed with Spanish lace are among new neckerchiefs.

The Mother Hubbard and Kate Greenaway styles for little girls' overdresses and cloaks grow more in favor every day.

The new Worth redingote is in shape much like a greatcoat, being perfectly straight, open below the vest, and with skirts like those of a gentiman's coat.

The long, tight redingote worn over a silk or wool skirt having no trimming but a pleated flounce at the bottom, is much worn by leading society women.

The best dress-makers still make the foundation skirt very narrow and straight gored, clasping the figure like a sheath. The superimposed draperies are then made full according to fancy.

Colored straw hats are the rule—dark blue, red, green, brown, etc., in solid color, and there are many that have a plaided effect, two or more colors being combined in the braid.

The old-fashioned Heligolander of forty years ago is revived. It is a silk bonnet or hood shirred on whalebone or splits of alternate long and short lengths, so as to give the bonnet the appearance of a half opened folding gig-top.

This and That.

☞ Bees think there is no place like comb.

☞ The absent-minded hen is a great trouble to herself. She forgets where she laid her last egg.

☞ The following sentence of only thirty-four letters contains all the letters in the alphabet: "John quickly extemporized five tow bags."

☞ Fortune is said to knock once at every man's door. Not only that, but fortune seems to climb into the windows of some folks and stay with them.

☞ A millionaire, on going into the college library, saw a volume labeled Virgilii Opera. Turning to his friend he said: "By Jove, Tom, I never knew Virgil wrote music."

☞ A handful of ashes from the last fire kindled in Emerson's own room, and some of the earth from his favorite garden, were used by the clergyman in the committal service at the grave.

☞ A man who detected a piece of bark in his sausage, visited the butcher's shop to know what had become of the dog. The butcher was so affected that he could give him only a part of the tale.

☞ Remarkable phenomenon: "A tipsy Bostonian, who was arrested while making vain efforts to clutch at a barber's pole, exclaimed, as the policeman drifted him in the direction of the station house: "Stransh, never saw'r 'roar borealish s'near before."

☞ The most absent-minded man was not the man who hunted for his pipe when it was between his teeth, nor the man who threw his hat out of the window and tried to hang his cigar on a peg; no! but the man who put his umbrella to bed and went and stood behind the door.

☞ After a Chicago "beat" had got trusted at every saloon in town, the landlords of a western mining town held a consultation and concluded to shoot him. The following words appeared over his last resting place:—"Death Loves a Mining Shark."

☞ A little girl once said that she would be very glad to go to Heaven, because they had plenty of preserves there. On being cross-examined, she took down her catechism and triumphantly read; "Why ought the saints to love God?" Answer: "Because he makes preserves and keeps them."

Walnut Leaf Hair Restorer.

It is entirely different from all others. It is as clear as water, and, as its name indicates, is a perfect Vegetable Hair Restorer. It will immediately free the head from all dandruff, restore grey hair to its natural color, and produce a new growth where it has fallen off. It does not in any manner affect the health, which Sulphur, Sugar of Lead, and Nitrate of Silver preparations have done. It will change light or faded hair in a few days to a beautiful glossy brown. Ask your druggist for it. Each bottle is warranted. Chas. N. Crittenton, New York, and Geo. C. Goodwin & Co., Boston, wholesale agts. S 24po

Farmers' Wives.

It is an evident fact that farmers' wives are afflicted with many diseases which are the result of overwork. They are constantly on one ceaseless routine of toil from daylight at morning until late at night. No change, no relaxation, no rest! Farmers should note this fact, and be forewarned before it is too late. It is astonishing what an amount of labor the wives of farmers perform. Many of them get up and have breakfast ready before their husbands are out of bed. Then it is work, work, work, until near midnight, their minds during the time being constantly occupied with their duties, and with thinking of how the food is to be supplied, when the washing and ironing is to be done, when time can be spared to scrub the floor, how the children are to be clothed and kept tidy, and innumerable other things not necessary to mention, all of which combine to overwork and break down the strongest woman in the land. In no case is it safe to be continuously thinking upon any one thing, and in cases where the brain has been weakened by too great a strain upon it, thereby producing insanity, epilepsy, vertigo, hysterics, female weakness, general debility, and a multitude of other diseases, the remedy is Rest and a few bottles of Dr. S. A. Richmond & Co.'s Samaritan Nervine. It acts directly upon the nervous centres and invigorates and strengthens the whole system. Many ladies have refrained from using Samaritan Nervine on account of an existing prejudice against advertised medicines. Let us ask a question: Are you prejudiced against sewing machines because you saw them advertised, or can you doubt the ingenuity and skill required in their invention? Again, would you refuse to insure your house because the company advertised that it had paid millions of dollars in losses and had yet a capital of several millions left? Do such advertisements shake your confidence and create prejudice? Then why refuse to credit the testimony of those who have found Samaritan Nervine to be all that is claimed for it in overcoming those ailments peculiar to your sex? The following statement speaks for itself:

Fairfield, Lenawee Co., Mich., }
April 25, 1881. }

Dr. Richmond—Dear Sir: This is to certify that my wife had fits for thirty-five years. They would last her for about one hour and sometimes longer. I happened to hear of your medicine, and sent for some of it. She had no more fits after she took the first dose. She is now permanently cured, and her health is a great deal better than it has been for twenty years or more. You are entirely at liberty to use her picture and this testimonial in any manner which you please, and may sign my name to it. We owe you this much at least for what you have done for her.

Yours truly, HENRY CLARK.

Mortgagee's Sale of Real Estate,

IN WOLLASTON, QUINCY.

BY Virtue of and pursuant to the power of sale contained in a certain Mortgage Deed given by Charles F. Bates and Mary H. Bates, his wife, of Quincy, in the County of Norfolk and Commonwealth of Massachusetts, under the name of Charles F. Bates and Mary H. Bates, his wife, to William H. McNeil, Elisha Brimhall and Benjamin Snow, receivers of the Lancaster Savings Bank, of Lancaster, dated Sept 16th, A. D. 1876, and recorded with Norfolk Deeds, Lib. 483, Fol. 173, and by said Receivers of the Lancaster Savings Bank assigned to the Quincy Mutual Fire Insurance Company, of Quincy, in the County of Norfolk and said Commonwealth, by deed of assignment, dated October 27th, A. D. 1877, and recorded with Norfolk Deeds, November 2d, 1877, Lib. 494, Fol. 231, for breach of the conditions of said mortgage, and for the purpose of foreclosing the same, will be sold at Public Auction, on the premises hereinafter described, (being the premises described in said Mortgage) on MONDAY, the 3d day of July, A. D. 1882, at four o'clock in the afternoon, all and singular the premises conveyed by said mortgage deed, and therein described as follows, to wit:

A certain parcel of land with the buildings thereon, situated in that part of Quincy called Wollaston, being one-half of Lot six, in Block two, Section one, of the lands of Wollaston Land Associates, as shown on a plan of said section drawn by D. Granger & Son, and recorded with Norfolk Deeds at end of Book 393, and bounded southwesterly on Winthrop avenue; southeasterly on Central avenue, seventy-five feet; northeasterly on lot seven in said Block, seventy-five feet; and northwesterly on the remaining portion of said lot six, seventy-five feet. Containing five thousand six hundred and twenty-five square feet; subject to the restrictions contained in the deeds of the Wollaston Land Associates, being the same premises conveyed to Mary H. Bates by deed from John T. Pope of even date herewith.

Conditions made known at time of sale.

QUINCY M. F. INS. CO.
Assignee of said Mortgage.
ISRAEL W. MUNROE, Treasurer.

SAMARITAN

NERVINE

SAMARITAN NERVINE

Cures Epileptic Fits, Spasms, Convulsions, St. Vitus Dance, Vertigo, Hysterics, Insanity, Apoplexy, Paralysis, Rheumatism, Neuralgia and all Nervous Diseases. This infallible remedy will positively eradicate every species of Nervous Derangement, and drive them away from whence they came, never to return again. It utterly destroys the germs of disease, by neutralizing the hereditary taint or poison in the system, and thoroughly eradicates the disease, and utterly destroys the cause.

SAMARITAN NERVINE

Cures Female Weakness, General Debility, Leucorrhœa or Whites, Painful Menstruation, Ulceration of the Uterus, Internal Heat, Gravel, Inflammation of the Bladder, Irritability of the Bladder. For Wakefulness at Night there is no better remedy. During the change of life no female should be without it. It quiets the Nervous system and gives rest, comfort and nature's sweet sleep.

SAMARITAN NERVINE

Cures Alcoholism, Drunkenness and the habit of Opium Eating. These degrading habits are by far the worst evils that have ever befallen suffering humanity. Thousands die annually from these noxious drugs. The drunkard drinks liquor not because he likes it, but for the pleasure of drinking and treating his friends, little thinking that he is on his road to ruin. Like the Opium Eater, he first uses the drug in small quantities as a harmless antidote. The soothing influence of the drug takes strong hold upon its victim, leading him on to his own destruction. The habits of Opium Eating and Liquor Drinking are precisely what eating is to alimentiveness, as over eating first inflames the stomach, which redoubles its cravings until it paralyzes both the stomach and appetite. So every drink of liquor or dose of opium, instead of satisfying, only adds to its fierce fires, until it consumes the vital force and then itself. Like the glutionous tape-worm, it cries, "Give, give, give!" but never enough until its own rapacity devours itself. Samaritan Nervine gives instant relief in all such cases. It produces sleep, quiets the nerves, builds up the nervous system, and restores body and mind to a healthy condition.

SAMARITAN NERVINE

Cures Nervous Dyspepsia, Palpitation of the Heart, Asthma, Bronchitis, Scrofula, Syphilis, diseases of the Kidneys, and all diseases of the urinary organs. Nervous debility, caused by the indiscretions of youth, permanently cured by this invaluable remedy. To you young, middle-aged and old men, who are covering your sufferings as with a mantle, by silence, look up, you can be saved by timely efforts, and make ornaments to society, and jewels in the crown of your Maker, if you will. Do not keep this a secret longer, until it saps your vitals, and destroys both body and soul. If you are thus afflicted, take DR. RICHMOND'S Samaritan Nervine. It will restore your shattered nerves, arrest premature decay, impart tone and energy to the whole system.

By Universal Accord,

AYER'S CATHARTIC PILLS are the best of all purgatives for family use. They are the product of long, laborious, and successful chemical investigation, and their extensive use, by physicians in their practice, and by all civilized nations, proves them the best and most effectual purgative Pill that medical science can devise. Being purely vegetable no harm can arise from their use, and being sugar-coated, they are pleasant to take. In intrinsic value and curative powers no other Pills can be compared with them; and every person, knowing their virtues, will employ them, when needed. They keep the system in perfect order, and maintain in healthy action the whole machinery of life. Mild, searching and effectual, they are especially adapted to the needs of the digestive apparatus, derangements of which they prevent and cure, if timely taken. They are the best and safest physic to employ for children and weakened constitutions, where a mild but effectual cathartic is required.

For sale by all druggists.
